Dear Henryk:

A letter just received from Max Elias indicates that he saw you recently in Houston, for he reported that you wished to obtain additional translations on Russian papers on oysters, and he indicated willingness to undertake this work beginning about 1 March of this year.

That is fine except that we are now within sight of the bottom of the NSF money barrel and we have already made considerable expenditure in this direction to aid you. What is the situation? The time has now come, indeed, when I must ask you to wind up your chapter so as to get it into Newell's hands or mine or both. He is now working to get everything cleared because we have set this volume for the press as soon after a mid-year date as possible. I went over things with him in New York before he left for the Congress in India, and now he will be in Lawrence toward the end of this month.

With cordial personal best wishes,

Sincerely,

Raymond C. Moore

We must close the books on bivalve taxa with end of '64 as last possible cut-off.
