

Union board proposes $5 fee increase, referendum

By DAVID ELLIOT
Daily Texan Staff

University students will vote on a recommended Union fee increase in excess of the legislative limit if the Texas Union Board of Directors has its way.

Currently, students pay $12 per semester, $2 below the legislative ceiling established for the fee. But the Union Board voted Thursday to ask students this fall to approve a $2 fee increase to take effect in spring 1983 and an additional $3 increase to be implemented in fall 1984.

The additional $3 increase could only be implemented if the 68th Legislature raises the fee ceiling from $14 to $17.

"We've got a proposal that I think is illegal," said David Bright, who cast the lone dissenting vote against the recommendation to hold the fall referendum.

Pat Duval, who authored the proposal, said, "We're basically relaying a message to students that we're concerned about the financial state of the Union and we feel that something needs to be done." Duval stressed that the proposal would be subject to revision if legal problems are encountered.

The proposal for a referendum, which must be approved by the UT Election Commission, comes when the Union is facing its most severe financial situation in years.

Major reasons for the Union's financial instability include inflation, legislative increases in salaries and stabilization — and eventual decline — of student enrollment.

University officials have told Union board members to expect an eventual enrollment of 45,000, which would mean an annual loss of $60,000 in Union fees.

Thursday, board members discussed both short- and long-term solutions for easing the Union's financial woes. Short-term alternatives include raising the Union fee, which would generate income next spring, cutting services or raising prices to "fair market value."

We don't want to turn the Union into a Club Foot or a McDonald's. They're businesses," Duval said.

Long-term options include establishment of an endowment whereby UT-exes would be solicited for donations to keep the Union afloat. A similar program at Texas A&M was responsible for raising $900,000 in its third year of operation. But board member Tom Forestier cautioned that the program would take years to implement at the University.

The proposal approved Thursday calls for two questions to be put to students in a fall referendum. The first will ask whether students want any increase in the Union fee. The second will ask if students favor the $2 increase or the $5 increase.

"If the $5 is passed, we will begin to pay for the future financial stability of the Union," Duval said. "But some students may only want to pay for the current stability."

Bright said, "I am by no means against giving students the opportunity to decide this. But I don't see the $5 as having a ghost of a chance of passing."

Duval responded, "Well, let's give them a chance."

But Bright, who has questioned the need for any increase, countered, "It makes your $2 request look less bad."

In other action, board members approved a reorganization plan for the student activities center amid charges that "staff bloat" was pushing students out of that office.

The plan, submitted by Rich Heller, assistant dean of students, will consolidate the Student Activities and Organizations Office into Texas Union Building 4.304, formerly occupied by the Students' Association before its abolition in 1978.

After the reorganization, the Students' Association president will occupy one office on the fourth floor, while the rest of the association will inhabit at least part of the fifth floor of the Union Building. Currently, student organization offices occupy that space.

"A fledgling student government especially needs to have a cohesive work environment," said Bright, who was the only board member to vote against the reorganization plan. "Imagine the problems if some members are on the fourth floor and others are one floor up. We're talking about moving student government, which necessitates an avalanche of support from students, to the lowest traffic area in the Union Building."

"Also, this plan necessitates kicking out at least half and possibly all of the student organizations on the fifth floor."

A similar proposal was defeated in the spring because of board members' concern that student government would not be visible enough. But, Duval said, "Finding student government will not be difficult for anyone who is in college. And visibility will not be critical for the success of student government."

Bright and former board member David Escamilla argued that upon its return, the Students' Association is entitled to the space it occupied when it was abolished. "The current status (before the board vote) of the space is that they'll (student government) get it when they get back," said Escamilla.

And Bright noted that the Students' Association constitution approved in the spring would allow the association to appoint five members to the nine-member Union board, which is ultimately responsible for space allocation. "Any student government that knows what it's doing is going to go after that office space," he said.

Escamilla said, "I think something this board is forgetting to look into is the resources of the parties requesting this space. The Dean of Students' office has tremendous resources for expansion, while the Students' Association won't have such resources. The increasing staff bloat is pushing students out. The student activities center is starting to look less like a student activities center."

After the meeting, Escamilla said, "I think it's ironic that the Union board is ousting student organizations from the building and at the same time asking students to cough up five more bucks to continue serving them. Students don't need that kind of service."

Austin crowd protests indictment of draft registration resister

From staff and wire reports

About 30 men, women and children picketed the U.S. Courthouse in Austin at noon Thursday to protest the indictment of a 21-year-old California man who refused to register for the draft.

Dick Lavine, a spokesman for the American Friends Service Committee, said the protest was to show support for Benjamin H. Sasway, a college student from Vista, Calif., who was indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in San Diego on one count of failure to register, a felony that carries a maximum five-year prison sentence and a $10,000 fine.

Demonstrators carrying anti-draft placards and banners picketed the courthouse at Eighth and Colorado streets for about an hour. Some protesters handed out leaflets urging noontime pedestrians to "stop draft registration."

"We want people who haven't registered to know there are some of us who support them," Lavine said. "We know they're taking a risk."

One demonstrator said he wanted to make men think about the moral implications of being drafted.

"I'm not an anarchist or troublemak-

Travis Spradling, Daily Texan Staff

Patty Kennedy(I) and Robert Mills

er; I'm just honest, the voice of experience," said Neil Bischoff, a 33-year-old child development specialist at the Texas School for the Blind who was drafted in 1970 and served one year in Vietnam.

"I was really apprehensive when I was drafted," he said. "I had misgivings about what was going on over there. But like most kids at that stage of moral development, I went along with majority rule.

"It's very important for people like me to ask other people to examine their conscience, to ask themselves if they want to kill somebody, because that's the main point of the military."

The Justice Department reportedly has referred 160 cases of non-registration to federal prosecutors nationwide. The names of four South Texas men who have not registered were forwarded to the U.S. attorney's office in Houston for possible indictment.

Lavine said he thinks the Justice Department has singled out men who have either publicly spoken against the draft or written to the government expressing their refusal to register. "They're hoping they can scare people into registering," he said.

Although young men born in 1960 or later are required to register with Selective Service when they reach 18, there is no draft currently. But Lavine said he thinks the government will begin drafting men within the next two years.

"The draft boards have been chosen and they've been trained," he said. "All it would take is an act of Congress."

Lavine said he will be counseling Austin men about possible legal options for avoiding the draft.

"I won't be encouraging them not to register," he said. "I will tell people the law. If they decide not to register, I can tell them what the legal consequences are."

Lavine said he would also tell men how to register as conscientious objectors and how to get medical deferments from military service.

Thursday, Sasway, the first American indicted for refusing the draft since the Vietnam war, was arraigned before a U.S. magistrate in San Diego.

After pleading innocent, Sasway was released on a $10,000 personal surety bond and ordered to appear before a U.S. district judge July 16 for the setting of a trial date.

Outside the courthouse where Sasway was arraigned, about 150 demonstrators ranging in age from 7 to 70 marched in a circle, chanting "Ben Sasway, we support!"

Sasway told journalists before entering court: "The government didn't expect this popular support. They may think twice now about prosecuting the other 500,000 (non-registrants) out there. The people remember Vietnam. We needed something like this to remind us of that scar on U.S. history."

U.S. Attorney Peter K. Nunez said Sasway "has committed a crime, so just like any other criminal, he will be prosecuted."

The prosecutor said he would ask $10,000 in bail.

Nunez had declined to comment on why Sasway was chosen as the first person in the nation to be prosecuted for failing to register since registration was resurrected in July 1980 by the Carter administration.

The one-paragraph indictment asserted Sasway "did knowingly and willfully fail, evade and refuse to present himself ... for registration."

The Selective Service says 7.8 million men have registered, 14 of every 15 required to do so, a compliance rate of about 93 percent. An estimated 527,000 young men who should have registered have not.

Sasway charged the government was prosecuting him to present an example of punishment facing other draft-age men who refused to register.

"The government has chosen to prosecute me and a few others to intimidate the 500,000 people who did not register for the draft," Sasway said. "I emphatically urge those who oppose the draft and mobilization for war, and those who want to preserve human freedom and dignity to stand together and to stand firm."

County voting fraud allegations prompt investigations; formal protest likely

By JIMMY MCKENNA
Daily Texan Staff

A formal protest of Travis County's May 1 primary and June 5 runoff elections is likely to be made Friday in light of strong evidence of voting fraud uncovered by the county tax assessor-collector's office.

Tax Assessor-Collector Bill Aleshire says he knows of at least 16 votes that had possibly been illegally cast in the elections. Several other allegations of election irregularities have also been levied in the weeks following the races.

Jim Barlow, spokesman for the Citizens for Election Justice, said, "We're meeting at noon tomorrow (Friday) for a final decision on filing a formal protest. We're 99 percent positive on making a formal protest."

Assistant County Attorney Peter Van Tyle said Thursday some voters may have voted in both the Republican primary and the Democratic primary because they may have registered to vote twice and been sent two voting cards with different numbers.

Van Tyle said there are other ways that people could have voted twice, but intent is the key factor.

"You need to assess your case and look to (criminal) intent. Were they trying to abuse the system or not?" he said.

"We started out with 30 fraud cases and a number of them turned out not to be fraud cases, so they've boiled down to 16 now," Van Tyle said.

Barlow said there are too many people coming out with too much evidence of election injustice for all of the voting irregularities to have been caused by honest mistakes.

So many questionable occurrences "cloud the so-called results of the election," Barlow said, that it is difficult to say who actually won.

There are several main concerns of the group, he said. There were ballots available but not distributed to polling places and there is a definite pattern as to which precincts were short of ballots, he said.

"It's not right, number one, that they ran out and, number two, we can show a pattern," Barlow said.

He said there were voting boxes which were not securely locked as they are supposed to be and there was not one designated person to accept the boxes when brought to election headquarters.

Barlow said the whereabouts of some voting boxes were not known for several hours after the polls closed and children were said to be seen handling some voting boxes without any adult supervision.

He said that the ballots were not tallied in a proper manner and that they were strewn over the floor of the counting room.

Some polling places were counting votes and calling out the results while people were still voting, Barlow said.

He also said there are some missing voter lists and that they have been unable to get complete lists from Precincts 3 and 4.

The U.S. Justice Department has been asked to take appropriate action in regard to the civil violations experienced in the elections, Barlow said.

"Neither a candidate nor a voter can have confidence in a system where one's vote is hampered and the security of that vote is questionable," he said.

After defeated county commissioner candidates Wayne Yelderman and Helen Campbell filed affidavits alleging election fraud in their precincts, the county attorney's office impounded all the election materials and ballots from Precincts 3 and 4.

Van Tyle said his office and the district attorney's office are investigating the allegations to see if any criminal charges should be filed.

"If it turns out there are indications of voting fraud, there's no question we'll prosecute to the fullest," he said.

House pages charge sex, drugs offered by legislators

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Allegations about homosexual activity between members of Congress and their teenage pages involve one member of the House leadership and "some big people," United Press International learned Thursday.

The FBI said Thursday it is investigating charges made by pages that they were propositioned for homosexual activity by members of Congress and offered drugs. There were conflicting reports on the extent of the budding scandal, but a Justice Department source said the allegations are limited to "two or three" members.

A congressman who requested anonymity said a federal grand jury is investigating claims of cocaine dealing on Capitol Hill.

"Some congressmen have been mentioned as customers but not involved in the pushing aspects," said the congressman, who was not formally briefed but was told some aspects of the investigation.

The congressman said he permitted a narcotics agent to pose as a staffer during an undercover operation that led to the grand jury investigation about three months ago.

House Ethics Committee chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said his panel will "immediately and thoroughly" investigate when the House reconvenes in mid-July.

A knowledgeable source told UPI that the story told by pages was that "members would throw parties, would have drugs there and pages who would come would take the drugs and be seduced."

One of the pages "threw out about seven or eight names. Some, people would know; some, people wouldn't know," the source replied to a question as to the prominence of the members named. "It was on both sides of the aisle and some big people" were involved, the source said, recounting the page's charges.

The source said the page is "bright" but like any teenager "might embellish the story."

The source confirmed that one member named by a page in a report to the FBI was part of the House leadership, although the source did not name him or the party he represents. He did say the allegations he had heard about firsthand involved only male representatives and both homosexual and heterosexual activities "but the former was more pronounced."

