Virginian Governor Founds Progressive State University

Dr. C. F. Arrowood, professor of the history and philosophy of education, will deliver a public lecture on "Thomas Jefferson and University Reform" in Garrison Hall Auditorium at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, January 8.

Dr. Arrowood will discuss the great reforms in Universities during the latter part of the eighteenth century and the first part of the nineteenth century. During this period new subjects were introduced into schools, such as history, chemistry, botany, and an advance in the study of mathematics. Freedom of belief and teaching was secured for the schools.

Led Reform

Thomas Jefferson had a leading part in the reform in this country. Soon after the revolution, as governor of Virginia, he tried to introduce reforms in William and Mary University. From the time he went to France in 1783 until he founded the University of Virginia, he was a close friend of the schools in this country and in Europe, especially keeping in close touch with all the most progressive universities in Europe.

After his second term as president, Jefferson set about founding the University of Virginia in which he put his progressive ideas into effect. The most distinct features of the University of Virginia were its high standards and freedom of teaching and study. These reforms were effected as a result of securing principles from Europe a faculty of the very highest rank and by inducing the Virginians to support their University liberally while they left the conduct of its affairs to its officials.

Received Degree

Dr. Arrowood received his bachelor of arts degree from Davidson College, North Carolina, bachelor of divinity from Union Theological Seminary, Virginia, master of arts from Rice Institute, Houston, and his doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Chicago. He was a Fellow of Rice, 1918-1920, a member of the faculty of Southwestern Presbyterian University, Clarksville, Tennessee, 1920-1923, member of Rice faculty, 1924-1928, and has been at The University of Texas since that date. He taught at Columbia during the summer of 1928.

School and Society, Peabody Journal of Education, Southwestern Historical Journal, Dictionary of American Biography, are among the publications to which Dr. Arrowood has contributed. He is the author of the book "Thomas Jefferson and Education in a Republic." He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, American Association for the Advancement of Science, and is a member of the abstracting staff of "Social Science Abstracts."

Miss Dodson stated that the Holinshed Chronicle of England is the principal source of the plot, but that Shakespeare drew also on Daniel's "The History of the Civil Wars." Shakespeare follows the story of the plot in Holinshed rather closely, compressing it and selecting from it as he saw fit.

Museum Proposed In Bill Drafted For Legislature

Plan Calls for Erection Of Building Adjacent To Campus

Need Stressed

Six Other Measures Formed For Introduction To Solons

A museum building to be known as the Texas State Museum building will be constructed on ground on or adjacent to the University campus if a bill to be introduced to the state legislature by Representative-Elect T. H. McGregor of Austin at its next meeting is passed by that body. The bill in its present form calls for the erection of the building on "at least three acres of ground on or adjacent to the campus of the University of Texas" to be constructed in such a manner that "additions thereto may be made as occasion requires."

Need Shown

"Such buildings and additions," Mr. McGregor continued, "are to be sufficiently commodious, ample and comprehensive, as to furnish adequate office and exhibition space, and for the purpose of establishing, building, and housing a museum in keeping with the magnitude of Texas, the needs and developments of her educational institutions and system of education."

"The buildings are to conform to the best plans of the outstanding museums of this country in arrangement for lighting, heating, ventilating, and in exhibition cases, laboratories, lecture rooms and other technical provisions and equipment. This museum will tie together all of the educational institutions of the state and give to the system a harmony which it now lacks. The museum shall be open to the general public at least three hours every day of the week and on Sundays in the afternoon."

To Spread Knowledge

All collections and properties shall be utilized to the purposes of a state museum in such ways, the bill states, as are usual in museums of natural history, and human arts and industries. The museum is to be used to the ends of spreading and diffusing knowledge among the people, of promoting effective teaching and of furthering scientific research; of promoting co-operation between the museum and all institutions of learning within the state for their common purposes and interests.

"This provision will make this institution of inestimable value to the common schools of the state," Mr. McGregor added. "The museum will be managed by two members of the board of regents, the state superintendent of public instruction, and the citizens from the state at large."

Mr. McGregor stated that much of the credit for formulating the bill belongs to Dr. J. E. Pearce, professor of anthropology in the University, and an authority on such institutions. Dr. Pearce especially helped in the technical and scientific provisions of the bill.

