SOUTHERN TOURS WILL BE RESUMED BY TEAM UNDER COACH DISCH

ies of Games has been Arranged With Colleges of Other States

After a cessation lasting over a period of ten years, southern tours will be resumed again by the champion Varsity football team of 1922, according to the assertion of L. Theo Bellmont, director of athletics in the University. Coach Disch will take his nine next over several states, the trip as planned to be made during the week of April 22, 1922. Arrangements already been made for contests with the following teams: Tulane University at New Orleans; Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College; and the University of Alabama at Tusculusa.

The last southern trip of a Texas football team was in the year 1912, when the Longhorn team played Auburn School, Tulane University, and Georgia Institute of Technology. Although the out-of-state trips were abandoned, Coach Disch has been successful in Texas, where his record of successive state and Southern Conference championships on diamond has been unequalled.

Many of the "T" men of the spring 1921 will have on their uniforms in the next season and a strong representation abroad is assured for the aggressive Longhorns. In addition, many of the stars of the 1921 freshman aggregation will be eligible for the regular squad of next year, and will furnish a world of likely material, many of which stands a good chance of making the interstate tour.

Labor Conditions Prohibit Student Trip To Houston

According to W. A. Smith, student secretary of the Young Mens Christian Association, the industrial study group which the Y. M. C. A. planned to send to Houston to investigate labor and social conditions will not make the trip, due to the labor depression in Houston and the large number of unemployed already in that city.

The industrial study group had its origin in the meetings conducted here by Sherwood Eddy, the noted evangelist, in February. At this time students interested in industrial and social problems organized for the purpose of study, and for doing work in factories during the summer, in order to gain a first hand knowledge of conditions. Plans had been made for sending one such group to Houston this summer, but the project has been abandoned for the reason already stated.

UNIVERSITY CATALOGUE IS NOW BEING BOUND

Information comes from the assistant registrar's office that the new catalogue has been promised by the end of the week, and it will be ready for distribution by the first of next month at the latest. It has already been printed and is now being re-bound. A law that all state universities must be let to the lowest bidder keeps the catalogue from being printed in the University Press. The present catalogue has been printed by the A. C. Baldwin and Sons Printing Company, which has the contract for state printing.

The registrar's office is keeping a list of those people who write for catalogues, and when it is completed one to each. Besides these, there is a regular list of five hundred, composed of universities and libraries, to which a catalogue is always mailed. People who are interested can get a copy by writing for it, or they are in Austin, by going to the registrar's office and asking for

INITIAL BAND CONCERT WILL BE HELD TONIGHT

Program for First Appearance of Longhorn Band Includes Varied Numbers

Initial efforts of Summer School musicians will be staged for the public in front of the Chemistry Building at 7:45 this evening, when the first Longhorn Band ever organized during a summer session will give its first concert. The band is well balanced and is made up of exceptionally good talent, according to a statement made by Burnett Pharr, director, this morning.

The program will be as follows:
1. Washington Post March.....Sousa
2. Olevine March.....Barnhouse
3. A Night in June—Reverie.....King
Baritone solo by W. L. Newsom
4. Princess of India, Overture.....King
5. Wang Wang Blues.....Johnson
6. Nestle in Your Daddy's Arms.....Heischer
7. American Educator March.....Barnhouse
8. Ain't We Got Fun?.....Novelty Fox Trot
9. Peggy O'Neil Waltz.....Smith
10. Sarasota March.....Barnhouse
11. The Eyes of Texas.

Twenty members comprise the new Longhorn Band. Cornets are V. R. Boyd, A. D. Potter, J. P. Buchanan, C. E. Sonneman, L. C. Stanley, and C. E. Davis; bass, M. L. Baye; saxophones, Brock and Rumsey; clarinets, A. F. Hughes and Oscar Thoreson; altos, Davis Sidney and W. K. Strouther; trombones, Pugh Cowart, J. L. Lane, and Betts; baritone, W. L. Newsom; piccolo, D. L. Smith; drums Masby Pharr.

One Student Has Attended Twelve Summer Sessions

Registered in the University Summer School for the twelfth time since 1907, J. R. Reynolds of Trinity, Texas, is once more working for the degree he expects to get at the end of the session of 1922.

Besides his twelve sessions in summer school, Mr. Reynolds is credited with one year's work in the long session of 1902, his first enrollment in the University of Texas.

