SOME OBSERVATIONS ON THE NEW RULES.

It is too early to predict with certainty just what effect the new football rules will have upon the game. Much diversity of opinion exists, and there are many sides of the question to be considered before a definite conclusion is to be reached. A few results, however, seem tolerably certain, and some of the changes point to the probability of certain others.

In the first place, the time of the game has been lessened by ten minutes, and authority is given the referee to shorten it still further under certain conditions. And an effort is made to avoid unnecessary delays, none over two minutes being allowed. Nor is a captain allowed to ask for time to be taken out more than three times in the same half, unless the man on whose account the request is made is removed from the game. This will, of course, prevent so much "faking" for the purpose of recovering wind.

That a more careful watch upon the game is to be kept and a more rigid enforcement of penalties encouraged is indicated by the fact that hereafter two umpires will be required, unless the right to one of them is waived by express agreement. And the umpire's authority has in many ways been increased, often concurring with that of the referee. The linesman is also a more important official than formerly. And on this score the rules are somewhat open to criticism, for confusion on questions of authority is almost inevitable. It may be mentioned here that many of the penalties have been made much more severe, while some tactics heretofore legitimate have been barred altogether.

The new rules seem to seek to discourage line bucking, although there are those who maintain that this will not be their effect. At any rate six men must remain on the scrimmage line, and there is to be no locking of legs, except in the case of the three center men; and the scrimmage lines (for there are two now, one passing through each extremity of the ball, which must be placed flat on the ground, its long axis parallel to the side lines) must face each other squarely, each man having both feet, or one hand and the opposite foot, within twelve inches of the scrimmage line, and he is expressly forbidden to take any position which will enable him to get into the interference more rapidly. A team may no longer call back its heavy line men for bucking purposes nor shift men to avoid this rule, but a kicker may be used no matter what his position.

A more radical change is the ten yard gain instead of five. This is looked upon in many quarters with disapproval, and has (it is asserted) been tried without success by the colleges along the Pacific Slope. But it is to be hoped that, in connection with the other changes, it will prove desirable. This, with the new kicking rules, will doubtless serve to develop the kicking game more than has ever been done before.

Another radical departure from first principles is the forward pass, one being allowed to each down. This is an innovation whose usefulness is uncertain. In the eyes of Outing: "It is a dangerous play at best," and "the coach or quarterback who makes use of it will exercise poor judgment." But we can all remember plays in which a forward pass would not only have been safe, but would have meant a good gain, often a score and sometimes a game; and Outing's views must not be taken as final on this point. Only a trial will show whether the forward pass is practical.

But the most important of the new rules is the "on side kick." This provides that the ball having been kicked and then touching the ground puts all the players of the kicking side on side, with the single exception of the man who kicks, the reason for the exception being to give the opposing players no excuse for "piling up" on this man, as they have heretofore done. This rule opens up great possibilities for the development of the kicking game, and gives the opportunity for some very clever team work. For instance: in a diagonal kick across the field, an end on the kicking side can secure a good start, with the additional advantage of knowing where the ball is to go; and since he is on side, after the ball touches the ground, he may scoop it up and have a fair chance to score. Kicking is undoubtedly to be encouraged by these rules, and much development in this phase of the game may be expected. Just here it may be noted that the signal for a fair catch has been changed, a player now needs simply to raise his hand clearly above his head, and he may take two steps in any direction.

There is to be no hurdling nor tripping this year, and the use of the hands in blocking has been greatly restricted; they may be used, however, by a defensive player in seeking to get at the man with the ball. And there is to be no tackling below the knees. In this we go back to the rules of several years ago, and to the incident discussions as to whether or not a man's hands "slipped down."

Under the new rules the game will

The Christian Associations

Y. M. C. A.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Y. M. C. A. held its first weekly meeting for the year 1906-1907. Mr. Ramsey lead the meeting. After a selection by the quartet Dr. Vinson of the Austin Theological Seminary made a most interesting and helpful talk. He emphasized the fact that religion is not opposed to any form of progress except progress in sin. In particular the Y. M. C. A. work here will not interfere with legitimate progress in the University. Not only does religion fail to be a hindrance, but on the other hand, it is an essential factor in any complete life.

