

Cocktails And Erotic Scenery Put Over "March Hares" Play

Temperamental Drama Success in Spite of Broadway Polish

First-nighters have all the fun. But those who were unfortunate enough not to see "March Hares" presented by the University Players at the Austin High School auditorium last night, may rest assured that there is plenty of fun left for them tonight.

Broadway's polish was unscarred by the rough edges of local talent last night. In other words, Morton Brown—local talent with a Broadway polish, perhaps valpar—played his part in spite of his support at times by strictly local talent—unpolished, so to speak. At least not by Broadway; only with the Broadway "A."

If the reviewer of last night's performance were a dramatic critic, he might overlook some things and comment on others. But, on the other hand—oh well, on the other hand, he might have had warts. And what really is about to happen may be a crime against dramatic criticism, but certainly it will be no crime against the writer's conscience.

Geoffrey Wareham, played by Mr. Brown, exclaimed once during the performance, "What crimes are done for women for fear of being thought ungentelemanly!" The reviewer admits that he is a gentleman and wants to be thought one, but he will commit no crime to keep from being thought ungentelemanly by the dear ladies.

For example, it must take a rather seasoned actor to sit and rave and rage at a woman, who instead of playing up to her part by returning retort for retort and repartee for repartee with a flash of the eye that would out-countenance the stern-faced Napoleon himself—well, she giggles and grins, turning her head in an attempt to keep from betraying herself to the audience.

Advance publicity for "March Hares" seemed to emphasize three things. Namely, that there were a group of temperamental people together, that the actors could hardly keep from laughing all the time during rehearsals, and that Morton Brown brought Broadway polish—which is something more, I take it, than mere "Broad-A" polish.

Yes, they laughed right on into the production itself, and Mr. Brown has Broadway polish. Also, the boys and girls were temperamental. In fact, they were what one might call "real good" at it, and this happy result, coupled with Mr. Brown's performance as the chief of the temperamentalists, not only saved the play, but actually made a show that anyone ought to enjoy seeing.

The scenery used was wild and fantastical—no, not that—perhaps, just wild. Sort of erotic—no, well, it was something that most people's wall paper isn't, anyhow. It scared me. I don't wonder that these boys and girls were temperamental. But that is like the old problem of whether the fat man is jolly because he is fat or fat because he is jolly.

Last Program of U.T. Cotton Week Presented Today

Wednesday's Speakers Analyze Crop Reporting Methods

Callander Talks

Heading the program which concludes the University Special Cotton Week today will be a paper by John T. Orr on "Co-operative Cotton Marketing" and an address on the subject, "Cotton Finance" by Nathan Adams. The Special Week has already amply justified itself in the opinion of University men conducting it and has been termed "eminently successful."

Orr is president of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, at Dallas. Nathan Adams is president of the American Exchange National Bank of Dallas. Several introductory remarks will be made to Adams' speech by Eldred McKinnon, and discussion will be conducted by T. H. Davis.

Other talks scheduled for the closing day are "Cotton Manufacturing in Texas" by A. Culberson and "The Cotton Industry in South America" by Ernest L. Tutt.

Five minute discussions will be made of each lecture, according to the program announced.

Y. M. B. L. Luncheon

The afternoon session will begin with luncheon and joint program with the Young Men's Business League, John A. Todd giving a talk on "The Position of Texas Cotton."

The regular afternoon classing lessons will be conducted at the E. H. Perry rooms. [E. H. Slade will speak on the general subject of "Cotton Classing Service of the Government under the Cotton Futures Act and the Cotton Standards Act."

The last number of the week will be a movie at the Garrison Hall auditorium illustrating the picking of cotton by various modern methods, especially by machine.

Activities of the University special Cotton Week during Thursday's session were limited to the hearing of talks by W. F. Callander and H. H. Schutz.

Callander on Theories

Callander spoke on the "Theory of Crop Reporting." "No other crop produced in the United States compares, in general interest, with the cotton crop," he declared.

"No crop has been the subject of so much discussion, not only in the newspapers but in the halls of Congress, as cotton. It is the only crop for which Congress has specifically provided, not only the number and kind of reports that shall be issued, but the day, the hour, and the minute on which they shall be published."

"A law was enacted in May 1924 requiring the Department of Agriculture to make a cotton report every two weeks beginning July 1 and ending December 1 showing the condition and probable production of the crop."

"Other succeeding laws have made changes in the requirements from time to time."

Callander explained that the cotton growers furnish the major part of the information used in making the cotton reports—farmers, ginners, local merchants, and bankers. It was illustrated that trained statisticians are kept in the field in each cotton producing state to check on results.