Between times, Mr. Reynolds is principal of the Trinity high school where he also teaches government and history, his chief interests here. He had chosen for his university work, courses of especial value to his profession, letting the consideration of degree credit take care of itself. According to his own explanation, he has been coming to school here these many summers in an effort to obtain training valuable in his work, not to get a degree, although that was a part of his general plan. "A degree will get a job but it won't hold one," he declares. "I don't want a job. I want to do everything possible in the one I have."

When J. R. Reynolds' name first went on the registrar's roll in the University of Texas there were only two buildings on the campus, the Main Building and the Chemistry Building. The student watched the construction of the newly planned Woman's Building and as the years went by saw the growth of facilities even to include the shacks, and now is in a fair way to watch the development of the grounds under the new appropriation plan.

For six years Mr. Reynolds has occupied a room in the Y. M. C. A. building which was not in operation when he first came to the University. He is especially interested in the way the Summer School has expanded in enrollment, curriculum, and faculty since those first summers when advanced courses were very few and the choice in any department was strictly limited.

During the years since his high school graduation at Crockett, Texas, Mr. Reynolds has been learning and teaching, alternately. He graduated first from the Sam Houston Normal School and later attended college at Valparaiso, Indiana, and his educational research has continued through all the years of his teaching and principalship in Trinity. He is now forty-four years old and has a home in Trinity.

Spizzenpeps Will Have Novel Banquet Friday Evening

Since the time and tide which wait for no man have taken away the wherewithal to do homage at the shrine of Bacchus, mortal man needs must resort to the footsteps of Epicurus to cement the fellowship that binds kindred minds together. Yea, moreover, since that for which Bacchus stands is only too common at banquets, even in this dry weather, for that if for no other reason, it must be ruled out at the Spizzenpep novelty banquet. Even those who attain to the utmost heights of spizzenpep and pepper must come down to the lower levels to satisfy the cravings of the physical man for the sustenance with which to reinforce "wim, wigor and witality." But though this be true, it is never essential that individuality and personality be lost. Wherefore, at the Spizzenpep novelty banquet as the delicious and appetizing odor of good food well cooked, slowly teases the nostrils of the hungry multitudes, know ye that the plebeian foods eaten at ordinary banquets will not be there. Rather than that, there will be combinations, consolidations, and concoctions that will make the ashes of Epicurus turn green with the realization that friend Epi came to an untimely end before he had an opportunity to taste the best which Mother Nature has in store for famished mortals. The flow of wit and eloquence inspired by this repeat promises to be as elevating and entertaining as that of Mark Twain in his prime, while the subject matter is as varied as the inhabitants of Noah's menagerie. So novel is the whole affair that the least of its novelty is the fact that this wonderful assortment of foods, partaken of while the best music in Austin is softly wafted to the ears of ye hearty diners, is to be obtained for the infinitesimal price of thirty-five cents. The big show opens Friday evening at 6 o'clock, when all Spizzenpeps and prospective Spizzenpeps are to gather on the lawn at the University Baptist Church.

Governors Speak On Lands for University of Texas

First recorded campus speech was delivered by the hero of San Jacinto, Sam Houston, who was also uresident of the Texas Republic. The occasion was the holding of a "great American barbecue" on "College Hill" by the Know-Nothing Party. This party was a very strong factor in the congress and they deemed it necessary to celebrate since they held so much power. Preparations were made for a big barbecue on November 23, 1853. A rude platform was erected on a beautiful hill, about one mile from the capitol, intended as a site for the state University. Over the platform was a wooden arch on which was written: "Americans Shall Rule America."

All of the delegates and their wives and children congregated at the Capitol in a mass and marched out to the grounds. As this immense cavalcade of hungry souls progressed up the hill, lead by the venerable first president of the Republic, a downpour of rain started. Every one broke and ran for the trees on the top of the hill. Some crawled under the long barbecue tables. The rain slackened enough for the first speaker to begin. The audience gathered in front of the platform with umbrellas overhead. For over two hours Sam Houston delivered the first speech on the campus, during which time a small man stood behind him on tip-toe holding an umbrella over his head which protected him from the rain. In his speech Mr. Houston praised the efforts being made to establish an educational system. Under these conditions the first speech was delivered on the University campus, to be followed by many others in years to come.