The bill providing for the erection of the museum building was one of six drafted by Mr. McGregor to be introduced to the legislature at its next meeting. The other five bills provide for the beautification of the Colorado River front; the payment of Austin's state taxes to the city for public improvements; the construction of a state office building adjoining the present office structure; the plotting and locating of unused state lands situated within the city limits; and official steps leading to the 1936 Centennial celebration.

In Defense

GAMBLING DEVICES in the vicinity of the campus have been taken up, and so far as The Daily Texan is concerned such action has justified its editorial plea against the conditions existing in the neighborhood. With the removal of the devices goes the need for further campaign.

Yet regrettable complications have arisen with unwarranted statewide publicity. Misstatements and innuendoes have been rife. In the first place, the tone of the Texan's editorials has been that of an appeal to the community spirit of both students and shopkeepers, urging that any such unwholesome atmosphere was sure to prove detrimental to both the student body and the merchants in the University neighborhood. There was no venom implied or intended.

Again, the Texan has never claimed that gambling was carried on in fraternity houses. Statements which appeared in the state press in regard to such conditions among the fraternities could not have emanated from the columns of this paper.

If the best information that the Texan can gather may be considered, gambling is not carried on in fraternity houses, or in other houses in which University students are lodged.

One editor says that with more than 25,000,000 automobiles in this country there's no chance for Bolshevism, which only goes to show that he's never heard the sentiment of the man driving the car at the tail end of the procession.

Business 'It'

THAT certain indefinable something called personality by some and "it" by others is coming more and more into prominence in the business world. It has long been recognized as almost indispensable to social achievements. Today it is drawing salaries and putting over big propositions, much success that once was attributed to Luck is now being credited to personality. It is the power which enables a person with a mediocre scholastic record to draw a greater salary than the one whose college accomplishments were great. Even colleges are acknowledging the value of the cultivation of this much sought after possession as is represented by the School of Commerce in New York University having a course designed particularly for men and women in the business world. And why should not training be received in a matter of such potential worth?

It is wondered, however, if the problem of learning how to have a good personality can be solved in a classroom in a process of teaching as is the case with other subjects. After all, is it not a matter of being natural, and of acting one's true self? And can it be improved only by a conscious effort on the part of the individual to improve and amplify his inherent pleasing qualities and to suppress and finally eliminate the undesirable ones. Sincerity and naturalness give to a person the greatest charm and this can only be the product of habitual thinking and acting.

Modern theories of human behavior are authority for the thought that qualities of bashfulness, aggressiveness, force, personal charm, can be studied in their fundamentals and made to become a pleasing part of a person's personality. It is not a rare piece of jewelry to wear on special occasions, but a mode of living which responds to every situation arising in life. It cannot be bought with money, or taught in a classroom, or gained from reading books on personal magnetism. It can be secured by beauty of thought, consideration of and interest in others, the good humor to give and take with a smile in each case.

The process is slow. It even may be painful, but the rewards are great in personal satisfaction and achievement.

Art for Study

IN THE UNIVERSITY Extension Bulletin, No. 3036, there is presented an article by P. H. Land dealing, among other things, with the place of art in the life of people today as represented by beautiful pictures. Some interesting statements are made by the author.

To know and appreciate pictures, it is necessary to study them. Art appeals to human beings whether they know very much about it or not, and the taste may be cultivated. It goes without saying, however, that one cannot be forced to love art if there is lacking the true spirit of the creation. Few people have access to the study of original paintings, and, even in the case of copies, there is little time and opportunity for a study of but few of them. To know a picture well, one must live with it, view it in different moods and with different thoughts. Only then can its intrinsic beauty of expression be realized.

One who deprives himself of the pleasure of studying beautiful pictures truly misses one of the joys of life.

THE CLARK DECISION

On the grounds that only constitutional conventions have the power to ratify amendments which transfer to the United States powers hitherto reserved to the states, Federal Judge William Clark handed down a decision that the eighteenth amendment was invalid.

This decision will undoubtedly be seized upon by the wets as an opening through which to launch attacks upon the amendment which proves contradictory to their purposes. It is very improbable that the higher courts will uphold this decision. At various times they have passed upon phrases of the amendment and have held it legal.