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said he was "deeply disturbed by the allegations" and said "the truthfulness of these charges must be determined without delay."

He pledged that the House would cooperate with the Ethics Committee and the Justice Department.

Howard Liebengood, Senate sergeant-at-arms, said Senate leaders are "not aware of any Senate involvement in any investigation into alleged congressional page misconduct but have requested that it be determined whether such an investigation has any relevance to the U.S. Senate whatsoever."

If sex or drugs were used in exchange for favors, federal bribery laws might have been broken, putting the case under FBI jurisdiction.

"These are serious charges and the jurisdiction of this committee will be fully invoked to immediately and thoroughly investigate every aspect of these charges," Stokes said.

"That's the last thing Congress needs," said Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of the new allegations. "The only thing we can do is pursue it."

"I never thought I'd see the day when I'd rather talk about abortion and gun control," Baker said.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who heads the juvenile justice subcommittee, called for a Senate Ethics Committee investigation.

Initial allegations broadcast Wednesday night by CBS indicated House members were involved. The Arkansas Gazette reported Thursday a senator and nine or 10 House members, along with about a dozen pages, were involved.

And the New York Daily News reported a page supervisor sponsored by an Arkansas congressman and a page sponsored by a New York congressman were sent home this year for improper activities believed related to homosexuality and drug dealing.

The Justice Department source disputed the Gazette report, saying, "The number of direct allegations is far less than that ... We're talking about literally two or three."

UT-ex Zani faces trial for murder

From staff and wire reports

TULSA, Okla. — A former University student accused of murdering his mother eight years ago and scattering her body parts on a trip to Arkansas has been ordered to stand trial on a first-degree murder charge.

Robert Joseph Zani, 38, is accused of killing Gladys Zani, 64, in July 1974.

Zani, a former A-average English student, is appealing his 99-year sentence for the 1967 murder of Austin anti-war and civil rights activist George Vizard IV. Zani's wife, Erma, is serving a 30-year term for the 1979 slaying of San Antonio real estate agent Julian Dess.

On June 25, Special District Judge David Peterson ordered Zani to stand trial on the strength of testimony from Erma Zani. Zani defended himself without an attorney at his preliminary hearing, which ended Wednesday in Tulsa.

In six hours of testimony, Erma Zani testified her husband killed his mother with a hammer, dismembered her body and scattered the body parts along a highway between Tulsa and Eureka Springs, Ark., where his mother owned property.

Zani testified his wife was a "confessed harlot, a confessed liar and a confessed murderer."

Peterson scheduled a formal arraignment for Tuesday.

In 1965, when Zani was an unsuccessful candidate for UT student government president on an "absurdist" platform calling for abolition of student government, he was photographed for The Daily Texan wearing Mickey Mouse ears and a false mustache.

He was listed in the 1965 and 1966 student directories as Robespierre Xenophobia Zani and Mustapha Mahatma Zani. He graduated in 1967 with a bachelor's degree in English.

Vizard majored in English at the University from 1963 to 1965, when he dropped out because of bad grades. He was a member of the UT Students for a Democratic Society and the Communist Party.

On July 23, 1967, Vizard was found shot to death in the cold-storage locker in the convenience store where he worked. The safe in the store had been robbed of $1,500.

Police had no suspects in Vizard's murder until March 1980, when Zani was arrested on credit card abuse charges.

Zani fit the description of a suspect in the Dess case. Austin police went to Acapulco, Mexico to question Erma Zani, a Mexican citizen. Eventually, Erma led investigators to a spot where Dess' body had been found. Erma also told police she had watched as Zani beat his mother to death and that Zani told her he had shot "that smart-ass communist (Vizard)."

Police traced the bullets that killed Vizard to a gun owned by Zani, and Zani's fingerprints were on a candy wrapper and a bread wrapper that had been found in the convenience store during the original police investigation.

During Zani's trial in March 1981, Travis County Assistant District Attorney Joe Turner argued that Zani robbed the convenience store to get the money he needed to bring his wife to the United States. Turner said Zani had worked part-time at the same convenience store for about a month before he graduated. After he killed Vizard, Turner said, Zani calmly waited on customers until he could flee safely.

After a 10-day trial, which included hypnosis-induced testimony from customers who had been in the store the day of the crime, a jury found Zani guilty of murder with malice.

Injuries preclude notions of 'safe' fireworks

By JOHN CHURCH
Daily Texan Staff

Local medical professionals are urging Fourth of July week-end fireworks users to be extremely cautious because of the high risk of injury involved in firework use.

The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness reports that its surveys and those conducted by the Consumer Product Safety Commission show that 11,400 people nationwide were injured by fireworks during last year's Fourth of July holiday. Of those, 1,600 suffered eye injuries.

"Both studies confirm our viewpoint that fireworks are not toys, but rather dangerous projectiles and that there are no 'safe' fireworks," said Dr. R.E. Margo, state medical chairman of the society.

The Brackenridge Hospital Emergency Department reports an estimated 10,000 Americans were treated for fireworks-related injuries last year and has issued a fireworks safety alert.

"As the trauma center for Austin and the surrounding 10 counties, we feel that it is our responsibility to make people aware of the potential hazards involved with handling fireworks," said Dr. John Blewett, Emergency Department physician. "We want people to enjoy fireworks safely, rather than treat them here in our Emergency Department for something that could have been avoided."

Among the safety guidelines recommended by the hospital are: keep water handy to douse defective fireworks, dispose of all fireworks properly and never ignite fireworks in metal or glass containers.

Brackenridge officials report that most firework-related injuries seen have been small children with hand and eye injuries.

Valerie J. Cox, community health nurse at the UT Student Health Center, says that injuries caused by fireworks have not been a major problem at the University, with only a few minor fireworks-related injuries treated at the SHC last year. But she added, "I have personally seen some severe injuries (caused by fireworks), and it is tragic."

The use of fireworks is prohibited within the Austin city limits, except for licensed public displays, for which a permit must be obtained from the city Fire Department. Unauthorized use of fireworks is a Class C misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $200.

Council considers amendment for vendors' ordinance

By JOAN CARPER
Daily Texan Staff

Local vendors' protest of a city ordinance limiting street vending led City Council and city staff members to consider amending the yet-to-be-enforced ordinance at a council meeting Thursday.

The ordinance, passed May 13, prohibits vendors from soliciting motorists on public streets, completing transactions on road rights of way and selling without a license from the city. The council delayed voting to amend the ordinance for two weeks pending receipt of reports from city attorneys.

Though the ordinance has been interpreted to mean that vendors should not be allowed to sell in roadways or at intersections on major arteries, some council members said they believed the ordinance was too restrictive.

Council member Roger Duncan said, "It is practically impossible to not have curbside solicitation of motorists (for vendors) to show individuals in some way that they (vendors) would like their business."

Duncan favors changing a part of the ordinance to allow vendors to complete sales on the curbside with someone in a vehicle, provided transactions take place in a non-hazardous manner.

Under the ordinance, vendors must complete transactions on private property, said Terry Irion, assistant city attorney.

John Howard, attorney for Flower People Inc., said if vendors were taken off of the road rights of way the city would have to "paint property lines" designating right of way on the sidewalks. He said because of variation in property line widths, the right of way portion of the ordinance would be impossible to enforce.

On June 1, vendors were notified of a 30-day warning period and told that citations would be issued beginning July 1 if they did not comply with the ordinance. However, Austin Police Chief Frank Dyson said, "We will continue with warnings until further notice."

Dyson said a procedure for applying for a license needs to be established and that everyone involved needs to be informed before regular enforcement begins.

The city attorney's office submitted a sample license application for the council to review and report on.

Howard said the application did not give enough information. He said, "You need to know what the (vendor's) contract is going to be before you apply."

The application form tells the vendor what he cannot do, but does not tell him what he can do, Howard said.

Council members agreed that the city attorney's office should draw up a sample license agreement to be presented to the council in two weeks.

Mayor Carole McClellan said she wanted the vending to "continue in a safe, responsible way" and that would be the purpose of the license.

Irion said once an application was received, a traffic engineer from the city urban transportation department would decide whether to recommend approval.

Paris mayor says Socialists trying to carve up city

PARIS — Mayor Jacques Chirac launched a counterattack Thursday in "the battle for Paris," charging the Socialist government with trying to destroy the French capital by carving it into 20 independent cities. In a news conference, Chirac denounced as "absurd" a proposed law unveiled Wednesday to install a mayor in each of the city's 20 arrondissements, or districts, and strip the current mayor of most of his functions. The law is virtually certain to be passed by the Socialist-dominated parliament. Paris newspapers promptly labeled the surprise project a move to undermine Chirac. The popular, vigorous mayor has been a headache for President Francois Mitterrand because he heads an opposition party, the Rally for the Republic.

Mexican election nears

MEXICO CITY — The Mexican presidential campaign legally ended Thursday, with the ruling party worried Mexicans may watch soccer on television rather than vote. "Violence has been rejected energetically one more time by the people of Mexico," said Miguel de la Madrid, the sure-to-win candidate for the ruling Revolutionary Institutional Party, in his last official campaign speech Wednesday.

China's census begins

PEKING — Searching for Chinese families on foot, bicycles, cars, horses and even camels, 5 million census counters moved across China Thursday to get accurate data on nearly one-quarter of the world's population. Rafael Salas, executive director of the U.N. Fund for Population Activities, said the work was "quite adequate. It's being done very systematically, and we foresee a very successful count." The U.N. agency has provided $15.6 million in aid for the $110 million project aimed at getting an accurate picture of the estimated 1 billion Chinese.

FDA holds diet aids

WASHINGTON — Food and Drug Administration officials said Thursday they have asked manufacturers of "starch blockers" — advertised as diet aids — to take them off the market pending tests on their safety and effectiveness. Consumers have complained of nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and stomach pains, FDA officials said. The officials said they have written more than 100 manufacturers asking them to stop marketing starch blockers.

CHICAGO — The Summer That Wasn't pushed into its second month Wednesday with the coldest ever July 1 at 46 degrees in Chicago and a biting wave of record cold from the Mid-Atlantic to upstate New York and the Great Lakes. Other records were: Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., 37; Grand Rapids, Mich., 44; Muskegon, Mich., 44; Beckley, W.Va., 47; Binghamton, N.Y., 49; Charleston, W.Va., 51.

Good reason to quit

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Smoking may not only be hazardous to your health but also may curb a man's sex drive. Researchers at Florida State University reported Thursday that as little as two high-nicotine cigarettes can have a significant effect on male sexual response — at least on a short-term basis. Dr. Richard L. Hagen, an associate professor of psychology, and research partner Joseph A. D'Agostino based their conclusion on the results of an experiment involving 42 male volunteers between the ages of 18 and 44. The men, tested individually, were equipped with electronic devices to measure their sexual response and then shown two segments of erotic movies.

Stocks go down

NEW YORK — The Fourth of July holiday was approaching, but there were few fireworks on Wall Street Thursday as stock prices fell in slow trading during the first session of 1982's third quarter. The Dow Jones industrial average, which eased 0.28 point in Wednesday's see-saw session, dropped 8.66 points to 803.27. The New York Stock Exchange index shed 0.51 to 62.51 and the average price of a share decreased 21 cents. Declines topped advances 938-448 among 1,793 issues traded at 4 p.m. EDT. Big Board volume totaled 47,900,000 shares, down from the 65,500,000 traded Wednesday.

