Leaders State Theme for REW

"What Binds Man to God? Faith, Reason or Nothing?" will be the theme for Religious Emphasis Week in the year 1956-57.

REW will be held February 21-28, climaxing a religious program which will begin with the fall semester.

The REW Committee is headed by Harley Clark and Genny Walker, co-chairmen, and Dr. Robert L. Ledbetter, associate director of the Wesley Foundation.

Clark and Miss Walker announced that three of the nation's top theologians will speak on the campus during REW—Dr. Lou H. Silberman, Hillel Professor of Jewish Thought and Literature from Vanderbilt University; Dean Jerald C. Brauer, Dean of Federated Theological Faculties from the University of Chicago; and Rev. Eugene M. Burke, Professor of Theology at the Catholic University of Washington, D. C.

In addition there will be many local speakers, panels, seminars, study groups, and religious films to complete the program.

"These speakers will be available throughout the semester for any organization, club, or business group which may wish to use them," Miss Walker said.

J. Frank Dobie, ex-UT professor, has granted permission for the production of a series of television movies based on his stories, announced Julius Nitus, UT graduate.

Mr. Dobie has also expressed willingness to act as narrator for the series, Mr. Nitus said.

Telescope Opens As Mars Nears

For the first time in fifteen years Mars will be at its closest point to Earth September 11. Students may view this astronomical event through the telescope in the Physics Building Observatory, which will be open to the public for five nights during this time.

The planet Mars will then appear two or three times larger and five to ten times brighter, according to Dr. Frank Edmonds of the Department of Mathematics and Astronomy.

Mars has always aroused curiosity because of the distinct surface features and the similarity of its climate to our own and the possibility of the existence of life on Mars.

Dr. Edmonds said that observation would be favorable during the last two weeks in August.

Midshipman Holland . . .

The World Sees Dean Jack

By JAMES E. WATHEN

"Join the Navy and see the world," is an old adage. Dean Jack Holland didn't have to join, but the Navy let him see the world. He went as a civilian observer on an annual midshipmen's cruise.

Jack Holland, Dean of Men of the University, left Norfolk, Va., June 21. He went first to Port Lyautey, Morocco, via Argentina, Newfoundland and Lajes, Azores Islands.

The Commander of the Naval station took him to lunch and showed him the base. From Port Lyautey, he went to Goeteborg, Sweden, and from Goeteborg to Oslo, Norway, arriving there on a Saturday afternoon. He found there

Teachers' Pay Boost Listed in New Budget

Business Gives UT $72,000 For Salaries

The University's Salary Supplementation Program, a promising new plan for which Austin business contributed $45,000 last year, has secured many outstanding men for faculty and staff positions at UT.

At this time, the Development Board is making solicitations for the program, which makes current offers to able men in various fields and helps prevent the loss of some leading faculty members.

Solicitations in Houston have reached $27,000, and initial solicitations are being made in Fort Worth, Dallas, San Antonio, and Corpus Christi.

Already, one of the world's leading petroleum production experts, the head of one of the University's professional divisions, and several internationally known scientists were obtained for the University through the program.

Hulon Black is director of the Developmental Board.

Named to State Department

Roy Richard Rubottom Jr., former assistant dean of student life at the University, has been appointed deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs recently.

Teachers' salaries, admission policies, and the building program are tied with the proposed $14,673,238 budget for the operation of the Main Campus for the 1957-58 year.

Dr. L. D. Haskew, vice president for developmental services, said Friday that the proposed budget will enable the University to pay teacher salaries that would pull the University into eighth place among the 16 state universities in the American Association of Universities.

At present, UT salaries rank in the AAU as follows: professor, ninth; associate professor, ninth; assistant professor, eleventh; and instructor, fourteenth.

6,622 Register In Second Term

A new total from the Registrar's Office shows that enrollment at the University for this term has risen to 6,622.

Preparations for the fall semester are now going on at the Registrar's Office. The estimate for the fall semester is 18,000.

Registration will begin September 18 and continue through September 21. As usual, the first two days of registration will be for former students and the remaining two days will be for the rest of the former students, college transfers, and new freshmen.

The University is not the highest ranking of the Southern universities as far as salaries are concerned, Dr. Haskew said. "We have lost ground in salary rank for the past two years," he added.

Acceptance of the proposed budget by the Legislature would help solve another problem that UT officials face—the depletion of the Available Fund.

The Available Fund is the only source of building money, but the University has had to draw from this fund for operational costs and teacher salaries.

"We have lost perhaps as many as four buildings because we had to spend two million this last year and plan to spend two million this coming year from the Available Fund for operation of the University," Dr. Haskew said.

If building space is not available, Dr. Haskew commented, enrollment will be limited in the future.