The real significance of this decision lies not upon the immediate effect on the status of prohibition, the validity of enforcement or future developments, but in what effect it will have upon future amendments to the Constitution. It brings to light the question of which is the better agent of ratification—state legislatures or constitutional conventions.

The American system has been characterized by its rigidity, in the explicitness of the constitution. The adoption of the legislative method of amending the constitution was intended to lighten this force of tradition which the constitution placed on us.

As a matter of practical politics, the backward step of returning to the convention system might prove impractical. It would undoubtedly place an obstruction in the channels of change. Had the convention system been adopted to pass the eighteenth amendment, however, the process of ratification would have more certainly crystallized public opinion in behalf of the law, and our nation might have been spared the agonies of reaction which have characterized the era of the Volstead act.

Judge Clark's theory calls not for protagonists or antagonists, but for some very serious and long thinking.

A beard-growing contest has 2,500 entries among University of Illinois students, according to a news item in the New York Daily News. Panic seized the local barbers and druggists, who offered $500 to the contest officials, who nevertheless refused to stop the contest. Spot those twenty-five hundred using that force and perseverance in a cause.

International debaters are now moving through the American colleges. Two teams from England, one from Scotland and one from Germany are scheduled for a hundred engagements by the National Student Federation of America. One member of the Scottish team assured his social success by appearing in kilts, which he intends to wear throughout his tour. The first debate was held on October 21st, with Bates College, over the National Broadcasting Company. The Scottish team attacked the proposition that "Thrift is not virtue."

BIG NEWS

Selection of the ten biggest news stories of 1930 were made by Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press; and Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press. First on the lists was the finding of the remains of the Andree expedition in the Arctic.

Following his first choice Mr. Bickel named the November elections, Russia's political and religious experiments, the Indian upheaval under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi, Bobby Jones' triumphs in four major golf tournaments, the South American Revolution, the Columbus Penitentiary Fire, the Italian Earthquake, the crash of the giant dirigible R-101 in France, and the birth of a son to Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Mr. Cooper's selections, after the Andree story, were the trans-Atlantic flight of Coste and Bellonte, Bobby Jones' golf triumphs, the Gandhi movements in India, the birth of the Linbergh baby, the Columbus prison fire, the American drought, the discovery of planet X, the return of King Carol to the throne of Rumania, and the crash of the R-101.

LIQUOR IN GALLONS

Texas drank 131,250 gallons of legal whisky in 1930, on doctor's prescriptions, a gain of 1150 gallons over the preceding year, under authority of the state prohibition law.

This legal use of liquor was made possible through 1,050,000 cases of illness on which physicians' prescriptions were written.

From January 1 to August 31 of the past year, 2513 physicians were granted state license to prescribe liquor. For the same period of 1929 2502 doctors had been given the same authority. For the final four months of the year just closed, 133 more liquor permits of all kinds, including an estimated 112 physicians, completed the total of 2,625. For all of 1929, there were 2602 doctors authorized to prescribe whisky.

HAROLD TEEN—AN EARFUL FROM THE ORACLE

By ALAN LOMAX

Mycilla dyes her locks tis said,
But that's a foul aspersion.
She buys them black, therefore they need
No subsequent immersion.
—from the Greek of Lucillus.

Since January 11, 1930, when the Ensley bank of Birmingham, Alabama, failed, a wave of failures such as the country has scarcely ever known has swept the country frightening the officials of the remaining banks by the proximity of the wave to their own sacred skirts. The Federal Reserve has given out a report stating that in the first eleven months of the past year 981 banks with deposits amounting to 520 millions of dollars were suspended. "The American Banker" for December estimated that in that month 140 banks failed (the amount of their deposits was not available).

Many men who have observed events cannily for many years say that the present depression that has caused the failure of so many banks, companies, and corporations, and the impoverishment of so many individuals is due to the fact that the Federal Reserve, deciding that prosperity and speculation was too rampant in this country, withdrew eighty percent of the money out of circulation. Thus the Federal Reserve sent out an order saying that they would issue money on no notes that did not have collateral of the first class back of them. The banks could then lend money to only the few individuals who had bonds or un-mortgaged property, the wheels of the small industry were slowed down or completely stopped. Since modern business is essentially an elaborate system of lending and borrowing, business was stopped. How can we recover from this depression unless we have money to pull us out of the hole...