Communists use brochure of extremists

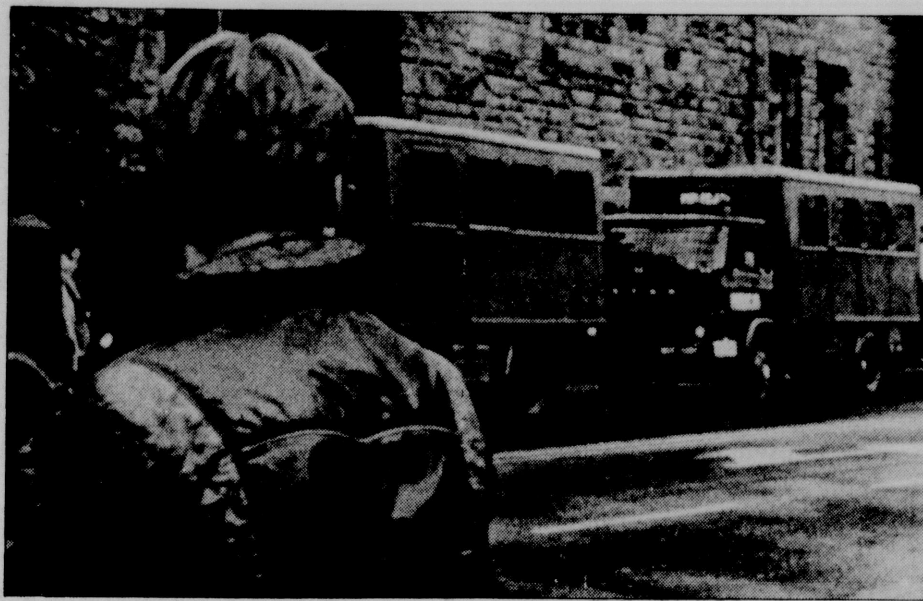

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Communist Party teachers use a special party document telling them how to depict Solidarity and giving thumbnail assessments of leading union "extremists," without mentioning Lech Walesa.

"Truth about the Polish Counterrevolution," by Zbigniew Bryczkowski and Zbigniew Jarzabkowski was published in March for the specific use of party lecturers who make the rounds of local party organizations giving talks on ideological training.

A copy of the brochure, subtitled "Who pushed Solidarity to adventurism? The reply has been given by life," was made available to UPI Thursday.

"Solidarity began its operation as a constructive force but quickly became an opposition," it said. "For a part of the leadership, the union was camouflage hiding the true goals, that is to say, taking over of power."

The brochure gave biographical sketches, plus its own assessment of more than a dozen Solidarity leaders considered extremists — all of whom are now interned or on the run.

Union chief Walesa, still interned by martial law authorities, was not among them.

The brochure said the most dangerous extremist had been Karol Modzelewski, a union activist from Wroclaw with a long history of political opposition who served as Solidarity spokesman for six months.

"Modzelewski, being an experienced political gambler, bears the main responsibility for the fact that Solidarity was transformed into an anti-Socialist political party," it said.

High court says Georgia elections illegal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court voted 6-3 Thursday to throw out an at-large election system that had kept whites in total power in a Georgia county since the Civil War.

The ruling could make it easier to invoke the Constitution to abolish at-large election systems — particularly in the South — that dilute the black vote and keep white officials in power.

The justices, finding pervasive discrimination against blacks, upheld a ruling declaring unconstitutional the system used by Burke County, Ga., to elect its five commissioners based on county-wide votes.

Under that system, no blacks have ever been elected to the county commission, although the community is predominantly black.

The high court ordered into effect a new, five-district voting scheme that is intended to boost black voting power.

Because the justices condoned an approach relying on circumstantial evidence to find the voting structure deliberately kept blacks from power, the ruling could ease the way for similar suits. In earlier decisions, the high court has held circumstantial evidence insufficient to prove intentional, illegal discrimination.

Minorities still might find it easier, however, to use the newly extended Voting Rights Act to challenge discriminatory election systems. President Reagan this week signed a 25-year extension of the act, first passed in 1965.

The three high court dissenters argued such complaints would better be pursued through the Voting Rights Act than on constitutional grounds.

Justice Byron White, writing in the Burke County voting case, found "none of the (trial court's) findings underlying its ultimate finding of intentional discrimination appears to us to be clearly erroneous."

"We decline to overturn the essential finding of the district court ... that the at-large system in Burke County has been maintained for the purpose of denying blacks equal access to the political processes in the country," White wrote.

In declaring the voting system treated black unequally, the lower courts had relied on the fact no blacks ever had been elected to the county commission — even though 60 percent of the county's 18,000 residents are black.

Attorneys for the eight black voters who filed suit maintained evidence of racial discrimination in Burke County is "overwhelming" — from "nigger hooks" in the courthouse coat rack to a laundromat that changed its sign from "Whites Only" to "Private" but continues to bar blacks.

Justices Lewis Powell, William Rehnquist and John Paul Stevens attacked the court's ruling for leaving federal courts "with only the vaguest constitutional direction" of how to settle future spats over election systems.

Soviets reduce lines to Western Hemisphere

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union said Thursday "technical difficulties," not political considerations, were behind its plans to reduce telephone service with the West.

The announcement of the planned cuts set off speculation that Soviet authorities want to make it more difficult for its citizens to communicate with emigres in the United States, western Europe and Israel.

But the Communications Ministry official, who declined to be identified, said "there are technical difficulties. Nothing has been reduced so far but the problem does exist."

Although the Soviets had set July 1 as the date for cutbacks in circuits — up to two-thirds to some western countries — there seemed little change in the time required for placing telephone calls to and from the Soviet Union.

"As far as we know, all 23 circuits are still operating," said a spokeswoman in New York for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Long Lines Division. The Soviets, she said, had informed the U.S. company they planned to eliminate eight of 20 lines and all direct dialing service between the two nations "the first or second week in July."

One caller got through to Moscow in 45 seconds from London and a Soviet operator took only 25 minutes to place a call to the British capital. In the past such calls have taken over an hour.

In Vienna, however, an Austrian telephone company spokesman said all 20 lines to Moscow were out of action but four were reopened later.

Austrian authorities tried to convince the Soviets to postpone the cutback in order to allow full coverage of the World Cup soccer tournament in Spain.

A call from Moscow to Vienna was put through after a 70-minute delay.

"The Soviets don't want to pull the mat from under their own feet," the spokesman said. "Soviet citizens are very interested in the soccer results."

Columbia clear to land; sister bound for spaceport

Shuttle astronauts greet World's Fair tourists

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The space shuttle astronauts, their problems and most of their work behind them, radioed greetings to tourists at Tennessee's World's Fair Thursday and soared smoothly on toward Columbia's Fourth of July landing.

Commander Thomas "Ken" Mattingly and co-pilot Henry Hartsfield were chipper and chatty. They sent down another batch of striking television shots and started pre-return checks of their stubby-winged spaceship — such as pressure in the landing gear tires.

Early in the day and again in the afternoon, the astronauts closed and reopened the bay doors and shuttle control reported they "worked perfectly" following Wednesday's refusal of the left door to close all the way.

They have company in space, although there is no visual or radio contact. Four Soviet cosmonauts and a Frenchman are aboard the Salyut 7 space station, with two of the Russians and the French "spacenaunt" preparing to return to Earth Friday.

Swinging into their fifth day in space, on the 65th Earth orbit, Mattingly and Hartsfield made brief speeches by radiotelephone to the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., where a National Aeronautics and Space Administration exhibit opened Thursday.

"We're talking to you from spacecraft Columbia, which is currently passing just south of the United States," said mission commander Mattingly, his voice booming out by loudspeaker across the 72-acre fairgrounds.

Flight Director Harold Draughon said that in a test Thursday of the doors on Columbia's 60-foot-long cargo bay — one of which refused to close all the way Wednesday following a long "soak" in the deep cold of space — "they closed absolutely perfectly."

"There's a strong indication the problem is a thermal problem," Draughon said, "distortion with either the bulkhead or the doors themselves."

Columbia is scheduled to land at 12:09 p.m. EDT Sunday — the nation's 206th birthday.

Space shuttle Challenger moves through intersection.

Challenger moves through desert during journey to Cape Canaveral

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — Challenger, the nation's second space shuttle, arrived two hours early Thursday at the desert air base where its predecessor — the Columbia — is scheduled to finish its fourth and final test mission Sunday.

The winged spaceship rolled into Edwards Air Force Base at 4:30 p.m. EDT after it was towed at a turtle's pace 35 miles across the Mojave Desert.

More than 1,000 people lined the streets along the route to watch the Challenger, riding on a steel-beamed carrier called a "strongback," being towed by truck at a little more than 3 miles an hour.

It will be mounted on a jumbo jet for a July 4 flight to Cape Canaveral.

Challenger is the third orbiter vehicle, but the first one designed fully operational.

Several refinements were added to Challenger, including two additional seats on the flight deck for mission specialists and room for three more astronauts on the mid-deck.

Space agency said the most important difference, however, is that Challenger is 2,000 pounds lighter than Columbia, which will enable it to carry heavier payloads.

Challenger's first flight in January — STS-6 — will include more efficient booster power from an external tank and solid rocket boosters that also have been reduced in weight.

Challenger is to be flown to Cape Canaveral, with a refueling stop at Ellington Air Force Base near the Johnson Space Flight Center in Houston, about four hours after Columbia ends its week-long test flight at Edwards Sunday.

While Challenger is being prepared for its first mission, Columbia will make its first operational flight in November.

Keeping the Columbia company in space, an international team of cosmonauts wound up experiments on board the orbiting Salyut 7 space station Thursday and began preparations for a return to Earth.

Jean-Loup Chretien, the first Frenchman in space, his Soviet commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov and engineer Alexander Ivanchenkov were scheduled to touch down Friday, one week after their Soyuz T-6 capsule docked with the space station.

The official Tass news agency said they and resident cosmonauts Anatoly Berezhovoy and Valentin Lebedev, who have been on board since May 14, were feeling fine.

Thoughts for the Fourth

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness — that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed...

from the Declaration of Independence
Even to a cynical, jaded, malcontent newspaper editor, these words are inspirational. I'm almost embarrassed to admit it — it just isn't very fashionable to be patriotic. But, in many ways, that's a damned shame.

The most outspoken members of our society generally tend to be one of two types. They are either fully and unquestioningly devoted to "the American way" — capitalism, Reaganism, materialism, imperialism — or they are so completely disillusioned by America that they reject everything for which she stands. Neither attitude is a healthy or reasonable one.

The first derives primarily from a disdain for all opinions and activities that rock the boat in any way. The most adamant defenders of the "America: right or wrong" and "America: love it or leave it" philosophies are generally individuals who have, in some sense, "made it" in American society. They have a definite stake in keeping things just the way they are — after all, they know which side their bread is buttered on. They are consequently intolerant of any suggestion that perhaps some change might be in order. So, to preserve their interests in the society, they wear blinders. They insist that the poor are poor because they are lazy and that the liberals are discontent because they are merely envious of the bourgeois lifestyle they were so foolish to pass up.

But their most vocal detractors are oftentimes no more reasonable. They insist that anyone in any position of authority is automatically corrupt. They not only question authority, they pre-judge it. They react to events according to who has lined up on each side, instead of responding according to their independent assessment of what is right and what is wrong. They sacrifice reasonableness for a place in the circle of today's most prominent whiners.

Both groups are allowing the promise of America to fade. The first, in refusing to see her faults, precludes the finding of solutions to them and at the same creates the image of the ugly American so despised by both friends and enemies overseas. The second, in equating what America has become with what America could be, opts for throwing out the whole package and therefore risks losing everything good that this country has to offer.

One doesn't have to agree with every decision of the Reagan administration, or for that matter with every word in the Declaration of Independence or Constitution to respect the foundations and the promise of this country. What was achieved in 1776 and in the revolution that followed was truly phenomenal. For the first time in the history of the world, a new nation was formed based not on the whim or power of some feudal lord, but on an idea. The strongest nation in the world was created, almost overnight, on the notion that people should be free. In the 18th century, that was quite a radical idea.

Of course, the American revolutionaries were far from infallible. The men who so liberally threw around words like "liberty" and "equality" at the same time held slaves and refused to grant their wives the same privileges they felt were inalienably theirs. But the American Revolution created a contagion of liberty that spread like wildfire. The wives and slaves of America's forefathers started hearing all this talk about freedom and equality and thought it sounded like a good idea. The abolitionist and suffrage movements sparked new revolutions, and slowly the status of non-whites and non-males began to improve.

But the job is far from complete. Modern-day cries of "taxation without representation" are justified in light of the defeat of the ERA by a handful of legislators despite the fact that 63 percent of the American people supported it. Women are still second-class citizens in this country, as are blacks, Hispanics and, ironically, American Indians. The government continues to intrude unnecessarily into our personal lives (with its laws regarding draft registration and victimless crimes), a situation that in the 1700s (with the Quartering Act, for example) literally had the people up in arms.

If these problems are ever to be remedied — and the American dream (not of two-car garages, but of equality for all) is to be achieved — we must first have the courage to face them, and second the faith and fortitude to stop bitching and start solving.

Satire or chauvinism?

