

Price, Five Cents.

The National Sin
of
Literary Piracy

BY

HENRY VAN DYKE, D. D.

NEW YORK

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

1888

11 251893

M.A.

POPULAR BOOKS IN PAPER

(YELLOW COVERS.)

Frank R. Stockton	The Christmas Wreck, and other Stories..	50
	The Lady, or the Tiger? and other Stories.	50
George W. Cable	Rudder Grange.....	60
	Dr. Sevier.....	50
Brander Matthews	Old Creole Days. In two parts; each complete	30
	A Secret of the Sea, and other Stories.....	50
Robert Grant	The Last Meeting.....	50
Marion Harland	Face to Face.....	50
A. A. Hayes	Judith. A Chronicle of Old Virginia.....	50
J. T. Wheelwright	The Jesuit's Ring. A Romance of Mt. Desert	50
R. L. Stevenson	A Child of the Century.....	50
	Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde..	25
	Kidnapped.....	50
	The Merry Men, and other Tales and Fables..	35
	New Arabian Nights.....	30
	The Dynamiter.....	30
Mrs. F. H. Burnett	That Lass O'Lowries.....	50
	Earlier Stories; Lindsey's Luck.....	30
	Pretty Polly Pemberton.....	40
	Kathleen.....	40
	Theo.....	30
	Miss Crespigny.....	30
Brander Matthews	In Partnership: Studies in Story-telling..	50
H. C. Bunner	An Echo of Passion.....	50
G. P. Lathrop	Newport; a Novel.....	50
	In the Distance.....	50
J. S. of Dale	Guerndale; an Old Story.....	50
Saxe-Holm Stories	First Series. Second Series. Each complete.	50
Julia Magruder	Across the Chasm. A Novel.....	50
Fitz-James O'Brien	The Diamond Lens, and other Stories.....	50
Andrew Lang	The Mark of Cain.....	25
Andrew Carnegie	An American Four-in-Hand in Britain....	25
	Triumphant Democracy.....	50
W. E. Gladstone	The Irish Question.....	10
Capt. Roland Coffin	The America's Cup. Illustrated.....	50
Charles Marvin	The Russians at the Gates of Herat.....	50
Max O'Rell	John Bull and His Island.....	50
Capt. J. G. Bourke	An Apache Campaign in the Sierra Madre.	50
J. D. J. Kelley	A Desperate Chance.....	50

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, PUBLISHERS,

743 and 745 Broadway, New York.

THE NATIONAL SIN
OF
LITERARY PIRACY

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

---

THE REALITY OF RELIGION.

12mo, $1.00.

"The author has produced a splendid work, written with clearness, cogency, fervor, and eloquence."

—London Literary World.

THE STORY OF THE PSALMS.

12mo, $1.50.

"One of the most stirring and uplifting of religious books. Its life, its ardor, its freshness of feeling, its vividness of narration, are fascinating."—Boston Post.

THE NATIONAL SIN
OF
LITERARY PIRACY

A SERMON

PREACHED BY

HENRY VAN DYKE D.D.
Pastor of the Brick Church in New York

NEW YORK
CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS
1888

COPYRIGHT, 1888, BY
CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

TROW'S
PRINTING AND BOOKBINDING COMPANY,
NEW YORK.

THE NATIONAL SIN OF LITERARY PIRACY.

---

Righteousness exalteth a nation ;
But sin is a reproach to any people.—Prov. xiv. 34.

THE central idea of this text is the moral accountability of nations. Men are responsible for their collective conduct, as well as for their separate action. Governments, states, laws, organized societies, are to be tried by ethical standards. The ultimate question in regard to them is not, what is actual, nor what is expedient, but what is right?

This is the doctrine of the Bible. It has little to say about political economy; but it has much to say about public ethics. Indeed, the one lesson which stands out most clearly from all the histories which are recorded in this book, and especially from the marvellous history of the Jewish people, is that God judges nations, as well as individuals, by their moral qualities, and deals with them along the inflexible lines of righteousness. Prosperity is a reward. Decay is a punishment.

494050

Ms. B. 1. 31944
Title . 93
Journalism

Those tribes and cities and kingdoms which observe the law of truth and justice are blessed; and those which disregard or violate that law are cursed. This is the distinct and solemn significance of the histories of Egypt, and Babylon, and Nineveh, and Samaria, and Jerusalem, as they are unfolded in the Old Testament. And the same truth is declared in the New Testament, when Christ represents all nations as standing before the bar of the Almighty Judge, and when St. John shows us the vision of the scarlet woman sitting upon many waters, which are peoples and multitudes and nations and tongues. These are figures of speech, if you please to call them so, but they are figures which embody an eternal truth. And the truth is this, that corporate righteousness and corporate sin are not legal fictions, but solid realities. There is a Sinai and a Judgment-Day, there is a Law and a Gospel, for every nation.