The University System operates from three sources of revenue: fees, general revenue from the state, and the Available Fund. The source of the Available Fund is University-owned land. Money derived from royalties and the leasing of University land is invested and the interest is divided, two-thirds for the University and one-third for A&M College.

A means for providing more income from interest is in the proposed constitutional amendment to be voted on November 6.

The proposed amendment authorizes investment of up to 50 per cent of University money in corporation stock. At present University capital is limited to municipal and federal bonds.

The present yield of interest is approximately 2.78 per cent. The proposed investments would increase this figure to 3.78 per cent or an increase in annual income of two million, Dr. Haskew said. Such an increase would offset the current Available Fund depletion for operating expenses.

New Men's Dorm Ready in August

The new eight-story Wooten Dormitory, just off the campus on Guadalupe Street, will be ready for occupancy in the fall semester. Accommodations will be available for 200 boys after August 15, said Buck McCullough, manager.

Each room contains custom-made furniture, drapes, private bath, and sliding glass doors leading to a private balcony. The air-conditioned, soundproof dorm will be equipped with a high-speed elevator. A large sundeck on the roof and a mahogany-paneled lobby are special features.

Just Overherd Ed Had Come Into His Own

By EDDIE HUGHES
Texan Sports Editor

Jimmy Blaylock, Longhorn equipment supervisor, received a letter from Ed Hawkins the day after the tragic auto accident which killed the promising Longhorn halfback. It requested some football equipment be sent to him in order for him to start working out.

That request was only a part of the great, unseen story of Ed Hawkins, who was heavily counted upon to give Texas that needed offensive power for the coming season. The two-year senior letterman was one of four returning starters from last year's eleven which won four of its last five games.

The story of Ed Hawkins was a story of triumph. The name of Hawkins was only a dim memory in the minds of most Longhorn football followers at the beginning of last year's season which saw UT drop four of five games. But some advice which backfield coach Charlie Waller had given to Hawkins started paying off and the Lufkin star became one of the finest and hardest-charging runners in the Southwest.

The story began in early September. Waller, a new addition to the Longhorn coaching staff at the time, saw great potentiality in Hawkins. But there was one thing in the way—the lack of self-confidence.

'Admit to Yourself'

"Only admit to yourself," Waller told Hawkins, "that you have the potential to become a great football player, and if you work along these lines, you can become better than Del Shofner of Baylor."

(Waller had seen Shofner when his Auburn team defeated the Bears in the 'Gator Bowl in 1955, and Shofner was the only man Waller's club couldn't stop.)

Hawkins started coming into his own around the SMU game, improved tremendously in the Baylor game, and finished the season with one of the finest games of his career against A&M in Texas' 21-6 upset at College Station.

With the game over, Waller headed into the dressing room, where he was first met by Hawkins.

"Coach," he said, "do you remember what you told me about having a chance to become a great football player? Well, I'll tell you something: I didn't believe it then, but out there just now I was beginning to think you were right."

Hawkins' 30-yard bull-like run late in the fourth quarter which gave Texas its final score against the Aggies might well have been the most remembered run in all the televised games during the season. On the play he took a pitch-out, shook off a player at the line of scrimmage, ran over another, and dragged two more with him down to the two-yard line where he later went over for the TD.

Was Earlier Injured

Only a few minutes earlier, the Texas halfback had been shaken up on a play when the Longhorns were banging on the Aggies' goal line, and leading 7-6. From the press box, Waller called down to Coach Ed Price and told him he might have to take Hawkins out.

