HIGHLIGHTS AND TRENDS

The first Robert Lee Sutherland Seminar in May served as highlight and climax of a year of mental health emphasis by the Hogg Foundation. Focusing on the President's Commission on Mental Health and its implications for Texas, the statewide seminar for a thousand people involved professionals, volunteers, and state leaders in a citizens' movement to develop a new plan for mental health in Texas. With Rosalynn Carter as the principal speaker, the Seminar attracted the attention of persons concerned with development of continuing mental health efforts in the State.

The internal flexibility of the Hogg Foundation budget permitted commitment of funds for the promotion of the Seminar long in advance of its date. During this pre-planning period, nearly $3,000 in funds was awarded to support a meeting of the President's Commission on Mental Health Sub-Task Panel on Mental Health of Migrants and Seasonal Farmworkers. Whether serendipitous or foresighted, this meeting resulted in parts of the report of the President's Commission on Mental Health, which was the focus of the first Robert Lee Sutherland Seminar. The Executive Committee of the Hogg Foundation served as advisory committee for the Seminar, which cost approximately $50,000. These funds provided for the two-day seminar and for the pre-planning activities which began months earlier. Forty-five statewide leaders convened and later formed six task forces. Several meetings were subsequently held to discuss and to plan in the areas of comprehensive services for the community; the developing child; youth dilemmas; adulthood and aging; integrating support systems for prevention, rehabilitation, and care giving; and evaluation, training, and research. Former National Advisory Council members and other mental health leaders served as consultants and resource people to the task forces.

The two-day conference provided opportunity for small group considerations as well as open sessions for the general public. In addition to providing for the extensive pre-planning of the Seminar, the funds went to furnish luncheons, refreshments, and an afternoon reception for the 1,000 persons in attendance.

Hogg Foundation efforts continued after the Seminar. A summary document was produced for general distribution, and work was instituted with citizens' groups in order to develop viable modes for carrying out the recommendations emanating from the Seminar. Taking a supportive role in the citizens' movement, the Foundation staff worked with many statewide leaders to help develop a mechanism for action. While it is difficult to assess the impact of the Seminar, it can be stated with certainty that the event has helped prepare Texans for a position in the vanguard of mental health in the future.

SPECIAL FUNDS

Although the Hogg Foundation has, since its inception, administered some special funds, these have evolved in recent years to have significant specificity. The largest is the Ima Hogg Fund, which is dedicated to improved mental health services for children and their families in Houston and Harris County. In its first year the fund provided for a project cooperatively undertaken by the Department of Psychiatry at The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston and by Children's Mental Health Services of Houston. Increased income for the Ima Hogg Foundation will make possible the support of new projects in the 1978-1979 fiscal year.

Another special fund is the Frances Fowler Wallace Fund, money from which goes for the study of the dangerous criminally mentally ill. Undertaken by the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, this study is aimed at improved methods of diagnosis and treatment.

The Mary Yates Fund, given by Mrs. Mary Auler in memory of her mother, offers $25,000 per year for at least five years. This fund supports basic research in psychobiology in the Department of Psychiatry at The University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio.

FRESH DIRECTIONS

The Hogg Foundation undertook several innovative projects during the 1977-78 fiscal year. Three of the most significant follow:

Robert Lee Sutherland Professorship

Establishment of the Robert Lee Sutherland Professorship in Mental Health and Social Policy at UT-Austin has been undertaken under the leadership of the UT-Austin School of Social Work Foundation Advisory Council. The Council is raising funds to endow this interdisciplinary professorship honoring Dr. Sutherland, who was one of the initial supporters of the School. The endowment will attract a distinguished person to the campus for one or two semesters at a time to teach, offer consultation, perform continuing education functions, and work with community agencies. This interdisciplinary professorship should result in closer ties among the School of Social Work, the LBJ School of Public Affairs and the Department of Sociology. Several foundations in the Southwest have joined in the financial efforts to provide the professorship, and the Hogg Foundation is offering a challenge grant to stimulate other individual givers from among the alumni, students, and faculty of the School of Social Work. (See Project #1122 in "Summary of Project Grants.")