Police Guarded

"Extreme care is exercised to prevent the leakage of any information concerning the contents of the report until the hour and minute fixed in advance for its release has arrived," Callander pointed out.

"The reports from the field statisticians reach Washington the morning of the report or the evening previous, and are sent directly to the secretary of Agriculture in sealed envelopes or by wire in secret code."

"On the morning of the report day, the secretary goes to his office under police guard and conducts the reports to the Crop Reporting Board."

FENCING DUEL PRESENTED AT WEEKLY MOVIE

As a special feature of Saturday night's Open Air Theater program, Trueman O'Quinn, at the request of Mrs. C. J. Moore, has arranged a fencing match presenting the work of the University classes in this sport. Names of contestants will be announced later, it was said.

The last "movie" exhibition of the first term will be held Saturday night, when a varied program of educational and feature reels will be shown. "The Jungle Adventures of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson" are a series of most unusual views of deepest jungle life—dark places of the earth where never fell the foot of man, peoples and customs never before seen by the eyes of civilization, according to Mrs. Moore.

Martin Johnson and his wife have penetrated into the wilds of elephant, crocodile, and orang-outang ranges and have gazed upon untold wonders of hot tropical days and starlit nights.

"This is the very type of picture which the public is demanding, clean, interesting, containing both comedy and thrills, an inestimable educational advantage as well as novelty and sensational appeal," Mrs. Moore said.

"The Half Back," a picture staging a corking good football game, will be presented. Practice games, foul play, the day of days and victory are all depicted in a thrilling manner, according to the director.

Baccalaureate Speaker Named

Reverend George Green Will Address Summer Graduates

Baccalaureate address at the August commencement will be delivered by Rev. George Green, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Austin, according to Dr. J. B. Wharey, chairman of the commencement committee.

The address will be delivered to approximately 300 candidates for degrees at the University stadium Sunday night, August 28.

As yet no speaker has been secured for the principal address of the commencement program to be held August 31, Dr. Wharey announced Thursday morning.

Social Evening at Spanish House

Spanish Dramatics Club and el Club Mexicano to Present Plays

One-act plays in costume by representatives of the Spanish Dramatics Club and el Club Mexicano will be interesting features of the social evening at the Spanish House, 510 West 23rd Street, Saturday evening from 8:30 to 10:30 o'clock, according to Miss Edith Kelly, in charge.

Besides other music appropriate to the occasion, Miss Ella Anders will render several vocal numbers.

Professor E. R. Sims, chairman of the department of Romance languages, will speak to the students, giving a summary of the Spanish House activities during the summer.

Professor George Irving Dale of Cornell will also speak to the students in Spanish.

All summer students who are interested are extended an invitation to attend the social evening. This program will conclude the Spanish House activities for the first term.

The social evening, which before has been held on Monday evening, has been changed to Saturday evening this week, because of examinations.

Whether or not the social evenings will again be held at Spanish House next term cannot be definitely stated until after registration, Miss Kelly said.

BAND APPEARS LAST TIME DURING TERM

Texas Flag Flies Alone on Campus Mast 'till Holiday

The spirit of Texas flies alone. On the historic old flagpole that looks down on what in the long session is familiarly known as buzzard line—in other words, the bit of rock and cement walk between the Library and the Main Building—the flag of the Commonwealth of Texas flutters without a superior for the first time in a long while.

Old Glory will go up the flagpole with the Texas flag only on holidays and other important occasions, "according to announcement from officials."

"Students wouldn't know it was a holiday, otherwise," it was said.

Educational Body Meets at Cafe

Fowlkes to Deliver Speech on Phases of Instruction

Dr. J. G. Fowlkes, associate professor of education, will address the Educational Association at its regular meeting at the University Commons today at 12:10 o'clock, according to M. C. Britt, president of the association.

Dr. Fowlkes will lecture on a live educational topic, Mr. Britt declared. Time of the meeting originally was scheduled for 12:30 o'clock, but was changed to 12:10 o'clock in order to make it more convenient for the teachers to attend.

Included in the program will be group singing by the association. The members will make plans for future meetings and details of organization for next term.

Hokum Kings Return for Dance Saturday

Fresh from a series of special dances in Central Texas, Steve Gardner's Hokum Kings will again hold sway Saturday night at the Women's Gymnasium at the last University affair of the first term of summer school, according to Al Luckett, manager.

Steve comes to the dance this week with several of the latest hits, and promises that his orchestra will present them in the usual superior fashion. Freshman Adams, banjo artist de luxe, feature player for Gardner's Orchestra has a few things of his own to present Saturday night.