This is also the doctrine of reason and philosophy. It matters not what theory of the origin of Government you adopt, if you follow it out to its legitimate conclusions, it will bring you face to face with the moral law. If you go back to the old theory of Divine Right, it will force you to admit that "the powers that be" could not have been ordained of God for any other than righteous purposes. If you accept the theory of the Social Contract, you must acknowledge that the quality of that contract depends upon the goodness or badness of the ends for which it has been formed and the means by which it is executed. If you found your theory of the State, as our own is founded, upon the idea of natural rights which are common to all men, and for the protection of which the nation is established, you will have to recognize that, in the last analysis, these natural rights are nothing but moral principles in flesh and blood, and that they can be supported and defended only on the ground of an eternal justice which ordains that every man shall receive that which is his due.

This is also the doctrine of history, which is "philosophy teaching by example." The story of the progress of mankind in modern times is nothing else than a record of the application of ethical ideas to the affairs of nations, the conflict of moral law with blind custom and brute force, the victory of essential right over ancient precedents and legalized iniquities. If I were asked to prove my faith that the condition of the world is improving and civilization is making a real advance, I should not turn to the material triumphs of the age—the general increase of wealth and physical comfort, the mechanical inventions which have multiplied production and facilitated transportation. Railways and steamboats and telegraphs, silver-plated forks and silk hats and chromo-lithographs, and all the stuff which we have accumulated so largely and distributed so widely during the past century, are but gross and mean evidences of progress. It is conceivable that a cruel, vicious, brutal, selfish race should possess all these things and not be lifted by them one step "nearer Godlike state." But the true measure of the development of humanity is to be found in the moral sphere, and chiefly, it seems to me, in three great facts which stand out supreme and radiant: the establishment of International Law, the reformation of the Penal Code, and the abolition of the Slave Trade. These are the grand victories of the age, and they have been won by the brave assertion and strenuous defence of the truth that nations are responsible to the moral law. Hugo Grotius, John Howard, William Wilberforce, and the multitudes of noble men who labored and fought beside them and after them, were simply preachers of immutable righteousness to states and kingdoms.

That which is unjust and cruel and wicked for men to do when they are acting singly, is unjust and cruel and wicked for them to do when they are acting collectively. The number of persons who are engaged in an action does not change its quality. Public iniquity is as bad as private wickedness. Public robbery is nothing but private theft organized and multiplied. The welfare of all peoples, and of the world, depends upon the recognition of the fact that moral principles apply to states as well as to individuals, and that "righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

Now, it is upon this solid ground, which is founded upon God's law and confirmed by human reason, that we shall take our stand, for the consideration of a peculiarity in the conduct of the people of the United States, which has excited attention abroad for many years, and is now becoming a common subject of discussion at home.

The refusal of our country to protect all men equally in the use and enjoyment of the product of their mental labor, the absence of an equitable and universal law of copyright, and the consequent practice of reprinting and selling the books of foreigners without either asking their consent or offering them any payment, has been generally regarded as a question of politics, of economy, of national courtesy. But at bottom, as Mr. Lowell has said, it is a question of right and wrong; and therefore it needs to be separated from the confusions of partisanship and the considerations of self-interest, and brought into contact with the Ten Commandments.

It is altogether idle and irrelevant to talk of "the lonely rancher in Dakota and the humble freedman in the South," and their consuming desire to obtain cheap literature. The question is, how do they propose to gratify that desire, fairly or feloniously? My neighbor's passionate love of light has nothing to do with his right to carry off my candles. The first point to be determined is one of righteousness. And for this we need, not "an olive-branch," which is generally crooked, but a good, straight oaken ruler, to measure and regulate our conduct in accordance with justice.

If we will apply this standard, we shall find out where we are and what we are doing. We shall be able to see that what has been euphoniously called "the present method of uncompensated republication of books" brings us squarely up against the moral law; and that, therefore, the Christian Church, as a "guardian of private and public morals," is not only entitled, but also bound, to take it up, and deal with it soberly and earnestly. It belongs to the department of Applied Ethics, which the Church can never afford to make an optional course. It is a subject in regard to which the pulpit has many reasons for speech, and no apology for silence. The preacher is moving straight along the line of practical Christianity when he invites you to consider the National Sin of Literary Piracy; its nature; its punishment; and its cure.

1. The right of every man to enjoy the fruit of his own toil and the reward of his own industry is universally acknowledged as a foundation-principle of social morality: and nowhere is it more clearly stated, or more strongly enforced, than in the Bible.

"This," says Ruskin, "is the first point to be secured by law, and without this no political advance, no political existence is in any sort possible. Whatever evil, luxury, iniquity may seem to result from it, this is nevertheless the first of all equities; and to the enforcement of this, by law and the police-truncheon, the nation must always primarily set its mind—that the cupboard-door may have a firm lock to it, and no man's dinner be carried off by the mob on its way home from the baker's." Now, one of the forward steps of Christian civilization has been the extension of this moral principle from physical to intellectual labor, and the protection of men in the enjoyment of that which they have produced with their brains, as well as of that which they have made with their hands. And in this there has been not only the recognition of an equitable right, but also a due regard for the welfare of the community. For it is evident that without such protection those who are engaged in the toil of thought, of invention, of discovery, will be placed at an immense disadvantage; they will not be able to support themselves; they will be discouraged and driven by necessity into other kinds of work; and thus the mental activities of the nation will be suppressed by a manifest injustice to those who lead them.