Cooperative Programs

A second direction which is innovative for the Hogg Foundation is a cooperative project under the auspices of the Conference of Southwest Foundations. This new cooperative venture will be monitored by staffs of the contributing foundations as well as by the Committee on Cooperative Projects of the Conference. The first one, jointly funded by the Kerr Foundation of Oklahoma and the Hogg Foundation, will go to the Border Research Program at UT-Austin. It will produce basic support for two activities: (1) the study of economic and social development within the Mexico-United States border region, and (2) the organization of a cooperative network of borderland health services under the leadership of faculty at the UT Health Science Center at San Antonio.

Internally Generated Projects

Internal program activities of the Hogg Foundation frequently assume a less visible role than grants to other organizations. The review of new proposals as well as provision of consultation, technical assistance, and liaison with active projects comprise a major portion of the internal workings of the Foundation. Typical of such technical assistance is a recent internal project, the Development of Management and Procedure

Guides for Texas Community MHMR Centers. About $1,700 of internal funds were spent for the employment of several consultants to assist in identifying and appraising the most effective uniform management and accounting procedures for use by MHMR centers throughout Texas. Staff travel to conferences and professional meetings is also frequently necessary. Officers of the Foundation, in their multiple roles as teachers, consultants, researchers, and writers, often visit various locales in the state.

Occasionally, where appropriate, activities generated by staff become major projects in terms of expenditures of personnel and budget. The Robert Lee Sutherland Seminar, already described, was the largest such project undertaken by the Hogg Foundation. Another project which assumed major proportions dealt with voluntarism throughout the country and is discussed below.

While a prominent psychologist from Mexico was in residence at the Foundation this past year, yet another internally generated project, the pilot phase of a research study concerned with coping behavior in Mexican families, was completed with an expenditure of $13,000. The second stage of this project is now being carried out by a Foundation grant to the UT-Austin Institute of Human Development and Family Studies. (See Project #1076 under "Summary of Project Grants.")

Voluntary Associations and Self Assessment

Since its inception the Foundation has worked closely with voluntary associations. In some cases grants are made directly to them; in others, the grant recipient is an agency that relies heavily on volunteer efforts. Foundation professionals have spent many hours as consultants to volunteer groups, determining ways in which individuals and institutions can most effectively contribute to the solution of major social problems. It was in this context that the Foundation and the Association of Junior Leagues entered into an agreement in 1975 to undertake a study of the AJL structure, membership satisfaction, and perceptions of League community impact. This investigation not only offered feedback and evaluation to one of the strongest voluntary associations in the world, but it was also planned to provide a self assessment packet that could be used by any local league and, with some modifications, by any general purpose community action organization. Response to the packet has been overwhelming, with about 60 leagues requesting use of the packet during the first three months of its availability. A monograph on voluntarism which will be of value to both the social science and voluntary action communities will be the final stage of the project. In process are a modified packet for more general use and a monograph on voluntarism in America. The project has been jointly funded by the Foundation and the Association of Junior Leagues, with the former contributing $9,884 and considerable staff time during the 1977-1978 fiscal year.

Crystal City

Still another major internal activity was the publication of Chicano Mental Health, a case study of a rural mental health program which the Hogg Foundation helped to fund in Crystal City, Texas. The monograph was written by a former research associate of the Hogg Foundation. Leaders attempted to create a new model of human services in order to meet the needs of the predominately Mexican-American, migrant clientele. The difficulties confronted--the unrealistic expectations of consumers and funding agencies, the politicization of the health care delivery system at both local and state levels, the pressures on Chicano service providers--are well documented.

Only the writing costs, less than $1,400, appear in this year's budget. The publication and distribution expenditures will appear in the following year's Annual Report. Thus, this internally generated project really resulted from an earlier externally funded project.