The Equal Rights Amendment died this week. Jimmy Clemett's June 30 column is a good example of the mentality that helped to defeat the ERA. It also signals that, yes, there is a long struggle ahead for women if they are to achieve equal status in this society.

Clemett's article is exemplary of the large difference between satire and condescension. Why is it, Mr. Clemett, that men are competitive while women engage in "infighting" and "nagging"? Why is it that the women's movement has suddenly diminished to a group of angry "girls"? This is not satire, Mr. Clemett. It perpetuates some of the prejudices against women.

It is very true that women have a "feeling of deprivation." Women are still paid on the average 59 cents to a man's dollar. That's more than a feeling. That's reality.

Let's face facts. Women will never have equal rights as long as attitudes such as these continue to permeate society. For the record, I do enjoy reading good satire, Mr. Clemett. When you learn to write it, I'll be more than happy to read it.

Court rejects law

Bravo, David Teece, on your article about King Richard (Daily Texan, June 29). It's refreshing to hear someone with enough insight and wisdom to at least realize that the Supreme Court's 5-4 decision last week is inherently wrong. Their decision to protect a present or past president from prosecution puts us in the position of the Puritans and Puritans, among others. They fled England because the king was above the laws of the land and took advantage of others, especially on religious viewpoints. (Remember, the English crown is also head of the English church).

Not only are at least five of the justices ignorant of history, they are obviously not supporters of the U.S. Constitution. The last paragraph of Article I, Section III states: "Judgement in the case of impeachment shall not extend farther than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit under the United States: but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgement and punishment, according to the law." (Emphasis added.)

The Supreme Court's decision is in painfully obvious opposition to our Constitution. This is inexcusable, especially since the quoted article was only the 14th paragraph in the Constitution, leaving no room for excuses that they fell asleep trying to find the constitutional vantage point from which to decide. It is an interesting side note that Article II, Section III, Part I clearly states that Gerald Ford's pardon of Nixon is also unconstitutional. That pardon wasn't precedent, just another corruption of the law.

Considering this blatant rejection of constitutional law, and previous Supreme Court decisions that were instituted as law, without going through the legislative process, it is plain to see that our judicial branch has illegally taken over the legislative branch, and has truly made itself the SUPREME Court, above all citizens, all governmental powers and all law.

When will the people of this country wake up and be knowledgeable on these matters to protect themselves from totalitarian power, just as our founding fathers did some 200 years ago? To use the excuse that you are not a lawyer is ridiculous, seeing that many of them were just farmers and shopkeepers with a vision to keep their freedoms. I am not a student of any school here at UT, yet all it took is one trip to the Undergraduate Library to show me that our country's highest court not only does not speak out when a president gives an illegal pardon, but they themselves actively break the law.

The Bible tells Christians, "My people are destroyed for a lack of knowledge." Our ignorance concerning the workings of our government is destroying this nation, without regard to personal beliefs, and sadly, without so much as a whimper from many of the people who feel freedoms are being taken out from under our very noses.

Foreign policy still unshaped

© 1982 The New York Times

PARIS — George Shultz, the next secretary of state, has one big advantage over his temperamental predecessor, Alexander Haig. That is his cool personality, which takes him unscathed through the bureaucratic wars.

But he will have to fight doggedly if American foreign policy is to be steadied in a period of intense pressures. At the moment, the Middle East and Europe are the hot points where decisions have to be made almost daily. It appeared during President Reagan's European trip that underlying questions had been resolved, and that Haig and his "multilateralist" approach to cooperation with allies and negotiation with Moscow had come out on top.

Now, we know that was an illusion. The misperception is one reason for the burst of Allied anger. The Europeans feel they still don't know the Reagan administration's basic guidelines. Moscow must be at least as uncertain. When is a Washington decision a decision, and what does it foretell?

Despite the series of unequivocal presidential speeches and a package of proposals on arms control, the world is back to reading tea leaves. The most crucial issue, both for peace and foreign relations, is the outlook for the two sets of U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

The Euro-missile talks, which began last year, and the START talks, launched this week, aren't likely to near a make-or-break point for at least another year. The fight in Washington to come up with an initial U.S. position also took that long. The outcome was a compromise, but only on the first steps. It was by definition an incomplete decision. Continued bureaucratic battles must be expected.

The unanswered question is whether the United States really wants agreements enough to bargain for them, or flora lewis

whether it has agreed to talk so as to gain political elbow-room to push through a full arms buildup program.

Negotiating tactics prevent disclosure of possible fall-back positions at this early stage. The next move is up to the Russians. But the bureaucratic infighting didn't really settle priorities and there are bound to be rear-guard struggles about the U.S. stand within the administration. The issue will be whether to prepare for another round, offering inducements to the Russians if they show willingness to be flexible.

Shultz will have the same people to argue against as Haig did, if he wants to keep the negotiations going. Gen. Edward Rowny, chief negotiator for the strategic (START) talks, has said that obviously an agreement can only be reached if the Russians find adequate elements in it to improve their own security as well as that of the United States.

But recent measures to block the Soviet-European gas pipeline deal show that an important Washington faction is still more determined on a long-term effort to overwhelm Moscow than in curbing the arms race.

It has been made clear that U.S. rearmament plans are being pressed. While that is explained as a necessary use of strength to get Soviet concessions, there is no decision yet which way to go when the moment of truth actually comes. Shultz must prepare long ahead for the struggle it will provoke within the administration.

The argument that the Russians won't budge unless the United States stands tough is countered by the argu-female babies, especially a first born. This means they left a baby girl on the side of a mountain to die. Hitler enforced his peculiar definition of quality. What will ours be, and who will decide it?

Perhaps we should set an IQ level, or perhaps we should kill all deformed babies or those who are below a certain weight, or perhaps those that are not wanted. Maybe we should have killed you.

It does not matter for Godwin whether or not a fetus is a human being before he comes out of his mother's womb. For Godwin, the quality of a human life, not the life itself, is valuable. Therefore, given that a fetus is a human, we are "sensitively" and "reasonably" committing mass murder in the name of quality.

Godwin reinforces his quality argument by referring to the "inestimable misery" and cost of unwanted children. He says they weigh on society.

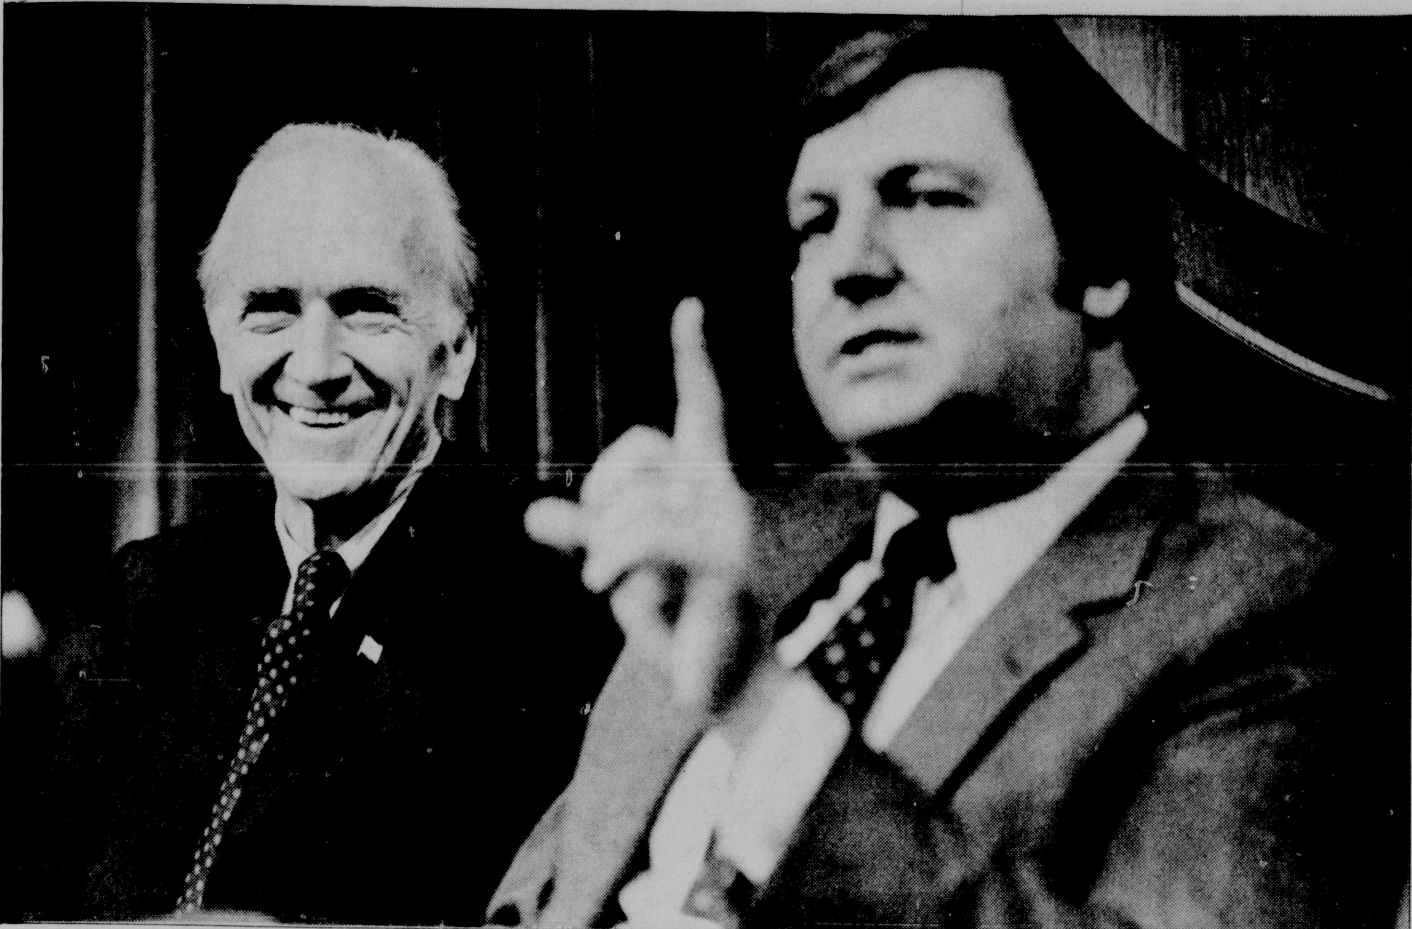

But can anyone justify killing another human in the name of a dollar and convenience? Specifically, does a person who is confined to a wheelchair for the rest of his life have a quality life? Does he cause "inestimable misery" and weigh on society? Do retarded persons weigh on society? Are their lives of quality? Or should their lives be terminated?

In short, who is the one being insensitive and irresponsible? Godwin argues that it is more sensitive and responsible to insist on only quality human life being sacred. All other human life is profane and should not necessarily be preserved. I argue that it is more sensitive and responsible to regard human life at any degree of development as sacred, to be preserved at all costs.

National group spending $750,000 to fulfill goal of unseating Bentsen

By HECTOR CANTU
Daily Texan Staff

Republican senatorial candidate U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, R-Dallas, will receive more than $750,000 from a national Republican committee in an attempt to unseat "vulnerable" Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

The announcement was made after National Republican Senate Committee surveys found that Bentsen was the second most vulnerable Democrat running for re-election to the Senate.

"We have known for some time that Lloyd Bentsen is beatable," Vince Breglio, the committee's executive director, said Thursday at a press conference.

The committee, headquartered in Washington, D.C., receives donations from Republican supporters who let the committee decide which senatorial candidates are best qualified to receive committee funds, Breglio said.

As a result of the survey findings, Breglio said up to $781,000 will be donated to the Collins campaign, including a check for $15,000, the maximum cash contribution allowed by federal campaign law.

"A strong majority of Texas voters consider themselves to be conservatives," Breglio said. "Given a choice, they two to one identify themselves with a conservative label."

Collins' campaign, with a $5 million budget, has focused on labeling Bentsen a liberal, while stressing Texans want conservative leaders like Collins.

Breglio said the committee studied the state's political environment and the relative strengths of Bentsen and Collins in the campaign, and found conditions favored Collins.

The success in Texas of President Ronald Reagan, Gov. Bill Clements and U.S. Sen. John Tower, all Republicans, was also a factor in the committee's decision, Breglio said.

The committee, a branch of the Republican Party, was formed 12 years ago to raise money for incumbent Republican candidates.