With startling imagery, with stark and frightening similes did Sir James Hopwood Jeans, famed astronomer and mathematician of Cambridge, bring home to his audience his theory of the universe. "It is easy to blow up a soap-bubble, but far less easy to keep it in existence for more than a minute or two—after that it is likely to disappear. I hope I shall not startle you too much if I say that the universe is like that... expanding, I might almost say—exploding, at a terrific rate... The material universe appears to be passing away like a tale that is told... Leave only three wasps alive in the whole of Europe and Europe will be more crowded with wasps than space is with stars... Our small earth is like a ship on an empty ocean."

Robert German, great musical worker, finished his shift in a Berlin steel plant, went home, donned his best suit, stuck his huge tie-pin in his flaming tie, brushed his shining derby on his coat sleeve, patted it firmly down upon his bullet head. Enjoying the sun and his fine clothes he strolled slowly back to the steel foundry, chatted nonchalantly with the foreman on the edge of a blast

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

Clipping a second would save 25,000 hours

A second saved here—an unnecessary step cut out there—on such close attention to detail rests the success of modern industry. Nowhere is this more strikingly shown than in the telephone business.

In accounting work for instance, an improved method that clips just one second from the time required to handle one toll ticket would have great results.

Applied throughout the System—handling an average of more than 90,000,000 toll tickets each month—it would effect a monthly saving of 25,000 hours!

Such "little" things often are tremendously important in so vast an industry. That is one reason why men find Bell System work so fascinating.

The opportunity is there!

Reviewed Today

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN," D. W. Griffith's drama of the life of the civil War president which is current on the Queen Theater screen, an impressive series of finely created episodes which give, as in an etching, the character of the great Emancipator, revealing him as the man, the dreamer, and the lover, with emphasis on only incidental though none the less significant instances of his statesmanship and wartime activities. Walter Huston, an admirable actor, succeeds well in portraying the title role, making himself appear much more like the traditional figure of Lincoln than might be expected and presenting him as a human being both strong and gentle. Mr. Huston, and possibly Mr. Griffith's direction, makes the first part of the film very good, notably the sequences having to do with Lincoln's love for Ann Rutledge. The picture of tender love there given has not been surpassed on the screen. The last half of the film deals with Lincoln's presidency and is less effective; it is fragmentary in form and suffers through the natural limitations of the screen in dealing with such material. No medium, however artistic, is huge enough to lend expression to matter of such vastness. Mr. Griffith, who seems to be a "director's director" rather than a popular one, does the best he can, which is excellent, and he is therefore to be granted the license which he takes with certain historical facts. The approach to this life of Lincoln is one of reverence comparable with that accorded only such things as the Passion Play, and it is in such a light of reverence that the film is best appreciated. Actors other than Mr. Huston are

"RUNAWAY BRIDE," featuring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, will occupy the Texas Theater screen today only. The story has to do with a certain girl who refuses to go through with the marriage after eloping with a man and who, in seeking to hide herself from him, gets into difficulties with a bunch of gangsters. Follows employment, obtained under false pretenses, as a cook in another young man's home, the result being that she falls in love with the young man, and he with her. Ain't love grand? The young man is wounded piteously in a fight with the gangsters, but the police arrive in time to save the day. The bride takes care of herself.

BASEBALL MEETING
ALL VARSITY baseball men meet in Gregory Gym 210 Wednesday night at 7:15 o'clock. Important.
WM. J. DISCH.

The Dopehead dropped back into his old habit yesterday and ambled over to Gregory Gym at basketball practice time. And what he saw there probably would not be printed if he wrote it and surely would not be believed if it were printed. Gentlemen, ten minutes' view of our basketball team and the Dopehead's vocabulary failed him completely. He can say no more: he can only point a shaking finger at Fomby, Taylor, etc., and whisper hoarsely: "Watch them Thursday night."

Improvement of the Longhorns during the holidays was so great that they really didn't look like the same team. Steer fans, both hot and lukewarm, will be surprised when they see their team in action against the Razorbacks. The slow-moving, erratic, ponderous machine which looked ill against Denton and actually bedridden against Centenary has changed into a fast-breaking, fighting five which will give the champion Porkers more than they can digest and how much do you want to bet?