CONTINUING PROGRAMS

Traditionally, Foundation professionals have encouraged student placements with our projects and have given special attention to project outcomes. In 1975, however, these elements were brought together in a more formal and intensive manner with the establishment of the Hogg Foundation Fellowships in Mental Health Program Evaluation and a seminar on that topic.

Evaluation Research

Since 1975, two or more fellowships have been awarded each year in a campus-wide competitive process. The goals of the program are (1) to help train students in the relatively new area of evaluation research, (2) to keep Foundation professionals current in the most recent developments in this area, and (3) to identify the factors that contribute to the relative success of selected projects.

The interns and other students participating in the seminar are afforded unique opportunities for field experience. They are urged to take an active interest in one or more of the 70 or 80 projects which are active at any one time. Regular interdisciplinary seminars presented by executive committee members, guest speakers, and the students themselves complement the field experience. The seminars are devoted to the study of principles, practices and problems of evaluation research. Although Foundation professionals seldom do formal evaluations themselves, they do offer advice and technical assistance, sometimes through the students, to those projects requesting it. And, in most instances, grant applications are expected to include an evaluation component. Thus, the program fulfills an educational function as well as the very practical one of helping project administrators document their successes and occasionally their problems. During the 1977-78 fiscal year, the Foundation's direct expenses for this program were $11,958.

Practicum

The Hogg Foundation served as the site for a summer practicum for a Mental Health Education Fellow from the School of Communication. Working under the direction of the professional Mental Health Education staff, she researched, planned, and wrote a pamphlet which was published by the Foundation in its regular series.

Another practicum undertaken by a student in the graduate School of Social Work involved programs with Mexican Americans and other minority persons. The student assisted with various projects funded by the Hogg Foundation.

FUNDING TRENDS

Fifty-seven projects received almost a quarter of a million dollars in funding from the Hogg Foundation during fiscal year 1977-1978. Thirty-three (58%) of these were new projects--the remaining twenty-four being continuing programs which received additional funds during the past year. Many projects continued on active status with the Foundation although they did not receive any monies during 1977-1978.

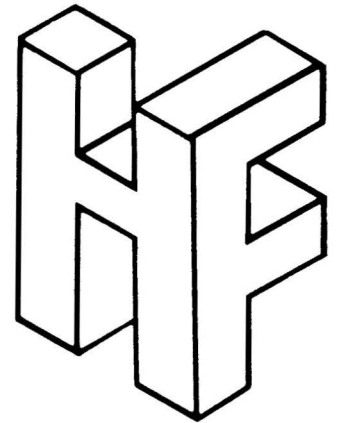

The Hogg Foundation's emphasis on children and minorities has continued through the past fiscal year. Over forty percent of the internal and external grants went directly for programs targeting children. The Foundation's commitment to minority mental health is reflected in the breakdown of project funds by ethnic groups served. Over fifty percent of the 1977-1978 internal and external grant dollars were slated for projects serving a minority population (36% Mexican-American; 16% Black).

The Hogg Foundation maintains a broad perspective on mental health and funds projects impacting on a variety of problem areas. While the bulk (41%) of the project funds during the past year went to projects dealing with mental health in the strict sense, grants were also given to programs with a mental health emphasis in the areas of education, general health, legal issues, economics, human development, and minorities.

A wide variety of institutions received grants from the Hogg Foundation during 1977-1978. The University of Texas System components were the recipients of approximately forty percent of the past year's funding, with The University of Texas at Austin receiving the largest single share (13.5%). The other funds went to other colleges and universities, governmental agencies, voluntary associations and private groups. Seventeen percent of the past year's expenditures were devoted to internal projects of the Hogg Foundation.

MENTAL HEALTH EDUCATION

Although Hogg Foundation grants are restricted to the State of Texas, publications and radio programs may travel across the United States and Europe. And so they do. For more than a quarter of a century the publications of the Foundation, growing out of projects supported or work done by Foundation staff, have been mailed on a regular basis to the "by request" mailing list. Subject topics for the publications reflected those areas where the Hogg Foundation had given support and which could serve as informational guides for action to the general public.

