Unless indicated otherwise by note or citation, nothing in this file has been published previously. Musical examples all come from public domain sources, most of them downloaded from IMSLP (<http://imslp.org>). All new material and the compilation copyright David Neumeyer 2019.

Abstract:

This is an index to musical compositions discussed in essays published on this platform since 2010, through 12 January 2019. Many but not all of the pieces listed were also discussed on my blog Ascending Cadence Gestures in Tonal Music (on Google's blogspot platform). Taken together, these essays and blog posts document rising cadence figures and some melodic archetypes in a broad range of European music from roughly 1500-1900, including music for social uses (dance and song), for domestic and public performance, and for the musical theater.

Table of Contents

Part I: ~1500-1700

From early dances and songs compiled by Jakob Boehme, Geschichte der Tanzmusik in Deutschland (1886), to large published collections by Praetorius and Playford, to music for court, church, and home by Schmelzer, Purcell, de La Guerre, Georg Böhm, and others.

Part II: 1700-1800

From Corelli and Dandrieu, Telemann and J. S. Bach, to Haydn, early dance sets by Beethoven, and manuscript collections of contredances compiled under supervision of Johann Bülow (in the Royal Danish court).

Part III: English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song

Index to an essay on this topic and to its two supplements, the music probably coming mostly from the second half of the 18th century, but including both newer (early 19th century) and much older tunes as well.

Part IV: After 1800

Including especially music by Josef Lanner, Johann Strauss, sr., and Schubert, but also Beethoven, Hummel, and various composers of waltzes, polkas, and galops. An operetta by Offenbach and songs by Duparc and Wolf from the 1860s are also listed here.

Part V: After 1870

Further works of the same kind, including another Offenbach operetta, but also stage and concert works by Johann Strauss, jr., piano pieces and songs by Chaminade, more songs by Wolf, musicals/operettas by Friml and Romberg, and five cues from feature films.

Introduction

This is an index to musical compositions discussed in more than two dozen essays published on this platform since 2010, through 12 January 2019: Link to my author page.

Many but not all of the pieces listed here were also discussed on my blog Ascending Cadence Gestures in Tonal Music (on Google's blogspot platform). Taken together, these essays and posts document rising cadence figures and some melodic archetypes in a broad range of European music from approximately 1500-1900, including music for social uses (dance and song), for domestic and public performance, and for the musical theater.

The arrangement throughout this index is roughly chronological. Where I have dates, pieces are put in sequence, with the exception that, for some composers, works within a limited time period are clustered together, an example being Georg Muffat, whose Armonico tributo (1682) was published before the Pièces de Claveçin of Elisabeth Jacquet de La Guerre (1687) but his Florilegium Primum (1695) was published later. Another exception is for a series of pieces that were examined in a single published essay, one example being Castello and van Eyck, both of whom were included in the historical survey essay (see link in the entries), another example being Poglietti, Bertali, and Rosenmüller, whose work was explored in the Austria-Germany essay. Where I do not have dates, I have tried to place composers and compositions in the general area where a knowledgeable reader would be likely to look for them. Thus, in Part I, Lassus may be found after Johann Walther but before Thomas Morley, and Reincken between Chambonnieres and Georg Muffat. This method, however, did not always allow precise placements, and the reader may therefore need to use text-find functions in some cases when attempting to locate a specific composer or collection quickly. Finally, I should note that inconsistencies in citation style are traceable to differences within and between the individual essays.

For information on this style-historical project, its argument, and its methods, I refer the reader to the blog entry for 17 October 2018, on the occasion of the 300th post: link. See also additional commentary in the subsequent post – link – and further comment on analysis methods and priorities in the entry for 30 September 2017: link. The introduction to the recently published essay on two Offenbach one-act operettas also has perhaps the most fully fleshed-out historical narrative I have written to date: link to the essay.

Bibliography

Neumeyer, David. 2018. Rounds, Catches, and Canons: Interval Frames and Ascending Figures.

The play of register in the compact designs of vocal rounds sets up a structure that is quite amenable to rising cadence figures. Repertoire presented here comes from two general groups of sources: (1) nineteenth-century amateur and school collections, which include both traditional and contemporary rounds; (2) seventeenth-century publications by Thomas Ravenscroft, John Hilton, and Henry Purcell.

Neumeyer, David. 2018. Offenbach, two one-act operettas: Les deux aveugles \(1855\) and Pomme d'Api \(1873\).

Ascending cadence gestures are common in the repertoire of the operetta and in some early opéras comiques. Composers altered traditional dramatic cadence figures beginning in the mid-1830s, but it was multiple instances in Jacques Offenbach's one-act stage pieces in the mid-1850s that popularized them and turned them into clichés of the musical theater. Les deux aveugles (1855) was the composer's first undisputed success. Offenbach returned to the one-act format much later in his career with Pomme d'Api (1873). An afterword provides a table of theatrical cadences that bring attention to the upper register.

Neumeyer, David. 2018. Johann Strauss, jr., Die Fledermaus: Ascending Cadence Gestures on Stage.