A big factor in the improved showing of Walker's crew is the revived ability of Bull Elkins to shove the pelota through the net. Bull couldn't get his sights set early in the season, but now he is tossing them through in very commendable style. The whole squad has improved in the basket-shooting art.

One big advantage the Steers have this season lies in the fact that their offensive strength is not tied up in any one man. In '29 Holly Brock furnished most of the power; last season Big "Un" Rose was the scoring ace. Opponents covered these men and subsequently blanketed a big portion of the Texas scoring power.

But what can a team do when they go up against such a crew as Earl Taylor, Jim Fomby, Bull Elkins, and Wyatt Taylor? Each of these men are almost equally dangerous, both on long and short shots. It is impossible for an opposing team to concentrate on any one of them without leaving the others open, with disastrous results to said opponent. Even if they do stop the regulars, John Tullis, Heinie Hopkins, or Ed Fricke is liable to slip in and toss a few dozen tallies. Looks like a clear case.

Coach Walker, who saw the Razorbacks play St. Louis University last Saturday night, is not overly optimistic regarding his team's chances against Bassett's five. Here is his impression of the Porker five, in the words of Wilburn Van Fleet, athletic publicity director:

"Coach Fred Walker of the Longhorns was in St. Louis last Saturday night when the Razorbacks played the St. Louis University quintet, and he brought back the opinion that the Longhorns will need all their new found scoring strength to head off the invaders and retain a chance at the conference title. The Arkansas team this year, Walker said, plays a different brand of ball than formerly used, having discarded the slow breaking, delayed offense, for a fast breaking, slashing type of game that has been typical of Texas during the last three seasons. He also reported that two regulars of the champion quintet of last year spent most of the time on the bench Saturday, while a couple of sophomores took their places in the regular line-up, indicating that the Porker coach had drawn some valuable material from the freshman crop of last year. Pinchren and Kendall are the two most dangerous men on the Arkansas Club, Walker said."

LADIES' CLUB TO MEET
University Ladies' Club will hold its monthly business meeting Wednesday afternoon, January 7, at the Faculty Women's club according to a statement made by Mrs. I. I. Nelson. No plans for a program have been made, but Mrs. Robert Stayton, chairman of the club, will conduct the meeting.

Walker Whips Squad Into Shape

By WELDON HART
Texas Sports Editor

Fred Walker's Longhorn basketball team, who along with the Arkansas Razorbacks will share the honor of lifting the lid from the 1931 Southwest Conference basketball season here Thursday and Friday nights, were highly elated when the 4 o'clock whistle tooted Monday afternoon, for it brought to an end one of the toughest scrimmages of the season. With only two more workouts possible before the opening Porker tilt, Walker chose to give his men the heavy stuff Monday, with only light drills scheduled for today and Wednesday.

First String Shines
Featuring Monday's workout was the team-work and goal-tossing of the first string five, Earl Taylor, Fomby, Elkins, Wyatt Taylor, and Ingram. This quintet scored at will against any combination which could be chosen from the remainder of the squad.

Thursday night's game will mark the formal dedication of Gregory Gym, and naturally the Steers are anxious for a victory. Their road is apt to be a rough one, for Chuck Bassett brings a Razorback crew which are on the trail of their sixth straight conference cage championship. Their showing to date, while not on a par with the great Hog fives of other years, has been strong enough to justify many critics in picking them to win again. A fine crop of sophomores, inexperienced but brilliant, are the lads Bassett is relying on, and reports have it that both Holt and Creighton, letterman and stars of last season, are in danger of being benched in favor of their junior rivals.

Steers Underdogs
Unimpressive showing of the Steers in pre-holiday tilts has given rise to the general impression that Walker will not have a pennant contender this season. However, the Maverick mentor may yet outshine the wise ones who figure that the 1931 race lies between Arkansas, T. C. U., and S. M. U. The Steers developed phenomenally during the Christmas season. Admittedly there was decided room for improvement, but close followers of the Longhorn cagers are confident that the world in general and the Arkansas Razorbacks in particular are due for a surprise Thursday night.