Immediately after the address application cards were passed around, and 82 men signed up for membership. However, some of these applicants are old association members, and filled out the cards in order to furnish the secretary, Mr. Crutchfield, with a new roll.

The attendance at this first meeting shows that the prospects for the work this session are exceedingly bright. Room 70, our regular place of meeting, would not accommodate the crowd. But let no one hesitate to come on account of the lack of room. We can easily move into the auditorium. By the end of this year we can fill the auditorium half-full of association members. Are we going to do it? Let every man, new or old, show his colors by uniting with the only Christian organization for men in the University of Texas, and the result will be far greater than this.

The "stag reception" given by the Y. M. C. A. to the new students was a success from every standpoint. There were, it is thought, more than five hundred of the boys out, and every one seemed to have a pleasant time. Each one who could be reached was provided with a badge, the color of which indicated the denomination to which he belonged or for which he had a preference. The result showed that there were nine denominations represented by the following numbers, as nearly as could be estimated: Methodists, 100; Baptists, 85; Presbyterians, 20; Christians, 30; besides a few Lutherans, Congregationalists and Catholics, and several who claimed no preference. The pastors of the various churches were present, and made the acquaintance of many and extended to them an invitation to attend church and Sunday school. Apples and lemonade were served free, and the boys ate, drank and made merry for about three hours. The Y. M. C. A. wishes to thank them for their excellent conduct, as well as for their presence.

Y. W. C. A.

Saturday afternoon, September 20, at five, the Young Women's Christian Association of the University gave their annual reception to the new girls. Each guest, as she entered the room, was ushered to a table where a card with her name on it was pinned on her; this introduced her to every one present. A small colored ribbon in a corner of the card told to which church she belonged. The pastors of the city were present and readily found the members of their own flocks. There were so many Methodists that the colors of another church had to be appropriated towards the last. Punch was served and a general good time was enjoyed by all. About two hundred and fifty were present.

The first devotional meeting of the association was held Monday afternoon at five in Mrs. Kerby's study room, Miss Alice L. Batchelder, state secretary, and Miss Eunice Aden, general secretary, being the leaders. Miss Margaret Spence played a violin solo. Quite a number of the new girls joined after the meeting.

May we take this opportunity to extend a most cordial invitation to all University girls to attend the next devotional meeting Monday at five, and to become members of the association, which is one of the factors of University life.

RECEPTION.

The students of the University are very cordially invited to attend a reception at the First Baptist church Friday night at 8 o'clock. The reception will be under the direction of the Young Ladies' Aid Society of the church, and a short, but interesting program will be given, and the reception will be informal. So, if you want to have a good time and get acquainted with the folks, don't fail to go.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

The superintendents of the various Sunday schools of the city desire that the students of the University attend the Sunday schools of their choice, and most of them have made arrangements for special classes for the students.

THE UNIVERSITY BAND.

The University band met for the first time this session on Monday afternoon. About fifty men reported for practice. The interest was marked and was such as to insure a number one band for this year. Ed. F. McCall was elected manager; Dr. E. P. Schoch, director, and J. R. Stone, assistant director.

New equipment to the value of $775 was purchased during the summer, making the inventoried value of the band $1400.

HENRY WATERSON'S RATHER.