If the man who weaves the cloth for your coat is entitled to his fair wages, is not the man who finds out a better and quicker method of weaving cloth entitled to his wages? If the man who prints and binds the book which you wish to possess has a right to be paid for his labor, has not the man who writes that book a right to be paid for his labor? If you say to the inventor or the author, "You must work for nothing," are you not doing him an injustice, and virtually telling him that he had better stop work altogether?

The moral sense as well as the common sense of mankind has returned an affirmative answer to these questions; and that answer has taken shape in the law of patents and the law of copyright. Take this latter word and turn it around, and you will see exactly what it means. Copyright is the right to copy.

The value of any literary work depends upon the form which it gives to those ideas which belong to the common stock of truth. This form is the result of toil,—toil which is more arduous and exhausting, toil which requires more patience and self-denial, toil which costs a larger outlay of time and money to prepare for it, and a greater wear and tear of vital tissue to execute it, than perhaps any other kind of labor. The disembodied ideas are no man's property; but the embodied ideas, which have been brought into shape and order by the lonely worker in the sweat of his brain, are his own, just as much as the statue carved from the marble is the sculptor's own, just as much as the wheat cultivated in the field is the farmer's own.

Take an illustration. The facts of American history belong to you and me and every man. There they are, recorded in documents, and preserved in traditions. You may go and dig them out, and make what use of them you please. But suppose you say, "That is impossible. I am too busy in making shoes or hats, in building railroads, or in keeping a bank. I have neither the time nor the skill for historical research. If I should undertake it, my business would suffer and my children starve." Well, then, here is a man who takes the time and cultivates the skill. He gives up other occupations, and exhumes the story of your country, and sets it in order, and writes it in a book. Are you so mean that you will take that book from him without paying him for it? Or, again, the materials of fiction are common property. You may sit down to-night and weave your experiences of life and your conceptions of character into a great novel. But suppose you are not quite clever enough for that, and your time of physical rest hangs heavy upon your hands. Here comes a man who has constructed, by patient labor of the imagination, a story which charms and enlivens your leisure, perhaps also instructs and helps you to a more cheerful and useful life. Do you not owe him something? Has he not deserved at least as well of you as the painter who decorates your walls, or the cook who prepares your dinner?

Now, there is no way in which the reward of the author's work can be fairly and firmly secured to him except by giving him the exclusive right (at least for a limited period of time) to publish and sell his own work. This has been admitted by every civilized nation in the world. Public reason, revolving about the great principle of justice, has consolidated itself into laws for the protection of the products of mental labor. The constitution of Germany confers upon the Imperial Government the prerogative of der Schutz des Geistigen Eigenthums—the defence of intellectual property. The law of Great Britain declares that "copyright shall be deemed personal property." The Constitution of the United States says that "Congress shall have power to promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." An early law of Massachusetts defines the principle still more clearly when it asserts that this security "is one of the natural rights of men, there being no property more peculiarly a man's own than that which is produced by the labor of his mind."

But where, then, is the national sin in this matter, since our country recognizes the principle of justice involved and enforces it by a law of copyright? The sin, my brethren, lies in the stupefying fact that ours is the only civilized Christian country on the globe which deliberately and persistently denies to foreigners the same justice which it secures to its own citizens, and declares that the intellectual property of an alien shall be forfeited and confiscated the moment it touches our shore or crosses our border. This nation says to the German, the Frenchman, the Englishman, "You have written a book. We want it, and we propose to take it. You have no rights that we are bound to respect. We shall reprint your work, and mutilate it and sell it, and do as we like with it, and you shall never receive a penny for it."

Observe what this means. It means that a foreigner is hostis—an enemy. This was the avowed theory of the old heathen world, and under its influence piracy became a lawful and profitable industry. "Man, upon the waters, and the shark, in them, had a common right to feed upon what they could subdue." A curious survival of this theory was seen in the last century in France, when there was a law in force by which all the personal property of a stranger dying in that country was confiscated by the king. But to-day its sole relic is the peculiar shame of our own nation, which affirms that, in literature, piracy is honorable, and a foreigner is a foe who deserves no protection and no mercy.

This means, also, that our country is willing to discriminate against a class, and to perpetrate upon the author an injustice which it would not permit to be inflicted upon any other man. For the foreign inventor can protect the products of his genius in America by patenting them; and the foreign traveller, coming to New York, has no fear that the Government will allow anyone who takes a fancy to his overcoat or his portmanteau to walk off with them. But the foreign writer is informed that his property will be brought over here "for the express purpose of being stolen;" brought here without his consent, and against his protest, in order that other men may reap the fruit of his toil and make him no return.