In his speech, Mr. Houston made mention of the fact that lately the interest in education had slackened and that something must be done. From the years 1839 to 1855 little or nothing was done. The war with Mexico, annexation to the United States, boundary adjustments, financial difficulties and frontier con-

North Texas City May Make Bid For University

Following close upon recent rapid developments in the controversy over adjudication of land prices by the Land Acquisition Board taking over the 135-acre addition to the University campus comes the report that a North Texas city is still eyeing this institution. A statement was made yesterday by an interested property owner whose land is affected by the purchases of a larger campus for the University that shortly after petitioning for the reconsideration of the Land Acquisition Bill by the Legislature was begun, a movement was also started which will result in a strong presentation of the claims of at least one city in North Texas for the State University in case the matter of appropriations for land is reopened.

Presentation of the Land Acquisition Bill for reconsideration at the called session of the Legislature is entirely in the hands of Governor Pat M. Neff, who left Austin today for a trip to Mexico and Corsicana without making any definite statement of his intentions regarding the plea of affected property owners.

Immediately upon a statement by the Governor that the University enlargement question is to be reconsidered by the legislators, the claims of the North Texas city will be given into the hands of the solons and action for removal of the school from its present location begun. As their movement must also be reviewed by the Governor to allow official legislative action it is not expected to take very definite form until the whole question of land appropriation is resubmitted. Cognizance of the desires of the North Texas city in this regard has been taken, however, by some leaders in Austin who are particularly interested in the procuring of the University land.

AFFILIATION OF HIGH SCHOOLS IS ADVOCATED

School Superintendent Who Is Student Cites Advantages of Affiliation

Among superintendents of schools who are taking work in the University Summer School this summer is A. W. Bright, superintendent of the high school at Troup. Like many others who come to the University, Mr. Bright's interests are closely interwoven with those of the school and community in which he serves. Like others, he has his hobbies and his particular avocation, and a statement made this morning by Mr. Bright revealed that his particular line of endeavor is securing for the schools where he teaches, affiliation with the State University, and other colleges and universities. It was through the efforts of Mr. Bright that the schools at Groveton and Trinity, with which during the last ten years he has been connected, have become affiliated. He is now working for the affiliation of the Troup high school and has already succeeded in getting recognition of twelve credits.

In an interview this morning Mr. Bright explained the manner of affiliation as the state department is now emphasizing it. Particular kinds of buildings, class rooms equipped in a certain way, and special apparatus are required. When these are secured, application is made for affiliation in that subject in which requirements have been fulfilled.

In talking of the advantage of an affiliated school to the community,

Industrial Class Hears Speaker On Selling Problems

Lectures on selling and mercantile problems are being delivered this week to classes in the Trade and Industrial School of the University by Mrs. Sarah E. Alexander, employment manager of the Wolff & Marx department store of San Antonio.

Mrs. Alexander has had many years of experience in all phases of merchandise selling and in general store methods, and her talks and demonstrations have been enthusiastically received by students and outside visitors.

On Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of this week Mrs. Alexander lectured on the subjects of "Merchandise," "Style Tendencies," and "Service Features in a Store," respectively. On Friday morning she will talk on the "Care and Display of Stock," and on Saturday she will discuss the topic of "Slow Sellers and Dead Stock."

Many local salespeople, as well as many townspeople, are attending these lectures.

FACULTY OF SUMMER SCHOOL WILL MEET SOON

According to Dr. Frederick Eby, dean of the Summer School, the summer faculty will meet sometime next week, although the exact date is not yet determined. The chief object of the meeting will be hearing the report of the committee on the future work of the Summer School. The purpose of this committee is to survey the working of the summer session and to make recommendations for any changes in its future management that they deem necessary. Serving on the committee at the present time are Dr. R. H. Griffith, and Professors Pearce, Boucher, Marshall, and Pittenger.

"The Summer School is democratically managed," said Dr. Eby, "and every effort is made to secure suggestions for its further improvement. Not only will the report of this committee receive consideration, but any ideas students may have on the management of the Summer School will be gladly received. We try, within reasonable limits, to make the summer session exactly what the students want it to be."

LATIN IS NEEDED AS BASIS FOR ENGLISH SAYS DR. LOFBERG

Classical Language Societies Addressed by Many Educators

Need of Latin as a basis for the study of English was emphasized in the conference of Latin and English teachers which was held in room 203 of the Education Building Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. Dr. J. O. Lofberg, adjunct professor of classical languages, who presided, stated that several conferences would be held, to arrange for closer co-operation between the teachers of ancient and modern languages. He asked Miss Roberta Lavender, adjunct professor of Latin, to tell of her recent visit to several Texas cities.