Those freshmen and others who, in the elation of being in a great University with its classic surroundings, its varied courses, etc, loses sight of their preparatory courses in the greater University of the barnyard and cottonpatch, might do well to read Henry Waterson's Rather:

"We had rather know that a boy of ours was studying the architectural peculiarities of the rear elevation of a grass-fed mule as he follows him up and down the corn and cotton rows from early morn to dewey eve, inhaling the mellow odor of freshly-turned earth, quaffing deeply of God's life blossom with the perspiration of honest toil sloshing in his brogans, bought at a bargain sale for 78 cents, appetite that could eat through a day's ration of corn-bread and buttermilk and turnip greens and come off the encounter without having its keen edge dulled, than that he had become the pampered pet of effete society, dawdling away the hours of night in the many evolutions of the wobbly waltz with some other man's wife pressed to his bosom, in the midst of voluptuous surroundings with his young brain a-whirl with the intoxicating perfume of rare exotic plants and imported champagne, and giving a few hours of day, not given to slumber, in planning new excesses whereby to squander his time, health, wealth and honor. We would rather know that he was the publisher of a country newspaper, trying to squeeze out an honest living than a Pennsylvania coal baron trying to squeeze out another million of dollars by grinding down labor to starvation wages and causing untold suffering and death by raising the price of fuel beyond the reach of the poor. We would rather he would be water-carrier for a section crew with good health and a clean conscience, than a gouty plutocrat giving his millions toward the founding of public charities and a stomach that goes into convulsions at the sight of a hard-boiled egg or a rasher of bacon and mephetic conscience that never allows its owner a happy, peaceful moment. We would rather a girl of ours were the duchess of a cook stove, wearing a coronet of cobwebs from the kitchen ceiling, and protected by a loving, tender, honest, virtuous husband with corns in his hands like the corrugations on corn huskers, drawing a salary of $10 a week, than the painted plaything of a scorbute scion of degenerated European nobility, purchased with an empty title, wearing a second-hand diadem bought with her paternal ancestor's millions."

WELCOME FRESHMEN.

(By a Sophomore.)

We welcome you, dear freshmen. Our doors are open wide to you. We are at your service. Fully appreciating your condition, we look upon you with commiseration. And having been also once in your lamentable condition, we fully realize that there is nothing to fear in you. But with all your inequities, noble body, we extend to you our "glad hand."

All kinds of opportunities are open to you, and we will make you take advantage of them. Every privilege that we have had you shall have; every warm reception that we have received, you shall receive. We believe in doing unto others as others have done unto us. So come forth, deserted children, and take your medicine.

A royal reception awaits you. Governor Pool welcomes you to his mansion, and his reception hall on fourth floor is at your disposal. A committee has been appointed to assist you in buying your elevator tickets and Y. M. C. A. books. Another committee headed by Mr. Jammison will show you the "rights" of the Varsity. They expect to take you also to Jacoby's "hang-out" and Charlie's "Hole in the wall." But remember, Jake won't sell milk, and Charles serves it only in glasses and not in bottles. Other courtesies will be extended to you, but they will not be made public. Rest assured, however, that a warm reception is in store for you.

And while we are elated over your forthcoming, we are not ignorant of the fact that a little timely advice will do no harm. The Dean objects to your calling on him more than twice a day, and the professors dislike to see you at all. So cut class as often as possible without incurring the animosity of your superiors. Do not go to the "gym" more than twice a day, because you are expected to take a bath each time. That would be unhealthy for you. Don't smoke a pipe, it will make you sick. Don't wear a derby, for it will give you a headache. Leave your milk bottles at home and learn to drink out of a glass. And whatever you do, don't tell anyone that you are a freshman. Your actions will suffice.

But, homeless creatures, your rays not as black as they may seem. You have our sympathy, and Carrie Nation's support. So what more do you want? We have done our duty, and all we ask is for you not to infringe upon our rights. Your path will, then, be smoother.

In conclusion, honorable freshmen, we hope that you will take our good and valuable advice, and that you will accept our hospitality. Our best wishes are with you. And in the words of a poet,

"We welcome you for, as the sunbeams play
Cheers the young vine with a sweet, silent call,
Wakes the glad, honest glow, the gem's
pure ray.
So does your gladdening love upon us

And bless our work. So welcome, one and all."

LIBRARY NOTES.