But the meaning of this amazing attitude of our country toward literary property is not yet exhausted. There is something still more marvelous about it. For it means that the United States is determined that, of all its own laboring classes, the intellectual class alone shall be forced to compete, not with the underpaid labor of Europe, but labor which is absolutely not paid at all. First, it makes the foreign writer a pauper within its bounds, and then it says to the native writer, "You shall take your chance with this pauper; and if the bookseller can sell his works cheaper than yours, for all we care, you shall starve."

There is not another country in the world which ventures to take such a position. It is equally absurd and shameful, unjust to others and suicidal to ourselves. And while Germany, and France, and England, and all the enlightened nations are waiting for us to recede from it, and conform to the moral sense of the civilized world, it seems to me the duty of every honest American to confess that literary piracy is an infraction of the commandment which says "Thou shalt not steal," as well as of the commandment which says "Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's."

2. The punishment of a national sin does not have to wait for the day of judgment. It begins at once. And it usually proceeds along the line of the transgression, paying its interest in a currency stamped with its own image and superscription.

One form of our punishment is the perversion of national taste and manners by the vast circulation of foreign books that are both cheap and bad.

When a thief gets into your library, the probabilities are that he will not carry off Hodge's "Theology" or Jay's "Morning Exercises." He will seek diligently for something more to his liking. If you will look over the contents of one of our railway book-stalls, you will see how this same principle works in directing the course of literary piracy. Nine-tenths of the books that are stolen are novels, and nine-tenths of these are novels of a doubtful character. It is no advantage to what is called, by courtesy, our reading public, to have these silly or pernicious tales offered to them for almost nothing. And even if they were unobjectionable from a moral point of view, it would still be unprofitable to have the bulk of our fiction brought to us from abroad. The imagination is the most easily colored of all the mental faculties. The influence of the novel upon the young men and women who read it is subtle, but most potent. The decline of the American spirit in a certain class of our youth; the loss of simplicity and naturalness and independence; the failure of that lawful pride in American institutions and principles which alone can preserve the freedom of our republic; the simian mimicry of English models and the development of that curious species of Anglomaniac of which the male creature only has received a name—all these disagreeable and dangerous symptoms are to be traced chiefly to the influence of commonplace English fiction, which at its best is saturated with feudal superstitions and insular prejudices, and at its worst reflects "as in a looking-glass" the manners and morals of what is called "the Sandringham set." It would be no loss to us if these books cost twenty times as much as they do today. It is one of our punishments that they cost so little that everybody is tempted to read them.

Another form of our punishment is the partial atrophy of our native literature. Some few men and women we have who have been able to live by the pen, eking out the poor returns from their books by the more liberal rewards of our splendid magazines ; there are a few who have supported themselves in intellectual pursuits by inherited wealth, and more who have bravely toiled at the bread-winning tasks of business, of teaching, of professional duty, and snatched from sleep the hours in which they might write something that the world would not willingly let die. But until we remove the discouragements, and give to our writers the same protection which we give to other laborers, how can we hope that a great national literature will rise and flourish in our land ?

That, indeed, would be the crown and consummation of our country. It would touch the names of our lakes and rivers and mountains with the glory of poetry. It would unfold and illuminate our complex, manifold, free, vigorous life in enduring works of fiction. It would express the strenuous activities of our people in forms of native eloquence. It would give us new and grander conceptions of church and state and humanity. It would stimulate and ennoble the national character while it voiced the national aspirations. It would proclaim, in words of imperishable beauty and power, the central truth by which our country lives, that Liberty is not license, but equity secured by law to every man.

For such a literature we have waited a century. Promises and foretastes of it have been given to us by writers whose courage is no less admirable than their genius. But that we are still waiting for the fulness of our hope deferred is one of the punishments of our national sin of literary piracy.

Another form, and decidedly the worst form, in which that sin is visited upon us, is the weakening and degeneration of the popular conscience.

A palpable contradiction between profession and practice is the most demoralizing influence that can exist in any community. Our country professes to be founded upon justice, upon the desire to secure to every man his natural rights; and yet it refuses to recognize the rights of intellectual property within its borders, if the owner is a citizen of another country. What must be the effect upon the moral sense of the nation? It will not differ one whit from the effect which will be produced upon the moral sense of your boy, if you tell him, "My son, it is a sin to steal a pin, but it is not a sin to steal a book from an Englishman."

Let us not imagine that this is a slight or trivial matter, unworthy of our serious attention, or out of place in the sober atmosphere of the church. It is true that there is nothing about the subject to arouse the emotions and kindle a great popular indignation. A preacher cannot speak of it as he might speak of the cruelties of a tyrant, or the horrors of the slave trade. But perhaps that is the very reason why it is the more necessary to utter a sincere, calm, straightforward word in regard to it from the pulpit. Of the two kinds of moral evil I know not which is the more perilous—the flagrant offence, which destroys by catastrophe, or the obscure, seeming-venial, oft-repeated fault, which destroys by decay—

“The little pitted speck in garnered fruit,
Which, rotting inward, slowly moulders all.”