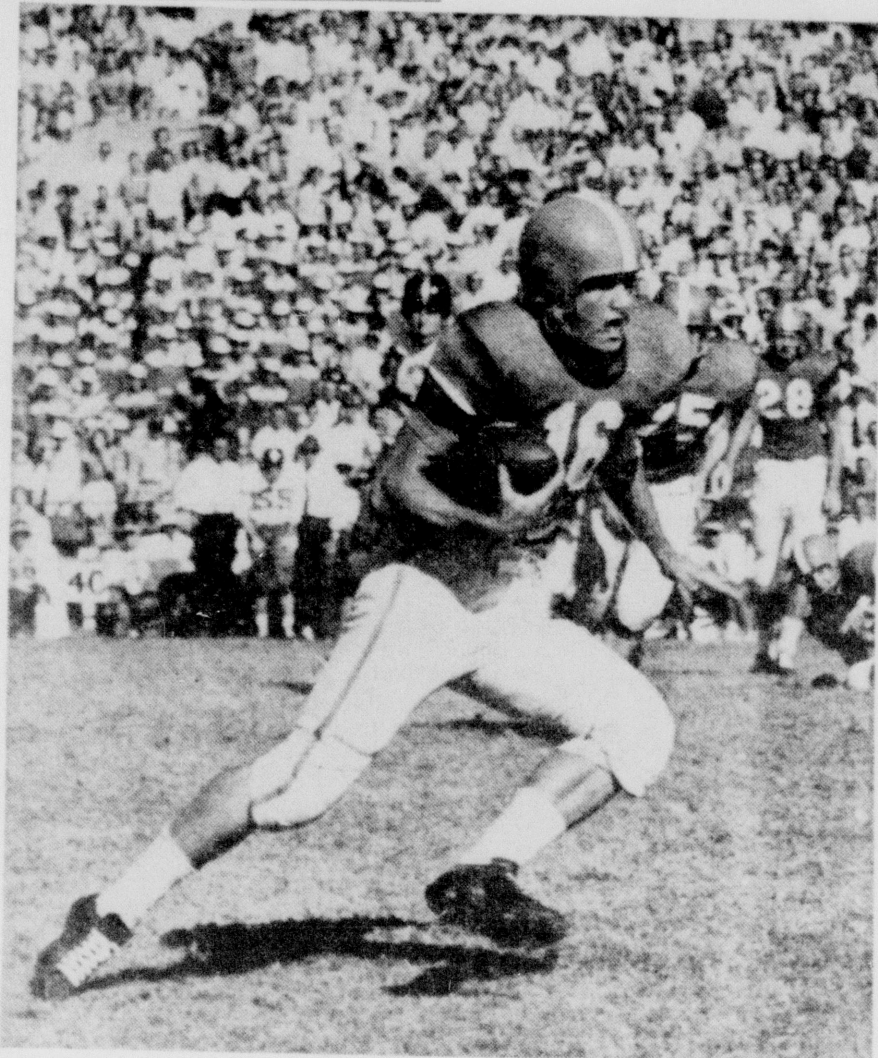

"I don't know," Price replied, "he may be all right. And I don't think he'll want to leave."

The Longhorns went ahead to score and take a 14-6 lead when Texas intercepted an Aggie pass only a few moments later, and it was from there that Hawkins went for his tremendous run.

"There was a point about Hawkins," Waller concluded. "He could do his job offensively as well as defensively. We didn't worry about our right halfback position. Ed had come into his own."

Browne's Twelveth Inning Homer Breaks Up Scoreless Game, 2-1

Houston's Pidge Browne broke up a tremendous scoring duel in the top half of the 12th inning at Disch Field Monday night with a 360-foot homer, and the Bufs added one more to edge the Austin Senators, 2-1, before 1,910 fans.

Buf starter Billy Muffett held Austin to one hit for eleven innings while Austin's Mike Lemish allowed the heavy-hitting Bufs four hits through the eleventh which saw neither team able to score.

But with one away in the twelfth, Browne—who had two of the four Buf hits—blasted a round-tripper over the deep right-center field fence to put Houston into a 1-0 lead. Bobby Smith followed with a double down the right field foul line and Ruben Amaro singled him home to give Muffett a 2-0 margin.

Muffett, who struck out seven while pitching near-perfect ball, tired in the twelfth as Austin struck for its only run in the bottom of the inning after two were out. Ben Taylor got Austin's second hit with a double, then scored when Dick Sinovic singled. Ray Shearer kept Austin's chances alive with Austin's fourth hit, but Arnie Hallgren flied out to end the game.

In other Texas League games Monday night, the league-leading Dallas Eagles kept hold of their two-game lead over Houston by blasting cellar-dwelling Oklahoma City, 8-1. Shreveport kept hold of sixth place by outscoring San Antonio, 10-6, and Tulsa moved into fourth one-half game ahead of San Antonio, by handing the slumping Fort Worth Cats an 8-2 licking.

University Adds 2 Consultants To Field Staff and J. T. Lonsdale, respective directors of the departments, are heading the project.

John Twining, senior geologist, and John Dexter, ceramics engineer, have been commissioned to make an extensive tour through the state, visiting all brick plants and gathering samples of the raw materials used. The samples will be analyzed in part by the differential thermal analyzer, which grades samples by burning characteristics.

Collection of the samples is to be completed at the end of summer, and laboratory work will occupy the ceramics laboratory, where the research will be conducted, during the fall and spring months. Final results, which will be of inestimable value to the brick and tile industry, will be obtained probably by next summer.

In an effort to upgrade science and mathematics instruction in Texas secondary schools, the University has added two new consultants to its field staff.

Alan Humphreys, former science teacher at Belton High School, and John Wagner, who taught mathematics at Kerrville High School, are the appointees.

As one of four such experimental plans in the U.S. established through a grant from the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the plan calls for the consultants to "tutor, assist and serve as a source of information and help to the less-experienced and less-competent science teachers of the region."

GI Bill Help Ends For Many Texans

July 24, 1956, signaled a virtual end to the World War II GI Bill—a law that has afforded nearly 483,000 Texas veterans a chance to acquire the education which was interrupted by military service.

