

Dear Mr. Stenzel,

Many thanks come down here Tuesday - October 16 - and stayed until yesterday. I have never seen her look better. She is in fine spirits and excellent health. I told her that I was writing to you soon, and she sent her best regards and thanks you again for your help on the fossils. She is going to Holland soon to do some work.

We took Henry and examined the white stone that I wrote you about. Henry and Mr. Osborn say that it is a fine stone deposit, occurring at intervals in the hill, and that some ancient sculpture probably simply improved on a somewhat naturally carved surface. I don't know. We also drove to Avebury, a small village surrounded by ancient stone works and enclosed for five miles with an oval shield stones, - some of them larger than those at Stonehenge and all of them equally as old. We also took many hours to search for Trilobites Caesare and to see the Shakespeare shrine, and see and I drove down to Bath and on to Bathcombe in Somerset to see Jim Baker's mother. Mrs. Baker is a charming woman, and the since was wonderfully English - with plenty of Pint - most chicken and a real English 3 year, who was once Pina of Trinidad. But come I am in completely mud and cleaning. I don't think there is even a house in miles, and we had to go way on the blue, narrow roads to pigs and cows and farmers during wagons. It was a splendid day.

Henry's work at Downell is going well. There plumbers in London. I am going to do some research in London where many houses are there. I just realize - and I really don't want to - live in a nice one here where we live in London. You must come to see me and maybe we can have a change. The mainline to write, or to see you & your wife. Come