Socialists protest exclusion

By HECTOR CANTU
Daily Texan Staff

The Socialist Workers Party said Thursday it plans to seek legal action against the state for denying the party spots on the November general election ballot.

Party spokesmen said Texas Secretary of State David Dean ruled the independent party's "intent to run" declaration invalid because of Republican and Democratic opposition to the party.

Dean could not be reached for comment Thursday.

"The vast majority of Americans agree with us and not with the Democrats and Republicans, and that's precisely why they (state officials) want to keep us off the ballot," Steve Marshall, chairman of the Texas SWP campaign, said.

Party officials said more than 6,000 signatures were collected, as required by state law, to place three congressional candidates on the state election ballot.

Dean, however, refused to accept the filing forms, citing their absence of notarization and the fact that he received the forms after a state-set deadline.

Party spokesmen said Dean failed to provide the necessary forms until after the filing deadline had passed.

"He has refused our intent to file," SWP congressional candidate Shirley Pena said, "and he will not accept any appeals to his decision rejecting our attempt to file."

The three candidates, seeking congressional seats from Houston, Dallas and San Antonio districts, planned to file petitions for a place on the November ballot at the state Supreme Court immediately following a morning press conference.

"We will fight Mr. Dean's undemocratic actions, both with a public protest campaign and with legal action," Pena said.

Dean had "no justification" for refusing the party a place on the November ballot, she said.

PATCO to file for bankruptcy today

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization will file bankruptcy papers for the union Friday, a spokesman said Thursday.

A member of the union's national headquarters said PATCO President Gary Eads will hold a news conference outside the bankruptcy court in Washington when he files the papers. He declined to discuss the filing before the news conference.

The union called a strike last August against the Federal Aviation Administration, which runs the air traffic control system, that led to the firings of 11,400 controllers.

The union was decertified by the government last October on grounds the strike was illegal because the controllers had signed a no-strike oath.

President Reagan ordered the FAA to recruit and train new air traffic controllers and adamantly refused to hire back any who participated in the strike.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld June 11 the decision of the Federal Labor Relations Authority to strip the union of its right to represent the controllers.

Following the decision, Eads said, "Beyond any shadow of a doubt and practically speaking, the U.S. government has proven its point. It has defeated a labor union which has conducted an illegal strike."

At the time, Eads said the union would "continue to work to the best of our ability" to reinstate the fired controllers.

PATCO's national headquarters is down to four full-time staffers and 10 part-time staffers compared with 30 at the height of the strike.

Government appeals Haitian release

ATLANTA (UPI) — Government lawyers prepared an appeal Thursday of a Florida federal judge's ruling ordering the release of nearly 2,000 Haitian refugees from detention camps in six states and Puerto Rico.

Government lawyers will ask the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta to grant a stay of District Judge Eugene Spellman's order, which they contend could lead to a new flood of refugees swarming ashore in south Florida.

Justice Department lawyers filed a notice of appeal with the 11th Circuit Wednesday but were uncertain when formal papers would be filed.

Spellman ruled June 18 that Haitian refugees were being held illegally and followed up Tuesday with an order directing their release. He refused a stay of the order Wednesday and the government turned to the appeals court.

"It (the appeal) will be filed as soon as we have the paper work together. It will be in the near future," said Robert Bombaugh, a Justice Department attorney in Washington.

Bombaugh said he would take his appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court if the 11th Circuit refuses to grant a stay.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham said Florida would join the federal government in the appeal.

In arguing for a stay Wednesday, government attorneys told Spellman that as many as 40,000 additional Haitian refugees were ready to come to south Florida from the Bahamas if his order was allowed the stand. Spellman countered the government had no proof of this.

Spellman has laid down an eight-point program for the Haitians' release, and a coalition of voluntary agencies favoring release of the refugees held a meeting in New York and agreed Spellman's order was workable.

Israelis impatient with Habib's efforts

By United Press International

Israel told the United States Thursday it was growing impatient with U.S. envoy Philip Habib's mediation efforts and warned that its forces besieging Beirut would not wait much longer before moving to crush the PLO.

In Beirut, a week-old cease-fire remained in effect and no violations were reported.

However, Israeli jets kept up a war of nerves, staging a mock attack on the Lebanese capital at midnight Wednesday, dropping flares and smoke bombs in a warning raid.

Senior Israeli officials, in talks with U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Morris Draper, also made it clear the truce could not last indefinitely.

"We want to reiterate there is no other solution but a total withdrawal of all PLO forces from Lebanon," a senior official quoted Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir as telling Draper, who was briefing Israeli officials on Habib's talks in Beirut.

"Time is running short. We are reaching, very rapidly, the limit of our patience," the official said.

As Habib's peace mission appeared to falter, France launched its own diplomatic initiative to end the 26-day-old Israeli invasion of Lebanon before it is carried into the streets of west Beirut, where the PLO has been trapped.

The French Foreign Ministry announced that two senior diplomats, Francis Gutmman and Bruno Delaye, had been dispatched to Beirut, their first stop on a tour taking them to Israel, Jordan and Syria.

In London, British officials confirmed that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has imposed a de facto arms embargo on Israel for its invasion of Lebanon and bloody bombings of Beirut, which have resulted in high civilian casualties.

While an arms embargo was not officially announced, officials confirmed that the British government would refuse to approve all licenses for the export of arms to Israel until further notice.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli official shrugged off the embargo, saying it would have "very little, if any, practical effect."

Israel buys only about $2.62 million in military hardware, mostly spare parts, from Britain.

With the cease-fire holding, attention focused on diplomatic efforts to keep the crisis from exploding into war once more.

Draper told Shamir Habib believed a political solution could be reached, but a senior Israeli official said Shamir told Draper that PLO forces must leave Lebanon "immediately."

"We are not going to be drawn here into protracted negotiations of weeks or months," the official said.

