Dear Dr. Cox:

I am writing this letter on behalf of Mr. Thomas E. Pulley, a young biologist at The University of Houston in Texas. Mr. Pulley has started to specialize in the molluscan faunas living in the Gulf of Mexico along the Texas shore. As you know, very little work has been done in this particular area and it is a good sign that there is someone in a position to be interested in that particular area. Membership in the Malacological Society of London would be of a distinct advantage and stimulus to Mr. Pulley. Hence I recommend him warmly as a corresponding member of the Society.

Sincerely yours,

H. B. Stensel
Geologist