Dr. George T. McMahan, manager of the Waco Veterans Administration Center, estimated that 145,091 Texas veterans were educated in colleges, 206,299 went to schools below college level, 53,673 received training on farms, and 77,609 had on-the-job training at a cost of $965,100,000.

The deadline date terminated the eligibility of approximately 1,600 Texas veterans for training under the World War II bill; however, a small number of veterans will be allowed to continue their studies since they enlisted in 1945 and 1946 under the Voluntary Recruitment Act.

Disabled veterans who have not been able to finish training because of certain hardships will also be allowed to continue their schooling.

Out of every 100 GI-trained veterans, 33 aimed for highly skilled trade and industrial jobs; 10 engaged in scientific studies; another 10 learned new farming techniques; 6 studied the humanities; 5 took sales and clerical courses; 3 prepared to be teachers, and the rest trained for a wide variety of other occupations.

'Affair' Opens Tomorrow

Bette Davis, two-time Academy Award winning actress, returns to the Texas Theater screen Wednesday in "The Catered Affair," a film based on a television play by

Paddy Chayefsky, author of "Marty." Co-starring with Miss Davis are Ernest Borgnine, 1955 Oscar winning actor for his role in "Marty,"

Barry Fitzgerald, former Oscar winner for his supporting role in "Going My Way," and Debbie Reynolds.

Miss Davis, one of the world's greatest actresses, has received a total of nine Academy Award nominations in her career. She won for "Jezebel" and "Dangerous."

The plot of the film centers around the marriage of Debbie Reynolds, her parents' personal wishes about the ceremony, and the belief that "when you're in love, nothing else matters."

'The Bed' Has European Sex

By DAVE BENNETT JR.

The Texas Theater has brought back by popular demand a very pleasant and entertaining bit of cinema that should be on the "must" list of every entertainment-minded college student.

"The Bed" wasn't exactly what I had expected it to be, but then most of those European-made films aren't. I went mainly to be entertained . . . and I was. It certainly wasn't Hollywoodish . . . by that I mean putting sex in the most unusual places just to spice up the plot a bit . . . on the contrary, the sex that was used, was used tastefully and tactfully, and most important of all it was actually a part of the plot.

"Bed" is actually four stories in one. Four men are marooned by a fog, find a railroad-crossing shack and sit down to wait out the delaying element. As such circumstances usually give impetus to, they all start relating various experiences and stories concerning, as happens to be the case in this international bull session, beds and the hilarious circumstances which these beds provoked.

The first episode, with Richard Todd, is quite unexpected and really gets the audience in the mood of "anything can happen now." The second, a little more complicated and involved, develops the "suggestibility" angle which this type of show so well uses. The third story then combines these two . . . the first's air of innocence and the second's suggestibility . . . into a very intriguing story with Vittorio De Sica and Dawn Addams doing the honors. It appeared, however, that the best part of the story was cut out, and, though it didn't hurt the plot any, it certainly aroused the audience's attention. None the less the third took my vote for the best of the four. The fourth ran it a close second though, for it was the most amusing . . . and the most frustrating . . . and really was . . . "too good to be true."

I consider "The Bed" one of the best of European comedy exports, and if you get embarrassed you've certainly led a sheltered life up until now. It's definitely not a flick for junior, but then don't you get tired of seeing pictures keyed to the twelve-year-old? Take my advice and don't miss it! You won't soon forget it!

Dog Steals 'Feeling'

By MARY JO WADLINGTON

"That Certain Feeling," currently showing at the Paramount, proves to be an entertaining story on the theme of mouse turning man, with Bob Hope turning in a familiar performance as the wise-cracking, lovable, and completely spineless hero.

It is this writer's opinion, however, that Hope would be far more amusing if he tucked a turban under one arm, Dorothy Lamour under the other, and again hit the "road" with Bing.

George Sanders is a hilariously egotistical cartoonist who has found that his homespun boy-and-dog comic strip is failing. His glamorous secretary and fiancée, Eva Marie Saint, saves the day by hiring Hope to do a ghosting job on it. And here the plot thickens as it seems that Hope is Eva's ex-husband, and is still carrying the torch for her. Hope would like to stand up to his boss, but every time he tries, he gets sick to his stomach.

Finally, when Sanders starts being obnoxious to a little boy he adopted for publicity reasons, Hope screws up his courage and tells him off in typical Hope fashion. This takes place just as Sanders is being interviewed by Ed Murrow on his "Person to Person" TV show, and the resulting slap-stick confusion is possibly the funniest scene in the movie.

Pearl Bailey played the inevitable maid whose hobby is playing cupid and she sang a couple of songs as a bonus. The only serious competition that George Sanders had as comedy star of the movie was a large shaggy dog who bounded about like a St. Bernard in Alpaca pajamas.