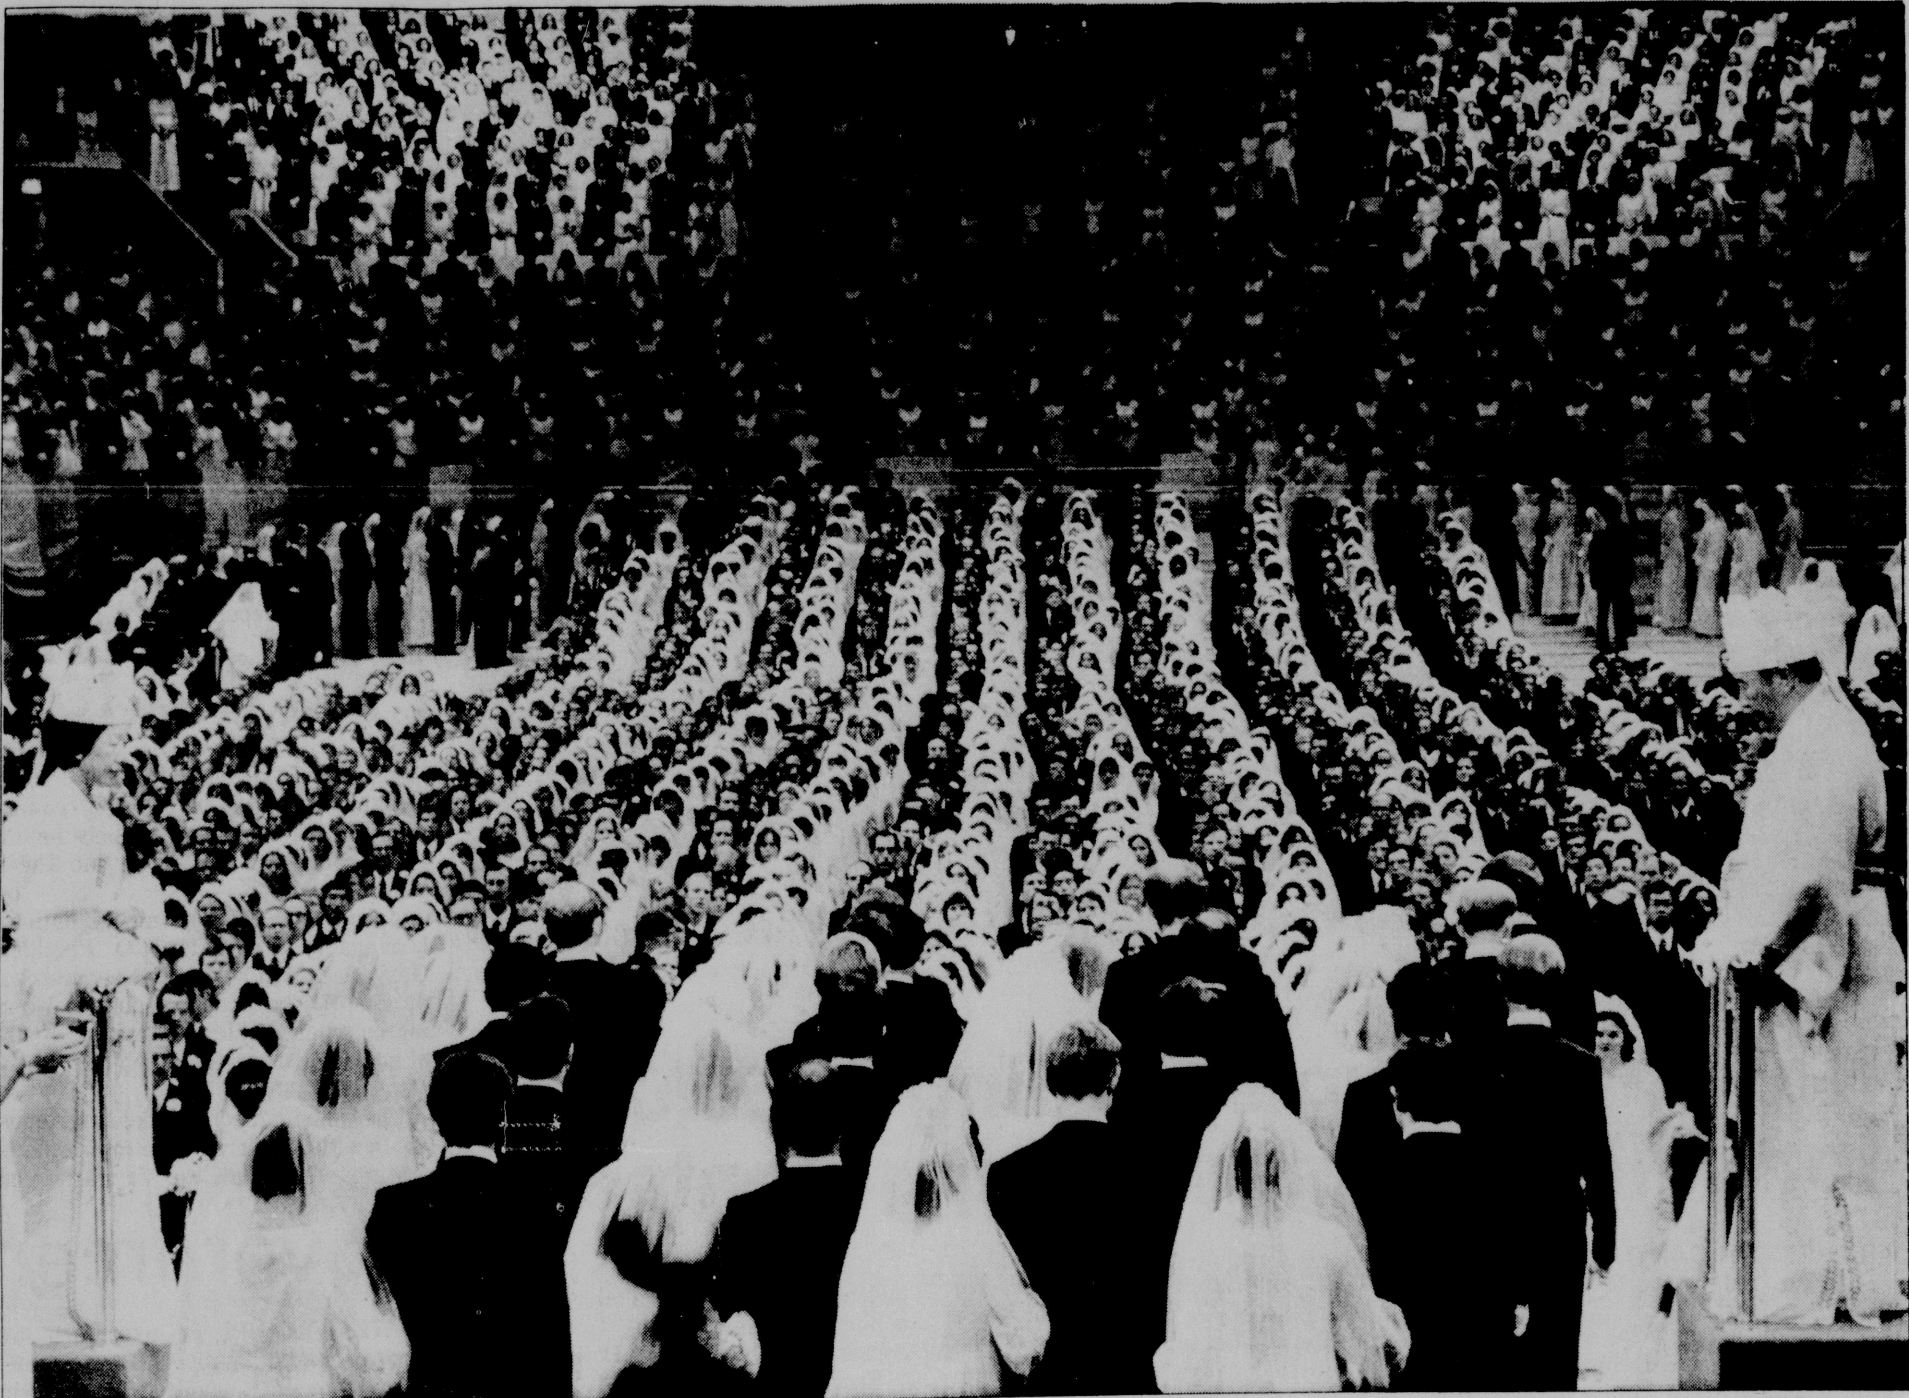

Asked what Israel would do if diplomacy fails, the official said: "I think a prolonged siege is not a solution, not at all. We want to leave Lebanon, not to be dragged into months or years of siege."

His reply suggested Israel was considering a massive invasion of west Beirut, a move that raised the specter of enormous civilian casualties and destruction in close-quartered fighting through city streets.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes had said that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin promised President Reagan he would not order an invasion of west Beirut, but Reagan told a news conference Wednesday night he had received no such assurances from Begin.

In Beirut, the military commander of the right-wing Christian Phalangist Party, Beshir Gemayel, left for Saudi Arabia for talks. Another top official of the Israeli-allied party said the Phalangists would not allow the PLO to maintain either a military or political presence in Lebanon.

"There can no longer be a political, or military presence in Lebanon (for the PLO). We can have some Palestinian people, but not organized into a party," said Karim Pakradouni, the Phalangists' chief theoretician.

Moon marriages

Rev. Sun Myung Moon (r) performs the largest mass wedding in history at Madison Square Garden. More than 2,000 Unification Church couples, whose marriages were pre-arranged by Moon, walked eight abreast to the platform where Moon and his wife (far left) blessed them. Moon read the vows in Korean and a translator repeated them in English. After the vows, which the couples responded to in unison, the couples faced each other and exchanged wedding rings. Thousands of balloons were released from the ceiling after the ceremony as the newlyweds filed out to attend receptions in all parts of the city. Thursday's ceremony was attended by an estimated 6,000 guests.

Hijacker gains ransom, freedom; hostages safe

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — A gaunt, chain-smoking Sri Lankan drug trafficker who used fake dynamite to hold 259 passengers hostage on a hijacked Alitalia jumbo jet returned to his native island Friday — rich, famous and free.

Crowds of Sri Lankans thronged Colombo airport to catch a glimpse of Sepala Ekanayake, 36, who released his remaining hostages unharmed in Bangkok, Thailand, ending a 32-hour drama.

Paid a $300,000 ransom by the Italian airline, he was allowed to take a regular commercial flight to Sri Lanka and was accompanied by his Italian wife and son. "I have not decided what to do with the money," Ekanayake, wearing a butterfly-pattern shirt and jeans, told reporters. "A portion of this will go to the persons who helped me." He did not identify his accomplices.

The bearded sky pirate showed the signs of strain following the hijacking, his eyes sunken and red.

Ekanayake demanded two police jeeps, one for himself and his family and the other loaded with a security escort, to take him to the luxurious Intercontinental Hotel, where the family spent the night.

Sri Lankan police confiscated Ekanayake's passport and he could face questioning for his long record of drug offenses, but the government decided not to arrest him for the hijacking. Sri Lankan negotiators in Bangkok had promised no harm would come to him if he flew to Colombo.

The government appeared more interested in getting part of the money. Sri Lankan officials told the Press Trust of India that Ekanayake, Sri Lanka's first airline hijacker, might have to pay a wealth tax on his fortune at some point in the future.

Ekanayake insisted upon his arrival in Colombo that the explosives were genuine, but in Bangkok, Sri Lanka's ambassador to Thailand, Manel Abeysekera, told reporters the tubes of dynamite Ekanayake wore on a vest were not real and that the hijacker carried no explosives.

Sri Lankan customs officials counted out Ekanayake's money when he arrived in Colombo and found a total of $297,000 in $100 U.S. bills.

Thai Communications Minister Amorn Sirikaya, in charge of negotiations with the hijacker, said Ekanayake's demands for the money and reunion with his estranged 28-year-old wife Aldovrandi Ekanayake and 3-year-old son Frey had been met to safeguard the lives of the passengers and crew aboard the hijacked Alitalia Boeing 747.

"Whether he is going to be punished or what in Sri Lanka is not our concern," Amorn said.

Passengers who endured the hijacking said they would be upset if the sky pirate went unpunished.

American Judy Hood from Bloomington, Minn., said the release was "incredible."

"It only frees him to do the same thing again," she said.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Rebels claimed Thursday they have occupied two villages along the Honduran border for six days and destroyed a telecommunications tower with rockets in northern Chalatenango province.

"The guerrillas in Chalatenango are responding (to the government offensive) by imposing control not only on the city of El Carrizal but also imposing control on the population of Ojos de Agua," the clandestine rebel radio Farabundo Marti claimed.

The two villages are about 56 miles north of San Salvador, along the Honduran border.

The radio also claimed rebels destroyed a relay telecommunications tower.

"The radar station, the parabolic antennas for international communication via satellite of the fascist regime were blown up in ... Chalatenango June 29," the broadcast said.

"We shot two (Chinese-made) RPG-2 rockets that hit the bridge of the radar discs."

An employee at the telecommunications company in Chalatenango confirmed the attack, and an army source confirmed the seizure of the villages six days ago.

The radio also charged that U.S.-supplied A-37 "Dragon Fly" jets "had to violate Honduran air space" Tuesday when they bombed the Chalatenango Volcano.

Residents of San Francisco Gotera, about 70 miles east of the capital, reported aircraft bombed an area just north of the city all day Wednesday.

The region has been the site of the largest armed force operation in the history of the civil war. As many as 6,000 government troops were involved at the height of the offensive.

Rebels renewed attacks on highway traffic, stopping and burning five private cars and one bus on the Pan American highway near San Vicente, 36 miles east of the capital.

Residents in four provinces east of the Lempa River reported public transportation has been virtually paralyzed between San Vicente and the country's third-largest city, San Miguel, 83 miles east of the capital.

Rebel sabotage to the electric power system has blacked out the area since Sunday and left the towns without drinking water.

Land sale seeks to reduce national debt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of President Reagan's new Property Review Board identified Thursday 60,000 acres of federal land, including a slice of Waikiki Beach, "which will be sold to reduce the national debt."

One administration official said the land being put up for sale, in the first step of President Reagan's new effort to dispose of surplus land to help balance the budget, is worth "hundreds of millions of dollars."

But Edwin Harper, assistant to the president for policy development and chairman of the property review board, gave no estimate of the value of the 307 parcels.

Among the properties he listed was a 17-acre slice of the 72-acre Fort DeRussy along Hawaii's Waikiki Beach, long cherished by the Defense Department as a vacation spot for U.S. troops.

The administration has pledged to try to sell $1 billion in surplus property in fiscal 1983 and projects revenues of $17 billion over the next five years from a massive sale of fallow land, and possibly timberlands and grazing fields, owned by federal agencies.

The initial list released by Harper included only properties found surplus in a survey of federal agencies. Harper called it a "preliminary inventory of 307 parcels of unneeded federal real property totaling approximately 60,000 acres which will be sold to reduce the national debt."

On Wednesday, the Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., requiring all proceeds from the sale of Defense Department properties be used to reduce the national debt.

The amendment, co-sponsored by Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a strong supporter of a massive land sale, and John Tower, R-Texas, would allow the Pentagon to recover the costs of relocating their facilities, a move aimed at creating an incentive for the military to give up seldom-used bases.

State and local governments also will be given a chance to argue to the Property Review Board that a property should be donated or sold at reduced prices because it will be used for the public benefit.

Texas Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong criticized the Reagan administration plan to sell off 60,000 acres of federal land, including 3,396 acres in Texas, saying the move is a "questionable" business practice.

"I think it is a very questionable business practice to build up debts then sell assets to pay it off," Armstrong said Thursday. "No trustee would be able to do that under a prudent rule of investment."

Most of the properties to be sold in Texas are lakes run by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers but they also include 186 acres at the Red River Army Depot in Texarkana and Air Force Plant No. 4 in Fort Worth, where General Dynamics Corp. builds the F-16 fighter plane.

Administration officials described the list as an initial batch of "more salable" properties to kick off the massive land sale, stressing that the inventory soon will be increased. The General Services Administration is assigned to offer the properties for sale but cities and states will have first priority in any purchases.

Armstrong said he might support some transfers of the land to the state or cities, which in turn would pay for the maintenance.

He said he had particular doubts about the sale of Corps of Engineer projects because tax money was used in some cases to build the lakes with the promise that there would be public availability.

In Fort Worth, the city's top financial officer denied the claim that the sale of Plant No. 4 would help boost the local tax base.

'Super Stringer' helps UT newscasters

Wiley brings European experience to Austin

By PIETER WYKOFF

Imagine a man standing in the center of a room, surrounded by the latest in audio-video technology. The sounds of Radio Albania are playing on the shortwave radio in the background. His German girlfriend lies asleep as the man stares at himself in a mirror. He is naked except for the Sony tape recorder strapped to his chest. Without warning, he draws a microphone from its holster, firing a question at his mirror image.

A European-flavored satire on B-grade Westerns or perhaps the fantasy of a budding young reporter who has read "All the President's Men" once too often? Not quite. Rather, it's the opening scene from "Super Stringer," a novel-in-progress by Gale Wiley, an instructor of broadcast journalism at the University.

A former stringer for UPI in the Federal Republic of Germany, Wiley admits parts of his novel are autobiographical. "Super Stringer" will be not only what happened to me," Wiley says, "but it will also be my fantasy of what could have been."

"The best thing about being a stringer was that I was free," he says. "I'd do a story for UPI and gather material for a feature story at the same time. Then I'd sell the feature elsewhere." Many of those features appeared in such magazines as Newsweek, The Saturday Evening Post and Penthouse.

When the Army drafted Wiley in 1969, his master's degree in journalism helped him land a job with The Stars and Stripes during his tour in West Germany. He decided to stay there after his discharge. On the day after Wiley and the Army parted company, his by-line appeared on the front page of The Overseas Weekly in a story about military corruption.

Among the many events Wiley covered was the release of the 52 American hostages from Iran in January 1981. Reporting on their arrival at the U.S.A.F. hospital in Wiesbaden, Wiley first broke the story about possible suicidal tendencies among some of the former hostages. "I was just lucky," he says about his discovery. "I was looking through gifts that had been sent to the hostages and I came across the nurse's notes."

Wiley's teaching career also began in Europe. As a lecturer in English and journalism classes of the overseas division of the University of Maryland, he drew readily from his experience. "It showed me that I really enjoyed teaching. I had no plans to teach, but when I could come into the classroom direct from a kidnapping and tell the students 'Here's how I did the story, now let's see how you would do it,' I realized that I had a pretty strong teaching aid," he says.