During the summer the loan desk and railing have been moved forward about ten feet to make room for six additional steel book cases, which will provide shelving for about eight thousand books. The library grows at the rate of about 5000 volumes, 2000 pamphlets and 10,000 number of newspapers a year, and besides all these are the books and pamphlets added to the libraries of the Texas Academy of Science and the Texas Historical Association, both of which are on deposit and are cared for within the library. The new cases, therefore, will comfortably accommodate the accessions of this year; but the unfortunate aspect of their arrival is that they decrease correspondingly the floor space available for study tables and chairs, so that there are now seats in the library for only 150 students. The proper storage and use of the library's 50,000 volumes in the quarters now assigned to it has already become an acute problem. In three years the whole of the main library room will be occupied by book cases, and where the students will study no one as yet knows.

Wooden book cases have been placed near the entrance so as to form a passage way from the present outside door to the old outside door. These cases are primarily intended to hold the books now piled on top of book cases and on the floor in the back of the library, but will also be used, in part, to hold reference and reserve books. The two alcoves formed by these rows of book cases will be, as heretofore, a part of the library study room, and will be supplied with an electric fan for the summer. Owing to the scarcity of proper lumber not all the cases ordered last April have been delivered; the delayed cases will be placed in the alcoves, and will give them a much more finished appearance than they now have.

Among the notable recent gifts are two deserving mention here. Last spring the Ashbel Literary Society voted to buy $75 worth of books for the library, thus supplementing their previous gift of about thirty volumes on the modern drama. This week, at the suggestion of Dr. Bolton, the class in History presented to the library twenty copies of Emerson's Introduction to the Middle Ages.

New books, meaning by those words books recently added to the library, will be on exhibition near the catalogue room in the back of the library and any one, on request at the loan desk, may have the privilege of looking over them.

"BOB" TAYLOR, GUARD.

Although only twenty-two years of age, Bob Taylor tips the beam at 205 pounds and can keep pace with any heavyweight on the team. It was Taylor who surprised Yost's invincibles at Ann Arbor last year and it is likewise him upon whom Nebraska is so strongly relying to guard her back field this season. He plays the game from start to finish and is in it all the time.—Daily Nebraskan.

There is nothing unusual or specially interesting in the above as a news item, but being accompanied as it was by a cut of the decorous, famous and altogether lovely Mr. Bob Taylor, and that cut showing as it does the exceedingly attractive features and profile of a real, genuine, night-colored son of Ethiopia, the notice is calculated to arouse more than a mere passing interest among those who are not color-blind and whose nasal organs are normally developed. This interest will be greatly added to by a knowledge of the fact that Nebraska offered Texas $1000 for a game on their field Thanksgiving. He who is smitten with the spirit of prophecy, or who can construe the tumbling signs of the times aright, or who relies upon past history and present conditions to show him future events, will see in the past possibility of our acceptance of the generous offer something worth observing. Had Texas accepted, gone to Nebraska, and butted into the aforesaid saddle-colored knight of the pigskin, just what would have happened to them or him is hard to say, but it is a safe speculation that there would have been enough doing to satisfy even the sensation-monger and to furnish our esteemed neighbors valuable information by which they might be guided in making future dates.

The honorable Bob Taylor is not to be censured in the least because of his great "white love" or his high aspiration to play back on the famous team of the wind-swept plains. Nay, rather if you don't like color combinations in athletics, if you do not admire a football squad that possesses the most remarkable characteristic of Joseph's coat, assail the powers that be, lambast the lily-white that makes the conditions possible, but honor the uncomparable Bob as an ambitious youth. The Texan has no censure to lay upon anybody for it. The Texan is broad-gauged; it is charitable. It honors differences in opinion; it tolerates divergence in taste. It knows the influence of climate and geography, character and physique; it knows that geographical situation is the most remarkable explanation of the coon's origin; hence, it is inclined to take the charitable view and attribute the anomalous condition existing at the neighboring University to natural physiographical causes—the high-winds and the sandstorms of the western plains may have produced a peculiar nasal and ocular structure. However that may be, the athletic department of the University of Texas is not likely to cherish the memory of the recent offer of a date, or encourage the submitting of others in the future.