The radio series entitled "The Human Condition" also dealt with a broad arena of human affairs. Interviewees discussed topics ranging from prenatal care to death and dying and from personal difficulties to problems of national impact.

Publications

Publications for the regular mailings are sent without charge to those people on the mailing lists. Special mailings are prepared occasionally for specific audiences. Sample material is also available without cost to the recipient requesting it, and publications are used frequently for special distribution at appropriate seminars and workshops.

During fiscal 1977-1978 three regular mailings and two special ones were sent. The summer mailing (to 7,963 recipients) contained a pamphlet entitled Learning Disabilities in the Future, an article on a Quarter Century Review of the Hogg Foundation, and the Hogg Foundation News. The winter mailing (to 8,248 persons) contained a monograph based on a two-year study sponsored by the Texas Conference of Churches, Life and Death Issues, plus the 1978 Publications List and the Hogg Foundation News. The spring mailing (which went to 8,552 persons) had Some Options for the Aging (a chapter from The Pursuit of Dignity) and the Hogg Foundation News.

One special mailing was a leaflet in both English and Spanish adapted from a television spot on depression, "You and Your Bad Mood." The other was the Regional Foundation Library leaflet, which was mailed to foundations listed in the Texas Directory and to visitors who had used the library.

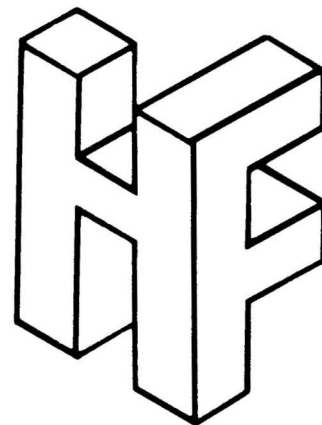

Individual or group mailings in response to requests totalled 165,674 items during the 1977-1978 fiscal year, 131 special distributions were made.

Radio

The radio series entitled "The Human Condition" continued through its seventh year of regular programming. During the 12-month period, 5,154 programs were mailed out to 81 national affiliates of KUT and 72 Texas ones. The series ranked fourth in volume out of all the programs distributed by the Longhorn Radio Network.

LIBRARIES AND CONFERENCE ROOM

Regional Foundation Library

The Regional Foundation Library is one of over 800 regional collections of The Foundation Center. This library contains the Internal Revenue Service 990AR and 990PF information returns for the foundations in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and Louisiana. Also contained in the library are the publications of The Foundation Center and the Council on Foundations as well as over 200 books, 100 pamphlets, and innumerable clippings on foundations, fund raising, and philanthropy. Persons wanting to do research on foundations and proposal writing are invited to visit the library weekdays between 8 and 5.

Hogg Foundation Library

The Hogg Foundation Library, a specialized collection of books, journals, and pamphlets in the area of mental health, community organization, and allied fields, contains approximately 1,500 books and 2,000 pamphlets. Materials range from theoretical works and pamphlets reporting various action programs to documents in psychology, psychiatry, geriatrics, pediatrics, social work, sociology, and education. Several books dealing with the subjects of family life and sex roles in our society have been added this past year.

Library Cassettes

"The Human Condition" cassettes continue to be requested in large numbers. Persons using the cassettes are invited to copy them if they desire to do so for any uses other than rebroadcast. The programs consider mental health in broad aspects. During the fiscal year 1977-78, 1,820 cassettes were sent out.

Conference Room

The Robert Lee Sutherland Conference Room was used for a variety of meetings and seminars throughout the year. Sixty seminars, classes, symposia, and special sessions of statewide, national, and international organizations were held. Planning meetings, report sessions, evaluation seminars, and workshops took place over the months. Subject matter pertained to mental health in its broadest aspect, and sizes of the groups ranged from half a dozen to more than 50.