Wiley has won praise for this approach from his students at the University. When the College of Communication announced last spring that Wiley's one-year contract would not be renewed because he lacked his Ph.D., several students protested to Dean Robert Jeffrey. Jeffrey has since promised to do what he could to retain Wiley on at least a part-time basis.

Lorain Wong, former president of the Communications Council, says most of the students involved in the protest have since graduated. "We were concerned about the students who would come after us," she says. "It's rare to have a professor who cares about each and every student like Wiley does. He loves to teach and he related to us on a one-to-one basis. He pushed the practical aspects of journalism, as opposed to the theory."

Dwight Teeter, chairman of the Department of Journalism, also wants Wiley to stay. "Wiley did an absolutely outstanding job as a teacher," Teeter says. "Although he's not an easy grader, his students were very happy with him. I think his experience speaks for itself. Anyone who's able to support himself as a freelancer for 10 years must have something on the ball."

Despite his uncertain future with the University, Wiley remains optimistic. He and his wife Darlene, an assistant professor of music, have bought a house and plan to remain in Austin. If he doesn't return to the University, he plans instead to devote all his time to his writing.

"That's one of the reasons I came to Texas," Wiley says. "I've never written a book before because I never thought I had anything to say. Now I have at least three very strong book ideas that are in progress. I'm not worried about joining the ranks of the unemployed. For 11 years in Europe I never held a full-time job, but I managed to make a good living."

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective July 27, 1982, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

It is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 13.4 percent increase in the company's intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell's rate application.

Notice to El Paso Area Customers

Effective January 1, 1982, Southwestern Bell adopted the Mountain States tariffs in effect for El Paso County. Southwestern Bell proposes to merge the separate El Paso tariffs with its tariffs applicable to the rest of Texas. The resulting new rate schedule is on file with the PUC and the El Paso area municipalities served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection at our El Paso business office.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

The filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for interexchange private line and foreign exchange (FX) service. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide interexchange private line and foreign exchange service in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell's tariffs. While Southwestern Bell has proposed no increase in long distance rates, any change in those rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, en conformidad a las reglas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) de Texas, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel para servicio de teléfono en Texas con vigencia a partir del 27 de julio, 1982, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Se espera que el nuevo arancel que se ha solicitado rendirá un aumento de 13.4 por ciento en los ingresos intraestatales de la compañía.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission en Austin, Texas, al igual que en cada municipalidad afectada y servida por Southwestern Bell, y cada una de las oficinas de la compañía para negocios con el público en Texas tiene una copia para lectura pública. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa está sujeta a cambios que resulten de la manera en la cual Southwestern Bell aplique sus tarifas.

Aviso a Clientes en la Región de El Paso

Con vigencia a partir del 1o de enero de 1982, Southwestern Bell ha adoptado las tarifas de Mountain States efectivas en el condado de El Paso. Southwestern Bell propone unir las tarifas de El Paso con sus otras tarifas que se aplican al resto de Texas. El nuevo arancel que resulta de esta unión se ha archivado en la Comisión de Servicios Públicos (Public Utility Commission), al igual que en las municipalidades de la región de El Paso servidas por Southwestern Bell, y está disponible para inspección pública en nuestras oficinas de El Paso.

Aviso a los Clientes de Otras Compañías de Teléfono

El registro incluye, pero no se limita a, propuestas para aumentar las tarifas para servicio de línea privada entre centrales telefónicas (interexchange private line) y servicio de central telefónica extranjera (foreign exchange FX). Cambios en dichas tarifas de servicio también afectarían a clientes de otras compañías de teléfono porque dichas compañías proveen los servicios ya mencionados en conformidad a tarifas especificadas por Southwestern Bell. Aunque Southwestern Bell no ha propuesto un aumento en las tarifas para larga distancia, cualquier cambio en las mismas también afectaría a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono.

selects
Nelson

DENTON (UPI) — Baylor assistant Clark "Corky" Nelson became the fourth football head coach in five years Thursday at North Texas State University, where he once served two years as an assistant.

Nelson, 43, twice before had unsuccessfully sought the head coaching job but had not formally applied for the latest opening created when Bob Tyler resigned the combined post of head coach and athletic director nearly three weeks ago.

NTSU, which recently joined the Southland Conference and is suffering financial problems, is still seeking an athletic director.

Iowa assistant Bill Brashier and Pittsburgh Steeler Joe Greene, who starred for NTSU as a defensive lineman, both turned down the head coaching job.

Nelson was an assistant coach at NTSU in 1970 and 1971. He had been at Baylor since 1974. While with Baylor, the Bears played in the 1975 and 1981 Cotton Bowl Classic. Baylor also won the Peach Bowl in 1979.

Ironically, NTSU opens its season Sept. 4 in Waco against Baylor.

Austria, Northern Ireland fight to a 2-2 deadlock in World Cup play.

Irish tie Austria; Russia wins

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — The Soviet Union and Northern Ireland advanced Thursday to semifinal-deciding matches while eliminating Belgium and Austria in the World Cup championship.

A 48th-minute goal by Khoren Oganessian earned the Soviets a 1-0 victory against Belgium, which needed a win to survive after losing its opening Group A match 3-0 to Poland.

The East Europeans meet Sunday in Barcelona to decide which team advances to the last four. The odds favor the Poles, who can qualify on goal difference with a draw.

Earlier Thursday in Madrid, Billy Hamilton headed two goals for Northern Ireland to eliminate Austria from the competition.

In the searing 100-degree Madrid heat, Hamilton opened and closed the scoring to earn the Irish a point-saving 2-2 draw in their second-round Group B match.

The result means Sunday's

Northern Ireland-France game will produce the first semifinalist of the 24-nation tournament.

The Russians, impressive during the first round of the competition, failed to find their rhythm in the match played in Barcelona and Oganessian's boot was their sole on-target shot throughout the whole match.

Northern Ireland, like the Soviet Union, faces a win-or-out situation when it tackles France.

Lloyd to face King in semifinals

Edmondson upsets Gerulaitis, challenges 2nd-seed Connors

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Vitas Gerulaitis, quietly confident that this was going to be his year at Wimbledon, fell victim to a notorious jinx court Thursday when he bombed out against Australian Mark Edmondson in the quarterfinals.

In a match disrupted by heavy rain, the third-seeded New Yorker dropped a 7-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 verdict to Edmondson, seeded 12th.

It was the first time in eight meetings dating back to 1975 that Edmondson has beaten Gerulaitis, and he earned the privilege of facing No. 2 seed Jimmy Connors, another player he has yet to conquer, in the semifinals.

Connors earned his berth in the semifinals with a surprisingly easy 6-1, 6-2, 7-6 victory over sixth seed Gene Mayer. After saving one set point in the tie-break, Connors won it 8-6, ending the match with an ace.

There was another big upset earlier in the day when unseeded Tim Mayotte breezed past No. 15 Buster Mottram 6-2, 7-5, 6-3 to reach the quarterfinals for the second year in a row.

Brian Teacher, seeded 11th and recovering from a serious ankle injury, earned a quarterfinal match against Mayotte when he handily dispatched 17-year-old French Open champion Mats Wilander of Sweden, the seventh seed, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Top seed John McEnroe and No. 5 Johan Kriek will play Friday for the third berth in the semifinals.

The women's quarterfinals were completed Thursday with No. 11 Bettina Bunge beating No. 13 Anne Smith, 6-3, 2-6, 6-0. On Friday Bunge plays Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd faces Billie Jean King.

Edmondson, who recently commented that he'd rather drink beer than practice, won the 1976 Australian Open as an unseeded player, a feat which had never before been accomplished. But he wasn't expected to be much of a threat to Gerulaitis, who had said Wednesday: "I can't really complain I'm playing him."

Gerulaitis had his chance in the opening set, but blew a set point on a pair of aces by Edmondson and then dropped the tie-breaker, 7-4.

After Gerulaitis missed two break points in the sixth game of the third set, Edmondson broke in the seventh. In the final set, the New Yorker saved three match points on his serve before Edmondson ended the 2½ hour contest with a crosscourt forehand.

Rangers down Angels

By United Press International

Dave Hostetler went 4-for-4 and Billy Sample's two-out double capped a five-run fourth inning Thursday night, enabling the Texas Rangers to defeat the California Angels 7-2 behind the six-hit pitching of Frank Tanana.

Buddy Bell and Hostetler led off the fourth with singles, and John Grubb followed with an RBI single after twice failing to sacrifice. Jim Sundberg then sacrificed and Lamar Johnson hit a run-scoring single. Mike Richardt followed with an RBI single and Johnson scored on a squeeze bunt by Doug Flynn. Sample closed out the inning with an RBI double.

In other American League action, Minnesota pounded the White Sox 9-2, Seattle nipped Toronto 4-3, Detroit edged Boston 5-4, Cleveland beat Baltimore 6-2 and New York won 5-3 over Milwaukee.

In the only two National League games, the Pirates downed the Cubs 6-2 and the Mets took a 2-1 decision from the Expos.

'Christiane': 'High School Confidential' 1982?

David Bowie

By LOUIS BLACK
Daily Texan Staff

"Christiane F.," directed by Ulrich Edel; with Natja Brunkhorst, Thomas Haustein and David Bowie; at the Dobie Twin Screens.

Christiane F. is a 13-year-old German girl. She wants to go to the disco. She goes. She ends up becoming a junkie and a whore. Her boyfriend is also a junkie and a male hustler. She reaches her 14th birthday as a smacked-out, seriously messed-up kid. Shortly afterwards, she overdoses and is discovered by her mother, who makes Christiane and her boyfriend go cold turkey. They still become junkies again.

There is something terrifyingly eloquent about this movie about despair, ennui and addiction. When there is nowhere left to explore, we explore ourselves in the most brutal ways conceivable. When it becomes difficult or uncool or incomprehensible to feel, we excite a spark of our own emotion by driving deep into our own central nervous systems.

Unfortunately "Christiane F." is so narrowly focused and intensely claustrophobic that it simply becomes a catalog of moral and physical disintegration rather than any social or political tale. Not only that, but the morality at the core of the film is so unbelievably bourgeois, middle-class, and monogamously heterosexual that everything from pre-marital sex to addiction to homosexuality to any kind of unusual eroticism is viewed as degenerate.

Its depiction of the kind of zombie-esque netherworld inhabited by disenfranchised German teens creates a truly effective, realistic horror film. The moral point of the film however seems to have been birthed by Reader's Digest with the cinematic narrative strategy derived from particularly weak episodes of afternoon soap operas.

Thus going cold turkey is depicted as a hellish roller coaster voyage around one's own nerve endings, addiction seems to occur if one walks by an illegal substance and going to a disco would seem to be the beginning of the last day of the rest of your life. In a real way this is profoundly dangerous because as one discovers the exaggeration of the myths surrounding drug abuse, one has a tendency to forget the very real and very terrifying dangers of drugs. Despite the fact that "Christiane F." is an often fascinating, often harrowing film, its message in regards to teenagers and to drugs ends up being about as insightful and relevant as "High School Confidential" or "Mary Jane."

The opportunity is unprecedented: Condominium Ownership, in an intimate wooded setting less than five minutes from downtown and Campus. The price: Affordable. Luxurious one- and two-bedroom plans from the mid $40's.

The place: Oak Knoll
The Inside Story

Each of our one- and two-bedroom homes at Oak Knoll features many of the modern amenities. As you enter your condominium home you are greeted with plush carpet, large walk in closets and a bonus room just waiting to become a reading nook, beverage bar, or workroom for plant lover.

For the more discriminating buyer some plans feature privately fenced back yards; Others, dramatic balconies and solariums. And, with our Custom Decorating Packages, you have the option of mixing and matching wall covering and carpeting to match your style of living.

Your living space extends outside, as well, onto a parklike pool area with decking, Gas Grills, A private hot tub. And community clubhouse. Along with Mopac, Zilker Park and Hike and bike trail all close-by.

You also get the many tax and investment benefits of owning a home. There is VA and FHA financing available and you can move in with less than 5% down. Plus there are discounts of up to $3,000 to buyers before our Grand Opening slated on June 29.

Taking a look around the immediate area you'll see what makes Oak Knoll such a prime investment opportunity. There is historic 6th Street, the Hyatt Regency and many other prestigious developments that have chosen this locale for their proximity. So that as the value of property in the area increases so does the value of your Oak Knoll condominium home.