Miss Lavender said that she had made many addresses in the schools of the state, speaking twenty times in Dallas alone. Her purpose was to show the practical value of Latin, to explain the modern methods of teaching it, and to urge a closer co-ordination in the teaching of the different foreign languages.

She declared that Latin should be taught in a simple, direct way. Students should learn to describe the basic activities of life in Latin and should study the verbs first. "We now teach the things of every day life and from the English backward," she said.

Dr. Law and Dr. Wharey of the English department were called on for short talks. Dr. Law said that the work of university English teachers would be much easier if more students were trained in Latin in high school. He mentioned three ways in which English is indebted to Latin. First, a very large part of our vocabulary is derived from the classics. As a man becomes better educated and more exact in his speech, he uses more and more words of Latin derivation. Second, some knowledge of Latin grammar makes our grammar easier. Third, the Roman literature is valuable to us. Dr. Law declared that we should realize that the Ro-

Dr. H. E. Bourne To Talk on France and the Rhine Frontier

"France and the Rhine Frontier" will be the subject of a lecture to be delivered by Dr. H. E. Bourne, of the Western Reserve University of Cleveland, Ohio, next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the open air auditorium. Dr. Bourne is professor of history in the Western Reserve University, and one of the most eminent scholars in this country. The subject upon which he will speak deals with one of the most important issues in modern history, and he will present it to the audience from a standpoint of broad knowledge. Dr. Bourne is the author of several textbooks on the reserve shelf of the University library, and during the first term of the summer session is giving a course on the "Economic Problems of the French Revolution."

SENSE OF VALUES, SAYS MISS CASIS, IS FIRST

"A good sense of values is the most necessary thing in life," says Miss Lila M. Casis, dean of women during the long session, in her talk at chapel exercises this morning. "One can not have a sense of real values, a knowledge of fundamentals, without a deeply-rooted faith of life as a working basis, and some firm and definite purpose."

Miss Casis went on to discuss the present tendency toward worry, "bluffing," "knocking," and "getting by," mentioning them as signs of a distorted sense of value. "To do what lies before us well, and to remain true to our purpose of life, we must cultivate a certain detachment from non-essentials, and let a great many things go."

To General Jan Christian Smuts, world and Boer war veteran and premier of South Africa has been entrusted the task of reconciling the irreconcilable interests of England, Ulster and Ireland. From his published interviews one would gather that the General has high hopes of at least bringing about a cessation of hostilities. This is an end much to be desired, for further bloodshed in this cause is absolutely futile.

While the early history of English and Irish relations has been far from what it should have been, in recent years the Irish have probably been the most favored of all English dominions. The Irish patriots however, have set themselves to accomplish one purpose, and nothing short of its entire fulfillment seems to be capable of satisfying them.

Should the coveted independence be granted the Irish, it is doubtful if the Irish Republic would be capable of bearing its own burdens. The country is small, comparatively poor and its revenues would fall far short of supporting a first class government. Without the hearty support of Ulster for the new government, internal dissensions would probably beset the path of the Republic. And Ulster does not seem likely to cooperate in the formation of a Republic on the Emerald Isle. With equal determination bordering on fanaticism the Irish Sein Feiners are bent upon subjecting Ulster to the proposed republic.

A problem of such magnitude undoubtedly will bring out the full powers of General Smuts if he is to bring any sort of order out of the conflict of interests. The world should look upon the Irish question as one for the British Government to handle, without the interference of this country or any other outsiders, but this attitude does not preclude a hopeful interest that the present movement will result in better relations between the mother country and her discontented subject.

mans were real people who lived and felt and wrote just as we do today.

Dr. Wharey stated and answered three objections to the study of Latin. First, it is not a dead language, for it is constantly used through English derivatives. Second, it is of practical benefit in the mastery of English. Finally, it is not forgotten in later life, for students are always influenced by it. "My freshmen pupils would not write 'and etc.' or 'the alumnae of B. Hall met' if they had studied Latin," he said.

Mr. Marrs, chief supervisor of high schools of the State Department of Education, declared that Latin must be vitalized and better teachers secured. At present it is just about holding its own in the schools. He said that there are many positions over the state waiting for combination teachers of Latin and Spanish.