Surely a clean and sensitive conscience, a steadfast and scrupulous integrity in small things as well as great, is the most valuable of all possessions, to a nation and to an individual. The Christianity which does not produce and preserve this, is defunct, obsolete, futile. And the sin which threatens to impair, if not to destroy it, is one which the Christian preacher ought to expose with candor and condemn with vigor.

3. The cure of a national sin, in a republic, rests in the hands of the people. They have the authority; and the responsibility goes with it; and you and I have a share in both. It is idle to blame the men who print and sell books; indeed, it would be unjust, for the respectable publishers, heartily sick of the demoralized condition of their trade, are now united with the authors in protesting that the present condition of affairs is shameful and must be changed. The only thing that can prevent or delay such a change is the moral apathy of decent people and their willingness to buy cheap goods without asking whether they are honest. This is what needs to be broken up. The public conscience must be quickened. A moral sentiment must be aroused ; and this sentiment must be consolidated into a general sense of equity ; and this sense of equity must be embodied in a law of equal protection for all men in the possession of their intellectual property.

Has the Church nothing to do with this ? Has the Bible nothing to say about it ? Let me give you four texts to meditate upon :

Let him that stole, steal no more.—Eph. iv. 28.

Render therefore to all their dues.—Rom. xiii. 7.

Provide things honest in the sight of all men.—2 Cor. viii. 21.

Walk honestly toward them that are without.—1 Thess. iv. 12.

When we take these words at their fair meaning, we realize that the task and the triumph of our religion is to make men and nations true and just and upright in all their dealings, and to bring all law, as well as all conduct, into subjection and conformity to the law of God.

This is the direction in which we need to set our aspirations and endeavors. If this ideal should clearly dawn upon us it would purify our love of country with the fire of virtue. Then should we understand that the glory of the state lies not in wealth or martial power, but in fair-dealing and integrity and honor ; then should we behold, as in Milton's splendid vision, our mighty and puissant nation shaking off the chains of ignorance and iniquity, and, like an eagle, mewing her undazzled sight at the sun of justice ; then should we be amazed and ashamed that the mean sin of literary piracy has been so long a reproach to us, and take a clean, straight step away from it toward that righteousness which exalteth a nation.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT ASSOCIATION.

OFFICERS:

CHARLES W. ELIOT, Pres't.
JOHN LOWELL,
PHILLIPS BROOKS, } Vice Pres'ts.
HENRY O. HOUGHTON, }
CHARLES C. SOULE, Treas.
DANA ESTES, Sec'y.
WARREN F. KELLOGG, Ass't. Sec'y.
ALEXANDER H. RICE, }
FRANCIS A. WALKER, } Directors.
E. H. CLEMENT, }
JOHN D. LONG, }
BENJAMIN H. TICKNOR, }
FRANCIS PARKMAN, }
SAMUEL J. ELDER, }

HONORARY MEMBERS:

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL,
OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, ←
ROBERT C. WINTHROP,
GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS,
JAMES FREEMAN CLARKE,
JOHN G. WHITTIER,
GEORGE BANCROFT, ←
NOAH PORTER,
JOSEPH H. HAWLEY,
JONATHAN CHACE,
EDWIN BOOTH,
GEORGE F. HOAR,
FREDERICK O. PRINCE,
W. W. STORY. ←

The Executive Committee of the International Copyright Association sends you herewith a copy of an Address to the people of New England and the United States Congress. A copy of Rev. Henry Van Dyke's sermon—"The National Sin of Literary Piracy," is also sent you. Will you please read and circulate the same as much as you conveniently can.

Your attention is called to the fact that the Executive Committee will be glad to consider proposals for membership by you of other influential New Englanders who express their desire to join the Association.

It is also suggested that members can substantially forward the reform by writing to U. S. Senators and Representatives, urging the passage of the Copyright bill now pending. A personal acquaintance is not necessary, as it is believed that Congressmen will welcome information as to the state of the public mind on this question. If you are personally acquainted with Western or Southern Congressmen, letters to them may be of great service to the cause. All persons who are willing to circulate memorials to Congress for signatures are requested to send their names to

DANA ESTES, Sec'y.

BOSTON, MASS.

FRANK R. STOCKTON'S WRITINGS.

---

NEW UNIFORM EDITION.

THE BEE-MAN OF ORN, and Other Fanciful Tales.

THE LADY, OR THE TIGER? and Other Stories.

THE CHRISTMAS WRECK, and Other Stories.

THE LATE MRS. NULL.

RUDDER GRANGE.