The clipping on the last page of last week's Texan anent changes in the football rules was taken from an article by Coach Hyde in The Skiff. The authority was omitted by the printer.

The first duty of a newspaper is to give the news, not to give partial, partisan or garbled accounts of happenings with a view of serving the interests or prejudices of the publisher or of any individual, clique or ring. The newspaper of today, whatever may be the politics or beliefs of the editor or publisher, depends upon the whole community for support. Neither the readers nor the advertisers of any worthy modern newspaper are of any one party or creed. Even if this were so, this is the day of independent thought, and all patrons who are of any substantial value to a paper want the facts upon which to form honest judgments. The Texan recognizes this as the living truth, and expects to abide by it as the vital and guiding principle of its politics. It stands for everything that is commendable, broad and clean in the life of Texas. We expect to advocate principles and to support men and measures without regard to any considerations of fear or favor, but we expect to do it in a fair-minded and impartial manner, always remembering the right of other parties. Every man and every measure shall have a square deal; party lines shall not exist, and bickerings and backbitings shall be no more. Let's be, at least, as broad as the world.

ANENT COLLEGE SPIRIT.

There is no term in college parlance more mercilessly abused than "College Spirit." It is made to do duty on all occasions, to support all enterprises and to cover a veritable multitude of fake schemes, bolstering them up and shielding them from richly-merited exposure, until the cynics and the wise-one doubt if there is such a thing, and sneeringly ask "What is it?"

The answer is apparent: "It is something of which you are scarce, Bud." "College Spirit," distorted and mutilated as it sometimes is, signifies one of the highest constituent elements of character as well as the most vital principle underlying community or corporate life.

In one sense, the term is synonymous with fellow-feeling and fraternity; in another, it is the same thing as patriotism, love of fatherland, love of home, love of alma mater. In either sense it denotes something mighty good, something just a little above the merely human. This is the feeling that prompts the hearty co-operation of every right-minded student in the good works, efforts and enterprises of every fellow-student; this is the thing that calls forth from the student-body and the individual the willing, cheerful support of every University enterprise. So, if there is an athletic or debating team striving for supremacy upon field or forum in the name of 'Varsity, or if there is a Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. movement or an association enterprise on foot, you owe it your unhesitating support for a double reason: there is a fellow-student or organization of fellow-students striving with might and main to do something, there is something being undertaken in the name of Texas. Your moral support, at least, is merited; and your financial support will be forthcoming if your sympathies are right, because the one does not exist without the other—here, as everywhere else, "Faith without works is dead."

A ROOTORIAL SQUAD.

The one thing that can inspire the greatest courage and vim in a team is the loyal and enthusiastic support of its backers. There is just one way to prove to the man struggling upon the gridiron that your sympathies, expectations and hopes are centered upon him, and that way is to be at the game by a large majority and to proclaim your presence and interest in tones that can not be misunderstood by the fellow dust-covered and bruised straining every muscle for the fame of Texas. That every loyal Texan should be on hand, unless there is a valid reason for non-attendance, no one will deny. If you are merely there, you are patriotic, and you have done a lot to help win the game, but you have not done as much as you could have done—your patriotism has not been as effective as it might have been. The first place that patriotism, like the measles, breaks out is in the mouth. Cheer the boys out there thriving in the heat of conflict, fighting like tigers to save the goal, it may be, or pounding away with dogged determination at the enemy's defense and moving up yard by yard toward the line that means glorious victory—tell them that old Texas is looking upon them confidently, staking her prestige upon their vim and valor. Tell them this, tell it enthusiastically, thunderously, and, if human exertions can save the day or win it, those boys will do it.

You may be there, and you may yell, and still the game may be lost on your account. In order for yelling to be most effective, it, like everything else, must be systematic; and before it can be systematic, there must be constant practice together. The most enthusiastic and loyal rooting can not be as effective as it ought to be with only one or two days' practice. Right now, at the very beginning of the season, let's organize a rooting squad and practice continuously, so that when the critical moment comes we will be able to do our part by the team.