Dr. D. A. Penick, professor of classical languages, asked for a closer cooperation between language teachers. "The way we classicists are making love to English and modern language teachers is quite amusing now, but the time is coming when all foreign language teachers will be on the defensive," he declared.

After a few minutes of general discussion, the conference adjourned. A meeting of the teachers of Latin and of the Romance languages will be held in the same room this evening at 7 o'clock. This meeting also will be open to the public.

for the establishment of one or two universities."

The most important feature of the Fifth Legislature was the passage of a law on January 31, 1854, to the effect that a public school system be established in the state of Texas. Honorable James K. Holland and Governor E. M. Pease are the two important benefactors of the bill. As the interest in education grew and wealth, also, it was seen that to establish a State University would be laying the foundation of the public free school system. The long consideration, which consumed very much time of the Sixth and a considerable part of the time of the Seventh Legislatures, resulted in the establishment of the university.

AFFILIATION OF HIGH SCHOOLS IS ADVOCATED

Mr. Bright told how it was necessary for pupils to come from surrounding unaffiliated schools to the affiliated school, though they had been graduated from the school in their own town. He pointed out that there might be no other advantage connected with this necessary step except the securing of a diploma from a school with affiliated credits; that there might be decided inconveniences and disadvantages for pupils who must leave their homes to do one or two years extra work, or who must come to the University for entrance examinations.

Mr. Bright has a very strong opinion on the subject of grades. During the interview when asked what work he was doing and to what purpose, he answered that he was taking Education, Economics, and Latin, and for the sake of the work itself. His grade he said made no difference to him. Then he launched into a discussion of the distinction between the grade estimated by the teacher and the real grade of the student. "A grade shows what the teacher thinks of the student," he said, "and it may be over estimated or underestimated. But the real grade of the student is the degree of ability he secures in apply what he has studied. We may forget nine-tenths of what we learn but we really benefit to that extent to which we can use the knowledge we have secured."

Mr. Bright ended the interview by saying that he has no desire for the lime-light but that he doesn't mind talking about that which he knows.

SEED ANALYSTS TRAINED

Training in seed testing is offered by the Department of Field Crops of the University of Missouri, facilities being obtained in the government laboratory maintained in connection with that department. Analysts for seed companies of Missouri and surrounding states are now in attendance at these classes. The work consists in testing seeds for germination, examining samples for weed seeds, and the identification of weeds.

CIRCULARS SENT OUT

Circulars have been sent out from Dr. Eby's office to county superintendents all over the state, giving the particulars about courses on rural school methods and county school administration that are to be offered here next term. It is hoped that by this means a large number of county superintendents will become interested in coming to the University and gaining new ideas for their work.

Demand for Employees in the Business World

There is now as always a demand for employees in the field of business. Business does not get so slack that expert accountants, bookkeepers, and stenographers are not needed. The Nixon-Clay Commercial and Business College receives calls almost daily for Bookkeepers who have been trained by them. Their graduates are employed by some of the biggest concerns in the State, and they are making good. This is borne out by the fact that these concerns send back for more graduates of the Nixon-Clay college when in need of commercially trained people to take charge of important positions.

The present need in the business field is for employees with a sound education. The young man or young woman who enters business college with a good education as a foundation to build upon always finishes the course in a short time. It is an easy matter for them to master the principles of any business course. The person who has an education that goes beyond the business training is the one who has the greater chance for promotion, they are the ones that are sought after more, and are the ones who rapidly rise. The school teacher who wishes to try something more remunerative can complete a business course in a short time. The cost is low—remarkably low when compared to the cost of attending any other college. The great beauty about being a Nixon-Clay graduate, however, is that positions are always waiting for them.

We will be glad to talk the matter over with you. Nixon-Clay Commercial College, Austin, Texas.

STOMACH TROUBLE

There are many different kinds, such as gastritis, indigestion, ulcers, abnormal amount of acid or gastric juice, etc. All forms of stomach trouble are due to abnormal supply of nerve energy supplied to the stomach and its glands. The CAUSE of this disturbed nerve function is a partial obstruction of the nerves at the spine due to the small bones being out of alignment through which the nerves pass. CHIROPRACTIC Spinal Adjustments correct the small bones to normal alignments which frees the nerves from all impingement, and the stomach trouble will no longer exist.