Die Fledermaus (1874), today the best-known operetta by Johann Strauss, jr., is also a treasure trove of ascending cadence gestures. This article documents and interprets those multiple instances and their effects.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. Addendum to the Historical Survey, with an Index

This is an addendum to the essay Ascending Cadence Gestures: A Historical Survey from the 16th to the Early 19th Century (published on Texas Scholar Works, July 2016), consisting of posts since that date to my blog "Ascending Cadence Gestures" (on Google blogpost). This is also an index to musical compositions discussed in essays published or re-published on this platform since 2010, through 03 March 2017.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. The Ascending Urlinie \(Journal of Music Theory, 1987\): Studies of Music from the Endnotes.

In the endnotes to an article published thirty years ago, I list about thirty compositions as representative examples of different forms of the ascending Urlinie. This document provides analyses and discussion of all those pieces, as well as additional discussion of two pieces from the article's main text: Bach, Prelude in C Major, BWV 924 (as compositional exercise); Beethoven, Piano Sonata in Bb major, op. 22, III (rising Urlinie and register).

Neumeyer, David. 2017. Seventeenth-Century Germany and Austria: Ascending Cadence Gestures

The seventeenth century in Europe was a particularly rich time for experimentation in musical performance, improvisation, and composition. This essay, meant as an addendum to Ascending Cadence Gestures: A Historical Survey from the 16th to the Early 19th Century (published on Texas Scholar Works, July 2016), documents and analyzes characteristic instances of rising cadential lines in music by composers active in Germanophone countries--and, as it happens, particularly in the cities of Hamburg in the north and Vienna in the south.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song: Supplement 2

Another supplement to the essay English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song, which is primarily a documentation of rising cadence figures in dances, fiddle tunes, and songs from late eighteenth and early nineteenth century published sources. Gathered here are an additional 70 examples taken from files downloaded in May and June 2017.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song: Supplement

A supplement to the essay English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song, which is primarily a documentation of rising cadence figures in dances, fiddle tunes, and songs. Gathered here are another 50 examples found in files downloaded on 2 May 2017. These were the coincidental result of a search for more information on Nathaniel Gow, the son of the famous Scottish fiddler Niel Gow.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. English, Scotch, and Irish Dance and Song: On Cadence Gestures and Figures

This is a documentation of ascending cadence gestures in some 260 songs and dances from the British Isles, taken from eighteenth and nineteenth century sources, with some emphasis on collections for practical use published between about 1770 and 1820 and on the later ethnographic collections of P. W. Joyce and the anthology of Francis O'Neill.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. A Gallery of Simple Examples of Extended Rising Melodic Shapes, Volume 2.

This second installment of direct, cleanly formed rising lines offers examples from a variety of sources, ranging from a short early seventeenth century choral piece to Prokofiev's Classical Symphony, and from Scottish fiddle tunes to Victor Herbert operettas.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. A Gallery of Simple Examples of Extended Rising Melodic Shapes.

Pervading stereotypes of formal cadences and arch-shaped melodies were especially strong in the eighteenth century, but they did not prevent European musicians from occasionally introducing rising melodic figures into cadences and sometimes connecting those figures abstractly in lines with focal notes earlier in a composition. This essay presents a few of the most direct, cleanly formed rising lines in music from the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. Ascending Cadence Gestures in Waltzes by Joseph Lanner

Rising melodic figures have a long history in cadences in European music of all genres. This essay documents and analyzes examples from an especially influential repertoire of social dance music, the Viennese waltz in the first half of the 19th century. The two most important figures were both violinists, orchestra leaders, and composers: Josef Lanner (d. 1843) and Johann Strauss, sr. (d. 1849). Lanner is the focus of this essay, with waltz sets ranging from prior to 1827 through 1842.

Neumeyer, David. 2017. Ascending Cadence Gestures in Waltzes by Johann Strauss, sr.

The two most important figures were both violinists, orchestra leaders, and composers: Josef Lanner (d. 1843) and Johann Strauss, sr. (d. 1849). Neumeyer, David. 2016. On Ascending Cadence Gestures in Adolphe Adam's Le Châlet \(1834\)

Adolphe Adam's one-act opéra comique Le Châlet (1834) is a milestone in the history of rising cadence gestures and, as such (combined with its popularity), may have been a primary influence on other composers as rising cadence gestures proliferated in opera bouffe and both French and Viennese operetta later in the century, and eventually in the American musical during the twentieth century.

Neumeyer, David. 2016. Scale Degree ^6 in the 19th Century: Ländler and Waltzes from Schubert to Herbert

Jeremy Day-O'Connell identifies three treatments of scale degree 6 in the major key through the nineteenth century: (1) classical ^6; (2) pastoral ^6; and (3) non-classical ^6. This essay makes further distinctions within these categories and documents them in the Ländler repertoire (roughly 1800-1850; especially Schubert) and in the waltz repertoire after 1850 (primarily the Strauss family). The final case study uses this information to explain some unusual dissonances in an operetta overture by Victor Herbert. Other composers include Michael Pamer, Josef Lanner, Theodor Lachner, Czerny, Brahms, Fauré, and Debussy.