** The set, five vols., $6.25; each, $1.25.

---

RUDDER GRANGE. NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION. With over 100 Illustrations by A. B. FROST. Square 12mo, $2.00.

---

THE LADY, OR THE TIGER? and Other Stories. 12mo, paper, 50 cents.

THE CHRISTMAS WRECK, and Other Stories. 12mo, paper, 50 cents.

RUDDER GRANGE. 12mo, paper, 60 cents.

---

A JOLLY FELLOWSHIP. Illustrated, 12mo, $1.50.

THE STORY OF VITEAU. Illustrated, 12mo, $1.50.

THE TING-A-LING TALES. Illustrated, 12mo, $1.00.

THE FLOATING PRINCE, and Other Fairy Tales. Illustrated, 4to, cloth, $2.50; boards, $1.50.

ROUNABOUT RAMBLES IN LANDS OF FACT AND FANCY. Illustrated, 4to, boards, $1.50.

TALES OUT OF SCHOOL. Illustrated, 4to, boards, $1.50.

---

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, Publishers,
743 and 745 Broadway, New York.

VALENTINO.

By WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR.

2 volume, 12mo, handsomely bound, - - - - - $1.00

*"The style of the book is unaffected and musical. The descriptions are vivid and the dialogue is interesting. * * * Incidents are presented with dramatic art. The movement of the story never drags. The actors are natural and interesting, and the accessories are highly picturesque. The views of a strangely debased society, splendid in its luxuries and savage in its brutalities, a society which loved everything beautiful except virtue, and filled the palaces of the great with poets, painters, prisoners and bravos, are extremely effective."*—NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

---

STORIES BY AMERICAN AUTHORS.

"CABINET EDITION."

10 volumes, beautifully bound, gilt top. In a box. - - - - - $7.50

This fine edition has been made necessary by the repeatedly expressed demand for this standard collection of American short stories in a form suitable for preservation on the library shelf or for gifts.

---

POPULAR DOLLAR NOVELS.

Each 1 volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - - - - $1.00

THE LAST MEETING.

By BRANDER MATTHEWS.

A WHEEL OF FIRE.

By ARLO BATES.

ROSES OF SHADOW.

By T. R. SULLIVAN.

WITHIN THE CAPES.

By HOWARD PYLE.

COLOR STUDIES.

By T. A. JANVIER (IVORY BLACK).

ACROSS THE CHASM

A Story of North and South.

---

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, post-paid, by the publishers.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743 & 745 Broadway, New-York.

MRS. BURNETT'S NOVELS.

UNIFORM LIBRARY EDITION

Six vols., extra cloth. Price, per set, $7.50

SOLD SEPARATELY

THAT LASS O' LOWRIE'S.

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.25

"We know of no more powerful work from a woman's hand in the English language, not even excepting the best of George Eliot's."—Boston Transcript.

A FAIR BARBARIAN.

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.25

"A particularly sparkling story, the subject being the young heiress of a Pacific silver-mine, thrown amid the very proper petty aristocracy of an English rural town."—Springfield Republican.

THROUGH ONE ADMINISTRATION.

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.50

"The pathetic fervor which Mrs. Burnett showed so fully in 'That Lass o' Lowrie's' is exhibited in many a touching scene in her new story, which is only to be found fault with because it is too touching."—London Athenæum.

LOUISIANA.

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.25

"We commend this book as the product of a skillful, talented, well-trained pen. Mrs. Burnett's admirers are already numbered by the thousand, and every new work like this one can only add to their number."—Chicago Tribune.

HAWORTH'S

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.25

"It is but faint praise to speak of 'Haworth's' as merely a good novel. It is one of the few great novels."—Hartford Courant.

SURLY TIM,

AND OTHER STORIES.

One volume, 12mo, extra cloth, - - $1.25

"Each of these narratives have a distinct spirit, and can be profitably read by all classes of people. They are told not only with true art but with deep pathos."—Boston Post.

UNIFORM EDITION OF

EDWARD EGGLESTON'S STORIES.

---

ROXY.

A Tale of Indiana Life. Illustrated. 12mo, $1.50

THE CIRCUIT RIDER.

A Tale. Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . 1.50

THE HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER.

Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . 1.25

THE MYSTERY OF METROPOLISVILLE.

Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . 1.50

THE END OF THE WORLD.

A Love Story. Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . 1.50

COMPLETE SETS (IN BOX), . . . . 7.25

Mr. Eggleston is one of the very few American writers who have succeeded in giving to their work a genuine savor of the soil, a distinctively American character. The scene of his stories is the WESTERN RESERVE, and the characters are types of the early part of this century, in the territory now comprised in Indiana and Ohio.

---

THE HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY.

Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . $1.00

QUEER STORIES FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

Illustrated. 12mo, . . . . 1.00

---

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, post-paid, by the publishers,

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743-745 Broadway, New York.

UNIFORM EDITION OF
GEORGE W. CABLE'S
NOVELS.