PAINTINGS AND BATIK WILL BE SHOWN TODAY

Y. W. C. A. To Stage Unique Demonstration and Art Exhibit

Batik, permadello and enamelac and oil and water color paintings of Austin supplemented by electric fans, beautiful decorations, and punch, will be featured at an industrial art exhibition to be held under the auspices of the Young Womens Christian Association Thursday afternoon, July 7, from 5 to 6:30, in Main Building 104 and 106.

The exhibition and demonstration of batik will be in charge of Miss Virginia F. Shearer, instructor in home economics. Batik is a Javene word applied to dyeing and designing by wax. It has been used for several centuries by the Javene, Japanese, and Hindus.

Miss Lida E. Hooe, teacher of art in the Summer School will carry on an exhibition of permadello and enamelac. Miss Hooe is especially skilled in this work. The work for the exhibition has been done largely under her supervision in the University Summer School.

Much interest has been manifested in the illustrated discussion of posters and their composition by Miss Edna Collins.

The paintings by Austin artists will be in charge of Mr. Samuel Gideon, associate professor of architectural design and architectural history. Works of Miss Downie, Mrs. Huddle, Mr. Everett and Mr. Gideon will be exhibited.

Material for the exhibit in batik, permadello and enamelac was obtained from the art department of the University of Arkansas, the actual work, however, being done by children in the Jersey City schools.

ter session and who will be editor of the Longhorn Magazine for next year, is visiting on the campus.

The weekly play hour was held on Wednesday evening on Jordan Field. A large number of students attended, and the usual sports and games were enjoyed.

Judge J. C. Townes, dean of the School of Law, and Judge I. P. Hildebrand, acting dean of the Law School for the first summer term, are in attendance at the State Bar Association's annual meeting at San Antonio this week. Eminent jurists from all parts of Texas gathered in the Alamo City on Tuesday, July 5, and in their daily sessions there have heard from some of the most prominent students of the law in the state.

Both Judge Townes and Judge Hildebrand will remain in San Antonio until the conclusion of the sessions of the association, after which the former will go for a trip out of the state and the latter will return to resume his duties at the University.

STUDENTS REQUEST COURSE

A petition signed by eighteen students of Business Administration 23, a course in business law, requesting that the spring term of that course be added to the regular curriculum for the second term of the summer session, is now in Dean Eby's hands. The fall and winter terms of the course are offered for this term of Summer School, but no provision had been made for its completion. Dean Flowers of Baylor University is the instructor. Dr. Eby states that the petition is now under consideration.

PROTESTS ASK LAND BILL RESUBMISSION

Sixty-eight Property Owners Request Intercession of Legislature

Sixty-eight property owners whose land is included in the purchases authorized by the Land Acquisition Bill passed at the last legislative session have presented to Governor Pat M. Neff a petition asking for the resubmission at the called session of the legislature of the entire enactment. The bill, as now operative, allows the purchase of the 135-acre tract north and east of the University on which a committee, headed by Will C. Hogg and Secretary J. H. W. Williams, is now at work obtaining deeds for its addition to the campus.

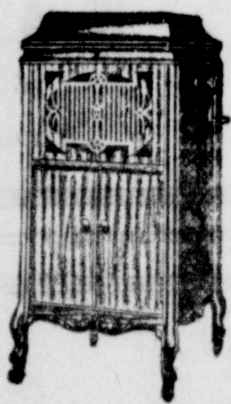

No action has been taken by the governor on the petition as presented, and no promises of action were given to the petitioning committees of property owners, according to a statement made at the office of the governor this morning. Just what recommendations will be made by the chief executive to the legislature in regard to the whole controversy over University lands has not yet been determined, and no announcement of policy will be made by the governor until a date nearer the opening of the called session on July 18.

The petitioners ask for reconsideration of the acquisition bill to the end that the property owners in the 135-acre tract which is being added to Varsity's campus shall receive for their property just compensation under the constitution and laws of the state.

Claims previously made by women in the affected district in interviews with the governor are reported in the petition, which states that the Land Acquisition Board has fixed unfair prices for the sale of the property to the state. The amounts set are adjudged by the petitioners to be lower than market prices, and in some cases so unjust as to be confiscatory.

The lack of means of the property owners in the 135-acre region is emphasized, and the petition concludes: "Wherefore, your petitioners pray that your excellency submit to the legislature at the called session, a reconsideration of said law, that the wrongs herein complained of may be prevented and that proper measures may be taken by the Legislature to the end that your petitioners shall receive for their property that just compensation guaranteed them under the constitution and laws of our State."
