Dear Emmett,

I shall have to keep copies of my letters, so that I can follow your references. Sorry to hear you are not moving in April; I can assure you that I do so only with the greatest difficulty. But do I understand that Khania is on, despite your absence? There was some rumour of it being put off.

I don't really approve of the decision over the Seminar, but there was first of all trouble over LRP, and threats of legal action; and now people are quoting MLS like a periodical (as I shall continue to do) although its circulation is restricted and it's not easy to get on the mailing list. But the quid pro quo is publication of a summary of papers in the Bulletin, which means there will be an official really published versions; and if we have significant comments we shall write them up for NESTOR or whatever.

Karageorghis however gave public lectures here, at Oxford and in London, so this much is quotable. I think however I included in my remarks some details gleaned from private conversation. Why not draft a note for NESTOR from my letter and submit to KG for approval before you print it. Incidentally he showed a picture of a jar with the Cyp<sup>t</sup>. inscription e-la-i-wo - remarkable, because we don't in classical times get jars labelled as in our kitchens.

Risch writes that he is preparing an article on (seremo) karaore, and wants to quote us as having opted for re not i on our inspection last summer. He would like to know if we have any second thoughts about it. My own feeling was that the readings were not all that secure; but the balance of probabilities definitely in favour of -re.

Term ends this week, thank goodness. Hope your Colorado trip comes off; by all accounts it's a good place.

Yours,

John