---

"There are few living American writers who can reproduce for us more perfectly than Mr. Cable does, in his best moments, the speech, the manners, the whole social atmosphere of a remote time and a peculiar people. A delicious flavor of humor penetrates his stories, and tragic portions are handled with rare strength."—NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

DR. SEVIER.

One volume, 12mo, $1.25.

"The story contains a most attractive blending of vivid descriptions of local scenery, with admirable delineations of personal character."

—Boston Congregationalist.

"It is a story that deepens, and broadens, and lightens, with an indescribable charm over its deep study of human nature."—The Critic.

THE GRANDISSIMES: A Story of Creole Life.

With a frontispiece, "THE CABILDO OF 1883." One volume, 12mo. Price reduced to $1.25.

Mr. Cable has given this volume a slight revision as regards dialect, wherever—and only where—it had no humorous value. The dialects of the Creole Ladies, of Raoul Innerarity, and Clemence, remain undisturbed.

OLD CREOLE DAYS.

With a frontispiece, "THE CAFÉ DES EXILÉS." One volume, 12mo, uniform with The Grandissimes, $1.25.

POPULAR EDITION OF OLD CREOLE DAYS.

Two series, sold separately, 30 cents each. The same in cloth, gilt top, with frontispieces, 75 cents each.

"Here is true art at work. Here is poetry, pathos, tragedy, humor. Here is an entrancing style. Here is a new field, one full of passion and beauty. Here is a local color, with strong drawing. Here, in this little volume, is life, breath, and blood. The author of this book is an artist, and over such a revelation one may be permitted strong words."—Cincinnati Times.

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, post-paid, by the publishers,

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743-745 Broadway, New York.

IN OLE VIRGINIA.

MARSE CHAN, AND OTHER STORIES.

By THOMAS NELSON PAGE.

Including "Unc' Edinburg's Drowndin'," Meh Lady, Ole 'Stracted, "No Haid Pawn," and Polly.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.25.

R. H. Stoddard in The Mail and Express:

There are qualities in these stories of Mr. Page which we do not find in those of any other Southern author, or not to the same extent and in the same force—and they are the qualities which are too often wanting in modern literature. They are neither literary nor to be acquired by literary processes, however laborious and however toilsome, but are the direct, spontaneous, the natural growth, the flower and fruit of his genius. They are qualities which we attribute to the hearts rather than to the heads of writers.

G. P. Lathrop in The New York Star:

Polly is a bright, blithe story of ante-bellum times, sparkling with light humor and with happy tears that are as welcome as the dew on a flower. The cover of this volume is adorned with a very pretty design formed from the leaves and stalks of the Virginia creeper. But the author does not creep. He walks, he runs, he bounds, and he has bounded into fame by the force of his genius, his originality, and his narrative skill. Mr. Page is a genuine, unimitative American raconteur, whose "In Ole Virginia" justifies us in expecting from his pen a rich contribution to our literature of fiction.

The Richmond (Va.) State:

Some of the completest and most satisfactory pictures of old Virginia life. The stories cover quite fully the social life of Virginians of the time of which it treats. It is a book worth reading, and keeping to read again.

The Philadelphia Call:

One feels that these stories furnish a true picture of the society of the South twenty-five and thirty years ago,—the loves of its young men and maidens, the indescribable misery and suffering which the war caused, the quarrels of the neighboring planters, the sports and pastimes of the people, the humor of the negroes' quarters, the political feuds, the relation of the slaves to their masters, etc.

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, by

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, Publishers,

743-745 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

FREE JOE,

AND OTHER GEORGIAN SKETCHES,

INCLUDING

FREE JOE, AUNT FOUNTAIN'S PRISONER, LITTLE COMPTON, TROUBLE ON LOST MOUNTAIN, AZALIA.

By JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS.

---

One Volume, 12mo, $1.00.

---

This new collection of the most recent stories by the author of the "Uncle Remus" Tales will be welcomed by thousands. Full of sympathy with the characters he portrays, and inimitable in his droll humor and strong delineations of Southern life and character, Mr. Harris has placed these stories on an equal footing with his best previous work.

"His stories have a thrill in them that proves their author to have the master-touch."—Charleston News and Courier.

"Joel Chandler Harris has added to his reputation as a delineator of negro life and character, and laid the foundation of a new one in the line of story-telling."
—Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

"Mr. Joel Chandler Harris has here a story of a very different kind from anything he has previously done, which he calls 'Aunt Fountain's Prisoner.' Apart from its interest as a story, it has a peculiar interest as portraying one new phase of the 'New South,' with which Mr. Harris shows himself to be in thorough sympathy."
—Albany Argus.

---

For sale by all booksellers, or sent, post-paid, by the publishers,

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743-745 Broadway, New York.

"To those who love a pure diction, a healthful tone, and thought that leads up to the higher and better aims, that gives brighter color to some of the hard, dull phases of life, that awakens the mind to renewed activity, and makes one mentally better, the prose and poetical works of Dr. Holland will prove an ever new, ever welcome source from which to draw."—NEW HAVEN PALLADIUM.