Neumeyer, David. 2016. Ascending Cadence Gestures: A Historical Survey from the 16th to the Early 19th Century.

Cadences are formulaic gestures of closure and temporal articulation in music. Although in the minority, rising melodic figures have a long history in cadences in European music of all genres. This essay documents and analyzes characteristic instances of rising cadential lines from the late 16th century through the 1830s.

Neumeyer, David. 2016. Rising Gestures, Text Expression, and the Background as Theme.

Walter Everett's categories for tonal design features in nineteenth-century songs fit the framework of the Classic/Romantic dichotomy: eighteenth-century practice is the benchmark for progressive but conflicted alternatives. These categories are analogous to themes in literary interpretation; so understood, they suggest a broader range of options for the content of the background than the three Schenkerian Urlinien regarded as essentialized universals. The analysis of a Brahms song, "Über die See," Op. 69/7, provides a case study in one type, the rising line, and also the entry point for a critique of Everett's reliance on a self-contradictory attitude toward the Schenkerian historical narrative.

Neumeyer, David. 2015. Proto-backgrounds in Traditional Tonal Music.

This article uses an analogy between "theme" in literary studies and "background" in linear analysis (or other hierarchical analytic models) for music to find more options for interpretation than are available in traditional Schenkerian analysis. The central construct is the proto-background, or tonic-triad interval that is understood to precede the typical linear background of a Schenkerian or similar hierarchical analysis. Figures typically or potentially found in a background, including the Schenkerian urlinie, are understood to arise through (informal) transformations, or functions, applied to proto-backgrounds.

Neumeyer, David. 2015. Nineteenth-century polkas with rising melodic and cadence gestures: a new PDF essay.

This essay provides background on dance in the nineteenth century and then focuses on characteristic figures in the polka, especially those linked to rising cadence gestures. The polka became a popular social dance very quickly in the early 1840s. Its music was the first to introduce rising melodic frames and cadence gestures as common features. This essay provides a series of examples with commentary. Most pieces come from the 1840s and early 1850s. Variants of the polka – polka-mazurka, polka française, and polka schnell – are also discussed and illustrated.

Neumeyer, David. 2015. Rising Lines in the Tonal Frameworks of Traditional Tonal Music

This article supplements, and provides a large amount of additional data for, an article I published nearly thirty years ago: "The Ascending Urlinie," Journal of Music Theory 31/2 (1987): 275-303. By Schenker's assertion, an abstract, top-level melody always descends by step to ^1. I demonstrated that at least one rising figure, ^5-^6-^7-^8, was not only possible but could be readily found in the repertory of traditional European tonal music.

Neumeyer, David. 2015. Carl Schachter's Critique of the Rising Urlinie

A detailed critique of two articles by Carl Schachter (1994; 1996), this study is concerned with some specific issues in traditional Schenkerian theory, those connected with the rising Urlinie – these can be roughly summarized as the status of $\wedge 6$ and the status of $\wedge 7$. Sixteen of twenty three chapters in this file discuss Schachter's two articles directly, and the other seven chapters (2, 4, 5, 17-20) speak to underlying theoretical problems.

Neumeyer, David. 2015. Analyses of Schubert, Waltz, D.779n13

This article gathers a large number of analyses of a single waltz by Franz Schubert: the anomalous A-major waltz, no. 13 in the Valses sentimentales, D 779. The goal is to make more vivid through examples a critical position that came to the fore in music theory during the course of the 1980s: a contrast between a widely accepted "diversity" standard and the closed, ideologically bound habits of descriptive and interpretative practice associated with classical pc-set analysis and Schenkerian analysis.

Neumeyer, David. 2014. Table of Compositions with Rising Lines

A table that gathers more than 900 examples of musical compositions with cadences that use ascending melodic gestures.

Neumeyer, David. 2014. Complex upper-voice cadential figures in traditional tonal music

Harmony and voice-leading are integrated in the hierarchical networks of Schenkerian analyses: the top (most abstract) level of the hierarchy is a fundamental structure that combines a single upper voice and a bass voice in counterpoint. A pattern that occurs with increasing frequency beginning in the later eighteenth century tends to confer equal status on two upper voices, one from $\wedge 5$, the other from $\wedge 3$. Analysis using such three-part voice leading in the background often provides richer, more complete, and more musically convincing analyses.

Neumeyer, David. 2012. Tonal Frames in 18th and 19th Century Music

Tonal frames are understood here as schemata comprising the "a" level elements of a time-span or prolongation reduction in the system of Lerdahl and Jackendoff, Generalized Theory of Tonal Music (1983), as amended and extended by Lerdahl (Tonal Pitch Space (2001)). I use basic forms from these sources as a starting point but call them tonal frames in order to make a clear distinction, because I have a stricter view of the role of register.

Neumeyer, David. 2010/2016. John Playford Dancing Master: Rising Lines. A revised version of this was published in 2016: link.

Musical examples with rising cadence gestures from John Playford's Dancing Master (1651). This set was extracted from the article "Rising Lines in Tonal Frameworks of Traditional Tonal Music."