TEXAS vs. THE TROOPER.

undoubtedly be much faster and the play much more open; and this will serve to make it more interesting from the standpoint of the spectator, for the play can be more easily followed; but there are those who say that it will not, on this account, be any the less dangerous than under the old rules, and nothing but a trial will settle this.

But if the new rules are to hold, we may expect to see the old heavy player supplanted by a much lighter, faster and more agile man; one who is active both in thought and limb, for a greater premium than ever before is to be put upon headwork.

Will the best team always win under the new rules? Do they not provide too many chances for scoring on "flukes?" These, and many other, questions suggest themselves and no amount of guessing will answer them. The new rules must be tried. And so, before passing our judgment, let us await the result of a practical test.

The football season opens on Saturday, and the practice for the past week has been regular and hard. The training table was begun the early part of the week and the men are beginning to get into shape. From all the indications, the back field promises to be strong, while the greatest need for development is in the positions of quarter and end. The most promising of the material, according to a statement of Head Coach Schenker, is: Center, Parrish, Hamilton; guards, Weinert, Feldake; tacklers, Ramsdell, Vickers, Mainland; ends, Duncan, Fink, Harley; quarter, Dyer, Williams; back field, McMahon, Caldwell, Ramsdell, Adams, Krah, Fenuille and Ramond. Hastings is also back again.

In view of the fact that a great deal of kicking will be required under the new rules, the coach has been giving special attention to the development of kickers. Among the men who have showed up well at this are McMahon, Caldwell, Ramsdell and Krah.

Large crowds turn out every afternoon to see the practice, and much enthusiasm is being manifested by the students generally. The prospects for a good team are looked upon as flattering.

The coach management requests that throughout the season the students continue to remain off the field (that is behind the fence) during practice, as this will not only insure the secrecy of the signals, but will prevent any interference with the practice from outside sources.

Let everybody get out and "root" the team to success.

Manager Lumpkin has announced the football schedule for this year as follows:

October 6, Fort Sam Houston at Austin.
October 13, T. C. U. at Austin.
October 20, date open.
October 24, team leaves Austin for trip.
October 27, Vanderbilt at Nashville.
October 30, Arkansas at Fayetteville.
November 2, Oklahoma at Oklahoma City.
November 9, Haskell Indians at Austin.
November 29 (Thanksgiving), A. and M. at Austin.

The date on October 20 will probably be filled by a game with the Kansas City Medics or the West Texas Military Academy; and there is a date in November to be filled at Austin with either Washington University or Oklahoma.

The arrangement this year is considered excellent by the members of the Athletic Council, both from a financial standpoint and in point of time. The reason that no more Texas schools appear upon the schedule is that most of them have abolished football; and some of the other schools, which we formerly played, have either abolished the game or else so limited their schedule that it was impossible to secure games with them. In view of these difficulties, the manager is to be congratulated upon having arranged such a satisfactory schedule for Texas.

Gym Team to Be Organized and to Make

The gymnasium management announces that this year a gym team is to be added to the others, which represents the University. Up to this time there has been no regular gym team, the so-called team being simply a squad composed of those men who showed up well in the class work and a few men from the upper classes. But this year the gym team is to be carefully selected and special attention is to be given to its training. Much promising material has been secured from various Y. M. C. A.'s over the State; but the most promising of the candidates for the team is Schraf from the University of Toronto. These, with Messrs. Howser, Jones and Wilkerson, and the best of the old men from last year, will make up the team. A trip will be made to Houston, Beaumont and Galveston, and another to Waco, Cleburne and Dallas, and other trips may be arranged later. The performances at each of these places will be given at the gymnasiums of the Y. M. C. A. Performances will also be given here. That the team will be a success, and will reflect credit upon the University, is assured from the excellence of the material available and the competence of those who will train it.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

The Texan believes in reciprocity. As a business proposition, it is the only correct policy, because it is the natural normal way. Most of the people of Austin, and all of the merchants, profess to have the best interests of the University at heart, profess much pride in the fact that our great institution is situated in their city. Most of the people are perfectly sincere in their pride; some of the merchants are, some are not. There is but one course open to students who trade, and that reciprocity; patronize those business men who help to support and further University enterprises; examine the advertising lists of our publications, and act in accordance with the light there gained. The Texan is your enterprise; those merchants who support The Texan are your business friends.