Complete Writings of Dr. J. G. Holland

WITH THE AUTHOR'S REVISION.

Each one vol., 16mo, (sold separately,) Price, $1.25.

Messrs. CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have now completed the issue of a New Edition of Dr. Holland's Writings, printed from new plates, in a very attractive style, in artistic binding, and at a greatly reduced price.

It is believed that the aggregate sale of Dr. Holland's Books, amounting as it does to half a million volumes, exceeds the circulation of the writings of any other American author. There is not a single book of his which has not had an unquestionable success, and most of them have been in such constant and increasing demand that the plates were actually worn out.

ESSAYS.

TITCOMB'S LETTERS, GOLD FOIL, THE JONES FAMILY,
LESSONS IN LIFE, PLAIN TALKS,
EVERY-DAY TOPICS, First Series,
EVERY-DAY TOPICS, Second Series. A New Volume.

POEMS.

BITTERSWEET, MISTRESS OF THE MANSE, KATHRINA, PURITAN'S GUEST, AND OTHER POEMS.

NOVELS.

ARTHUR BONNICASTLE, BAY PATH, NICHOLAS MINTURN
MISS GILBERT'S CAREER, SEVENOAKS.

16 Volumes, in a Box, per set, - - - $20.00.

Complete Poetical Writings of Dr. J. G. Holland.

With Illustrations by Reinhart, Griswold, and Mary Hallock Foote, and Portrait by Wyatt Eaton. Printed from New Stereotype Plates, Prepared expressly for this Edition.

One Volume, 8vo. Extra Cloth, - - - $5.00.

"Dr. Holland will always find a congenial audience in the homes of culture and refinement. He does not affect the play of the darker and fiercer passions, but delights in the sweet images that cluster around the domestic hearth. He cherishes a strong fellow-feeling with the pure and tranquil life in the modest social circles of the American people, and has thus won his way to the companionship of many friendly hearts."—N. Y. TRIBUNE.

* * * For sale by all booksellers, or sent post-paid upon receipt of price by

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS,

743 AND 745 BROADWAY, NEW YORK

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE FOR 1888

The following is a partial list of the important features which will appear during the coming year:

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON will contribute in every number during the year. He will write upon many topics, old and new, in a familiar and personal way which will form new bonds of friendship between the author and his thousands of readers.

RAILWAYS will be the subject of an especially important and interesting series of papers. The articles will touch upon administration and construction, including great engineering feats, famous tunnels and passes, and, indeed, those branches of the subject which in this day engage the attention of the whole country. The illustrations which will accompany this series will be very elaborate, original, and beautiful. The authors and the titles of the future articles will be announced later.

THE FICTION of the year will be notably strong, not only in the work of well-known writers but in that of new authors. A serial novel, entitled "First Harvests," by F. J. STIMSON, will be begun in January. Novelettes by HENRY JAMES and H. C. BUNNER, the latter illustrated, will appear early in the year. There will also be many short stories of notable strength and freshness, several of them illustrated.

MENDELSSOHN LETTERS. Some hitherto unpublished letters of the great musician's, of special interest, written to Moscheles, his friend and master, will furnish the substance of two or three articles. They will be illustrated with many portraits, drawings by Mendelssohn himself, and other original and unique material.

ELECTRICITY in its various applications as a motive power, EXPLOSIVES, etc., will be the subjects of a group of illustrated articles of great practical and popular interest, by leading authorities upon these topics.

ILLUSTRATED ARTICLES of special importance will be those on the Campaign of Waterloo, by JOHN C. ROPES; on "The Man at Arms," by E. H. BLASHFIELD; two papers by EDWARD L. WILSON, illustrating results of recent Egyptian research; a further article by WILLIAM F. APTHORP, on a subject connected with his recent contribution on Wagner; Dr. SARGENT'S papers on physical development will be continued, also Prof. SHALER'S articles on the surface of the earth, both being admirably illustrated.

ILLUSTRATIONS. The Magazine will show increased excellence in its illustrations. They will be more abundant and elaborate than ever. It is the intention of the publishers to represent the best work of the leading artists, and to promote and foster the most skillful methods of wood engraving. The Magazine, on its artistic side, will exhibit what is finest, most sincere, and original.

TERMS: $3.00 a Year; 25c. a Number.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, Publishers, New York.

Colgate & Co's Cashmere Bouquet Perfume for the Handkerchief.

COLGATE & CO'S
SPECIALTIES.

TOILET SOAPS.

Made with utmost care from the purest materials. 103 varieties for every taste and use.

PERFUMERY.

Handkerchief Extracts and Toilet Waters of exceptional delicacy and strength.

TOILET ARTICLES.

True Bay Rum, Sachet Powders, and Rince Bouche—an agreeable dentifrice.

The name of Colgate & Co. on each article assures the purchaser of high and uniform quality.