Ranking favorites in the conference chase to date include the Frogs, the Ponies, and the Porkers, with Texas, Rice, Baylor, and A. & M. already figured out. It is true that the showing of the four latter clubs thus far has been nothing to scream about, while T. C. U. and S. M. U. in particular have loomed up strong in bowling over a number of weaker opponents.

Two other games besides the two Porker-Steer tilts are on this week's cage bill. The Rice Owls go north, meeting the Horned Frogs in Fort Worth Friday night and the Mustangs in Dallas Saturday night. These games will give a definite line on the comparative strength of the T. C. U. and the S. M. U. fives.

Pirates Tounce Farmers, 34-30

Special to The Daily Texan.

GEORGETOWN, Jan. 5.—Finishing in a slashing, driving flurry, the Southwestern Pirates nosed out John Reid's Texas Aggies here Monday night by a score of 34-30 after two over-time periods had been played. Captain Red Whittle, and Seamans, along with Alva Baker, freshman, led the closing onslaught to take the lead away from the Aggies and finally score one field goal and two free shots in the closing overtime period.

The first half of the encounter was featured by the close defensive tactics of both quintets, the score at the half being 9-9. The Aggies sprang into the lead at the start of the second half, but sensational work by Baker and Seamans ended the regulation period in a tie.

The first overtime period found the Pirates scoring three points, but a sensational field goal by Beau Bell, Aggie center, and Art Veltman's free shot tied the score again.

Beau Bell was acting Aggie captain in place of Shiro Hoke, high springing center, who returned to College Station yesterday. The two teams play again Tuesday night in Southwestern Gym at 7:30 o'clock.

Bill Ferguson spent the Christmas vacation at his home in Cuero.

Wilbur Knox went to his home in San Antonio for the Christmas holidays.

Track Squad Passes 100 Mark

Equipment has been issued to 105 track men, about half of whom are varsity prospects. Manager Rue Walker said Monday. Workouts will be held regularly from now on, with the coaches on duty from 2 until 6 o'clock each afternoon. Each candidate will work out for about an hour.

Freshmen who wish to become freshman track managers call Rue Walker at 6250 or 7151. Two or three numerals will be awarded at the end of the season.

Regular meetings of all track candidates will be held at 5 o'clock each Friday afternoon, and intersquad competition on Saturday will begin in three or four weeks. Coach Clyde Littlefield has announced.

Introduction of the 440-yard relay into all 1931 track meets will add a spicy feature to cinderpath programs, in addition to affording a larger number of sprinters a chance to letter. This ace, in which each man runs 110 yards, has not been a part of Southwest Conference track meets for some time.

Places in Schools Filled By Committee

Requests for 21 teachers to fill vacancies in various schools were sent to the teachers' appointment committee in December. Miss Miriam Dozier, secretary to the committee, announced Monday.

Failure to find teachers for positions resulted in only two cases. No one could be found in answer to the requests from a Nevada high school nor from a junior college in Texas, which wanted a teacher of geology. Miss John Cunningham accepted a position as an English teacher in Mullin, and Mrs. L. B. Thomas contracted for a position as an English teacher in Wink. Both are former University students.

So far in January four calls for teachers have been received.

J. D. Matlock returned Monday from Denton, where he attended the funeral of his grandmother, Mrs. O. E. Davis, Saturday morning.

Recent guests at the Delta Zeta house were Frankie Thompson of Jasper, Mary Hammond of the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, and Virginia Rich of Katy.

Bill Richards spent the holidays at his home in Lockhart.

C. H. Miller spent the vacation in Cuero.

EARL TAYLOR LEADING STEER SCORERS TO DATE

When the Arkansas Razorbacks invade Gregory Gymnasium Thursday and Friday nights for their two-games series with the Longhorns, they will find that the Steer cagers have a powerful, point-scoring team. The Steers have piled up 489 points in the twelve games they have played against non-conference rivals, for an average of 40 points a game.

Earl Taylor, tall forward for the Longhorns, leads in individual scoring with 137 points to his credit. Captain James Fomby is second with 118 points and Bull Elkins is third with 62 points.

Captain Fomby and Earl Taylor are tied in field goal points, each having 51. Elkins is next in line with 28.

Earl Taylor also tops the list in free throws with 37. Captain Fomby is second with 16, and W. Taylor is second with 10.

The Longhorns' opponents have scored 390 for an average of 32.5 points a game.