Our cold drinks are pronounced by all to be the best. Smith & Jackson.

T. U. GROWS APACE—EIGHT NEW INSTRUCTORS.

The students on returning from their vacation find, as usual, a few changes in the faculty. Some of the old instructors have been called to other universities, and some are away on leave of absence. Great satisfaction is felt over the success with which all vacancies have been filled, and the University is to be congratulated on the new acquisitions to the faculty.

Mr. Harlan H. York succeeds Mr. Ferguson as instructor in Botany. Mr. York was, in his senior year, assistant in Botany at DePauw University, where he took his B. S. degree in 1903. From 1903 to 1905 he was assistant in Botany in Ohio State University, taking his master degree there in 1905. For the past year he was fellow in Botany at Columbia, and was during the summer assistant Botanist at the Cold Harbor Biological Station, Long Island. Mr. York was to return to his duties as fellow at Columbia and take his Ph. D., but resigned to accept the position he will hold here. Mr. York has the recommendation of the highest authorities in his profession, and is the author of several valuable contributions to his science.

Dr. Warner Fite of the School of Philosophy, who was called to the University of Indiana, is succeeded by Dr. William K. Wright of the same institution. Dr. Wright is a native of Illinois and received his preparatory education at Lake Forest Academy. After attending two years at Amherst College he entered the University of Chicago, where he received his A. B. in 1899. For several years succeeding Dr. Wright engaged in business in Canton, Ill. In 1903 he returned to Chicago as fellow in Philosophy, and this year received the Ph.D. degree magna cum laude. During the past summer Dr. Wright was instructor in Philosophy in the Indiana State University.

Mr. F. E. Metzenthin, who takes Mr. Akerman's place in the School of Teutonic Languages, was born in Berlin, Germany and received his early education in the schools of Austin. He took his preparatory course at Rochester, N. Y., and entered Franklin and Marshall College, where he received his B. A. in 1899. After teaching three years he entered Columbia, where he took the master's degree in 1904. He has also studied several years in Germany. While at Columbia Mr. Metzenthin was a member of the Glee Club, the football, baseball and track teams, and president of the Y. M. C. A., also of the Deutsches Verein. Mr. Metzenthin is a hearty lover of all manly sport, and has very kindly volunteered, in so far as his professional duties will permit, to aid Coach Schenker in developing the raw material on the field.

Dr. William E. Gould, an addition to the Spanish and German faculties, is an authority on finance and a specialist in Latin-American affairs. He obtained his Bachelor's degree at Columbia and his Doctor's degree at Johns Hopkins University, where he was for three years fellow by courtesy. Dr. Gould was for two years a contributor on financial topics to the Baltimore Herald; and has held important positions as journalist and educator. He was offered the position of first secretary to Gov. Hunt of Porto Rico, and later the collectorship of Santo Domingo, but accepted neither.

Mr. Chas. W. Ramsdell is taking the place of Mr. E. C. Barker, who is away on leave of absence. Mr. Ramsdell, who is well known in Austin, took his B. A. degree at this University in 1903, and his M. A. in 1904. During the past year he has been fellow in History at Columbia.

Mr. Clyde Walton Hill, another graduate of our University, has been appointed to an instructorship in English. Mr. Hill has spent one year as teacher of English in our High Schools, and was recently elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

The Texan will, in next issue, give a short sketch of Dr. Philip H. Wynne of the School of Physics, and of Drs. Law and Payne of the School of English.