Close-in. Close-by. Close to perfect. That's why no other condominium comes close to what Oak Knoll has to offer.

Short drive pays off in long run.

If you're willing to drive a little, Nash Phillips-Copus can save you a bundle. NPC has planned townhome communities like Brandywine, Westgate Crossing and Barton Creek Townhomes in the best areas of Austin for a good deal less than you'll spend in the vicinity of the great orange Tower.

How much less? NPC townhomes start at less than $60 per square foot. Compare that to the $100 per square foot of some "redone" apartment conversions and you'll find that it's almost like getting an extra bedroom for free. And that extra bedroom can make all the difference when it's time to sell.

Now that's smart thinking. See the folks at NPC today and start earning your A+ in Townhome Investing. (You see, a little homework really does pay off.)

Mondale attacks Reagan social plans

BOSTON (UPI) — Former Vice President Walter F. Mondale, in a warmly received address to the 73rd NAACP national convention, said Thursday President Reagan's America has little room for black children, the sick or the poor.

"In Reagan's America, there doesn't seem to be any place for black children," said Mondale, who received a standing ovation at the end of his speech.

The likely 1984 Democratic presidential candidate charged the Reagan administration's economic policies have divided the nation "so that the most vulnerable carry the heaviest burden."

"In Reagan's America, if you're sick, they make you pay more; if you're hungry, they make you wait in the cold for cheese; if you call yourself above the poverty line, they penalize you for trying," he said.

"The first thing I want this president to know is that the American people want to work. We are not asking for welfare; we're asking that you (the president) let the American people stand on their own two feet."

"We will not stand for any president to turn his back on the principle of American society," said Mondale, whose speech was interrupted about a half-dozen times by applause.

"This administration has burdened the disadvantaged so that the most vulnerable carry the heaviest burden," he said. "Children have to have the skills — they have to be educated. They have to have skilled minds and hands."

Mondale, in a performance similar to one earlier by a likely presidential candidate opponent, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., joined hands with NAACP leaders on the podium after his speech to join in singing "We Shall Overcome."

At a news conference before his address, Mondale accused Reagan of trying to duck the issue of the negative impact the administration's economic policies were having on the poor and minorities.

Reagan, in his nationally televised news conference Wednesday night, challenged civil rights leaders to find a "single instance" that would prove he was racially prejudiced.

"The president must change his course and become credible. He'll have to bring into his administration people from all walks of life," he said. "He will have to see the pain of the people and the need to strengthen our cities."

"We've never accused Mr. Reagan of being a racist — we've never said he is a racist," NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks told the news conference.

"I think he is a man of immense good will," said Hooks, but he added the administration has been "rolling back the clock in many things that happened to advance blacks in this country."

White tells group schools need aid

By JULIE CLINT
Daily Texan Staff

Texas Attorney General Mark White told a group at the State Bar of Texas convention Thursday that placing more emphasis on education was the key to solving prison overcrowding.

White said children too often grow up in permissive homes and permissive schools, and that this has caused a lack of discipline and an increased crime rate among young people.

White, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, spoke to a luncheon meeting of the Texas Trial Lawyers' Association that included judges from across Texas and many state officials.

"We have the largest prison system in the nation," White said. "Of those 34,000 prisoners (in Texas' prisons), half are 25 years old or less."

There are 17,000 young people on parole in Texas, he said.

"If we could back up our calendar a year, many of those young people should have been in the public schools in Texas," White said. "I think we have to see to it that we have chosen in society ways to keep our kids out of prison."

White said young blacks total more than 50 percent in Houston prisons and account for more than 50 percent of the imprisoned population.

"They are either going to be productive or unproductive. They're out of work and they get turned down when they are applying for jobs. They have no self-respect and they become part of the (unemployment and prison) statistics."

White said each prison cell was costing taxpayers $70,000 per year and that he had seen the evidence for a new, $6 million prison.

"We've got to recognize that those tax dollars can be spent on education," he said. "We're starting to talk about a more productive system that would see to it that more money will be spent on education."

White said he believed one of the big problems behind the teenage crime rate was that the 18-year-old high school students would graduate and then be unable to find jobs.

"We've missed the boat when we see our business companies just going to college to recruit," he said. "We need to concentrate on the front side of the problem ... recruiting should start at the high school level, too."

"I'd like to see us concentrate on the educational system and not just prisons," he added.

Jim Mattox, Democratic nominee for state attorney general, said in an interview at the Thursday luncheon he believed education was the central key to solving society's problems and that Gov. Bill Clements was working against education through his refusals to raise teachers' salaries.

The national forecast for Friday calls for shower activity in the upper Mississippi Valley, Texas, Florida, parts of the Great Basin and along the west Gulf Coast region. Elsewhere, generally fair weather should prevail with skies ranging from sunny to partly cloudy. High temperatures are expected to range from the low 70s to the mid-80s in the North and from the low 70s to the high 90s in the South.

Suspects plead not guilty in IBM theft

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Five Japanese computer company employees and three other persons from California's high technology Silicon Valley were arraigned Thursday and pleaded not guilty to charges of stealing industrial secrets from the IBM Corp., transporting them to Japan or acting as go-betweens.

Nine other persons who also work for the Hitachi Co. and were named Wednesday in federal grand jury indictments are in Japan and not available for prosecution without an agreement between the governments of the two nations.

Hitachi Corp. officials in Japan, reacting to the indictments Wednesday, said the company "will fight in court" to prove its innocence and suggested the FBI "cheated" the defendants. The company was also named as a defendant.

"We are convinced firmly that there was no wrongdoing on the part of the company and its employees," a company spokesman said. "We will fight in court. We have done nothing wrong in the light of Japan's laws."

All eight persons who appeared before U.S. Magistrate Nordin F. Blacker

Thursday pleaded innocent to charges of receiving and transporting stolen property, manuals and computer tapes from IBM, considered the leader in the computer field. They were then given dates for submission of motions in their cases and for trial, all before U.S. District Judge Spencer Williams.

'We will fight in court. We have done nothing wrong in the light of Japan's laws.'
-Hitachi spokesman

Four defendants, speaking through an interpreter, were arraigned together and told to submit motions by Aug. 4 and be ready for trial Aug. 23. They were Kenji Hayashi, Isao Ohnishi, Kunimasa Inoue and Keizo Shirai. The fifth Hitachi employee, Tom Yoshida, spoke for himself and was given the same dates. All remained free under bond.

The three U.S. residents — Raymond J. Cadet, a former IBM employee; Barry Saffaie, an Iranian national; and Tabassom Ayazi, a college student — were arraigned separately. They were released on bond but were required to surrender their passports.

All pleaded not guilty and were told to appear July 9 before U.S. Magistrate Robert Aguilar for setting dates for motions and trial.

Cadet's appearance was his first since the U.S. Justice lowered. Blacker dropped the bond to $50,000, to be secured by Saffaie's house, and took under advisement the request for an attorney.

The arraignments were restrained and quiet despite the presence of an estimated 200 journalists, many from Japan. Reading of the indictment was waived and Blacker merely asked how each pleaded to the numbered charges. Little conversation occurred.

But prosecutor Greg War of the U.S. Attorney's office said the U.S.-Japan extradition agreement would be used if necessary to bring the Japanese defendants to court.

The indictments Wednesday named nine Hitachi employees in Japan and five who are free on bail in the United States. Aguilar issued a summons for the defendants in Japan to appear in federal court in San Jose July 22.

All 17 were charged in two indictments with transporting stolen property.

In San Francisco, U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello told reporters, "At the present moment in respect to the Hitachi group, we do not expect any other persons to be named. Further aspects of the investigation are being pursued but I cannot comment further."

Hitachi faces a maximum $10,000 fine if convicted and the indictment "does not subject Hitachi to criminal liability," Russoniello said.

Individuals indicted can be sentenced upon conviction to five years in prison and $10,000 fines.

Russoniello said the case against the Mitsubishi employees was not presented at the request of attorneys for the company so they could familiarize themselves with the case and confer with executives in Japan.

He gave the company until Friday to make its presentation and, if he was unconvinced by the presentation, said he would present the case to the grand jury for possible indictments by July 21.

Russoniello said the U.S. Justice Department and Japanese Ministry of Justice were holding discussions that may lead to the surrender of the nine executives.

Charges of entrapment were made in Japan, where newspapers said the companies were victims of an Ab-scarn-style trap and were targeted to deal a setback to Japanese computer industries making advances on their U.S. competitors.

America's tax pie

Celebrating President Reagan's first 10 percent tax cut, Sen. William Roth, R-Del., holds a ceremony featuring a 17-foot-wide apple pie. The event at the Washington Monument Thursday included two demonstrators jumping into the pastry. One of the demonstrators shouted 'all for me, all for me' as he dove into the pie. Jim Brady, White House press secretary, received the first slice of pie.

ERA backers seek power

By HECTOR CANTU
Daily Texan Staff

Austin women rallied Thursday, one day after the demise of the Equal Rights Amendment, to announce that the amendment was not dead and encourage more women to run for public office.

The meeting, labeled "A New Day: Beyond ERA," was attended by members of several local women's groups who were told the death of the ERA will result in women playing a bigger role in local and state politics.

"Ten years ago when the fight began, the Women's Political Caucus was also just beginning," Eleanor Braun, Texas Women's Political Caucus officer, said at the meeting held at the Capitol. "Now we are sophisticated and experienced, and we are recruiting, training and supporting women running for elective office all over the country.

"We know that real power is elective power and we intend to get it and use it," she said.

Leslie Taylor, Precinct 3 justice of the peace, encouraged other women to run for political office.

"I look forward to the day when those among us will not be discouraged from running for office, because hopefully one of us will already be there to make that easier," Taylor said.

Mayor Carole McClellan, who proclaimed July 1 "New Day: Beyond ERA" Day in Austin, said it was "unconscionable not to support the ERA" and said a new equal rights amendment would be ratified within the next decade.

ade. But state Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, said he was "delighted that the proposed ERA ... has finally failed of adoption" and criticized the scheduled re-introduction of an identical equal rights amendment in Congress July 12.

"Evidently, the pro-ERA forces have not learned anything in the last 10 years," Mengden said. "The opponents of the ERA are not against equal rights for women but are opposed to the open-minded, broadly worded constitutional amendment that would be interpreted by federal judges with lifetime appointments."

The Texas Civil Liberties Union asked Wednesday that the Texas Supreme Court better define the Texas Equal Rights Amendment.

City fund totals $6 million

Targeted savings and revenue increases will make it possible for Austin to end the current fiscal year with a $6 million general fund ending balance, Assistant City Manager Jorge Carrasco said Thursday.

Carrasco said in a presentation of the fiscal year's eighth-month financial report that a $2.4 million savings in expenditures plus increased revenues of $1.2 million through Sept. 31, the end of the current fiscal year, would enable the city to achieve a $6 million fund ending balance.

The general fund ending balance each year is a contingency fund for any unforeseen expenses in the next fiscal year.

City Manager Nicholas Meiszer implemented a freeze on hiring, overtime and equipment purchases on June 2 and ordered all city departments to end the year within their budgets.

Carrasco said he had met with the various city departments and made target savings. "Each month we will present reports on how we're progressing and establish expenditure controls and monitoring systems. We're confident the savings can be achieved," he said.

Carrasco said $775,000 had been saved by the hiring freeze, while the rest of the $2.4 million savings had come from reducing expenditures.

He said city pools would be closed nine days earlier this year and that Austin libraries will buy fewer books as part of the savings.

Through the sale of confiscated property by the Police Department, the city will receive $81,000, while sale of "surplus property" owned by the city will net another $1 million.

City Finance Director Philip Scheps said Thursday that

Brackenridge Hospital would increase revenue by $1.7 million because of renegotiations with Medicare, which has agreed to increase payment of hospital costs from 77 to 88 percent.

"The hospital is finally close to breaking even if we don't make the $2 million transfer," Scheps said. Brackenridge had been budgeted to transfer $2 million from the hospital fund to the general fund at the end of the fiscal year.

Also Thursday, the council directed that a contract be drawn up that would allow Austin Community Television to continue as an interim cable access programming manager through Jan. 15, 1983 at a cost of approximately $121,000.

As interim access manager, ACTV is responsible for ensuring that the citizens of Austin have access to certain channels provided by Austin Cablevision.
