Dear Franklin,

When I came back for the beginning of school I started to clear my desk and found with dismay that I had not sent you the reprint of my article in ASA that I had ear-marked for you.

I recalled then that I had held it up until I wrote to you to find out if you're at the Museum or not. If you are, would you send me a card and let me know - if not, perhaps you can let me know where to send it. The last I heard, you were busy farming, but you may now be in Egypt or India. Therefore the query.

I am still at the old stand,
making progress slowly.