The requirement that students present their blanket taxes has had no ill effect on the attendance, Luckett stated, as capacity crowds have been the rule throughout the summer.

Dancing Classes Offered to Women

Courses Are Rated as Extra-curricular Work

Second term classes in physical training for women will consist of folk dancing, natural dancing, and clogging. These courses are not a part of the regular University curriculum, but are classed as extra-curricular activities.

Students who have had a course in natural dancing should register for the 8 o'clock class at the time they register for their other courses, those in charge have announced. Beginners should register for the 11 o'clock class. Clogging and folk dancing classes meet from 10 to 11. The children's class meets at 9.

All these classes are open to wives of faculty members, and faculty women as well as to the students themselves.

Philosopher From India Talks at Open Air Theater

Niece of Poet Makes Speaking Tour of American Colleges

Educational Leader

Sushama Tagore, niece of the great poet and philosopher of India, Rabindranath Tagore, is in Austin to deliver a lecture tonight at the Open Air Theater on the "Ideals of India." Miss Tagore is making a series of lectures at the large schools of the United States during the summer.

The lecturer was reared by her uncle, the great poet, and therefore knows more about his ideals than anyone else. It is her desire to enlighten the world to the ideals and philosophies of the Indian people, which have been so badly misconstrued, she thinks.

Miss Tagore is endeavoring to create a world fellowship especially for women. She is one of the most prominent women of India at the present time; she is president of the Women's Educational Society of India, and head of her own school in Calcutta.

Studying American Methods. It is in education that the teacher is most interested and it is for the purpose of learning the educational methods of America that she is in this country. "In educational methods America has much to offer that can be applied to good purposes at home," she says.

In education Miss Tagore believes firmly that India must not imitate, but rather preserve national ideals and traditions. "Educate the Indian girl and Indian boy for Indian life. To be like one's people is the better way," she explains.

Miss Tagore has put her theories into practice. Five years ago she started a school for girls in her own home in Calcutta and "Balika Siksha Sangha" now has an enrollment of from 200 to 250 pupils.

It developed originally out of her professional interests in music and slowly expanded into a day school where girls are taught ordinary, common-school subjects.

Trains for Marriage. Indian girls should be educated and trained for marriage, Miss Tagore believes. "To be a good wife and mother is of prime importance." She herself is the wife of a prominent barrister in Calcutta.

In India she is known as Sushama Devi.

Coming as she does from a family that for six decades has stressed liberality of thought and greater freedom for women, it was only natural that her early teens should find her in full fledged revolt against marriage; marriage as a conventional custom.

But tradition and a mother's firm guidance triumphed so that she was married at 16. Meanwhile a new ideal had come to her through the reading of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." It was the story of Harriet Beecher Stowe's successful combination of a writing career with domestic problems that pointed the way and helped Miss Tagore in the problems of her own life.

The use of her maiden name for professional purposes she treats quite casually; it is a matter of convenience rather than conviction.

Preserves Indian Ideals. The teacher emphasizes in the training of young girls that come to her school, the traditional ideals of Indian womanhood—the life stories of the women of the past. The supreme, traditional virtues of Hindu women, says Miss Tagore, are fidelity, sincerity, and self sacrifice. A wife subordinates her wishes to those of her husband. Just as soon as the son is trained to consider it his duty to look after (Continued on Page 3)

Courses Added to List Next Term

Registrar Announces New Courses Not Offered in Catalogue

Courses which will be added to the University curriculum next term of summer school and which have not been placed in the official announcement in the catalogue of the courses offered have been decided upon in part by officials, it has been announced.

So far, six courses have been put on the add list and will be given next term. There is still a possibility that there will be yet others added later, it was stated at the Registrar's office.

Additions in the few days between now and the beginning of classes next term will probably be in the nature of section changes and additions, since an increased registration is expected for some of the courses already offered.

The courses definitely added are as follows: Civil Engineering 32a, German Ac, Physics 422b, Education 117, one new section, Education 175, and Economics 117.

M-P Lines Offer Low Rate to San Antonio

A regular Sunday excursion rate of $1.50 has been provided throughout the summer so that summer students may enjoy the recreations offered at San Antonio for the very nominal sum, according to M. L. Morris, passenger and ticket agent for the Missouri Pacific Lines.

These rates, effective throughout the long term, have been extended through the summer this year for the first time.

Many places of historic interest may be seen at San Antonio, to say nothing of the beauty spots of the Southwestern Metropolis.

Campus Improvement Directed by Taylor

Regular campus hands are at work building terraces and drainages for the campus generally, under the personal supervision of Dean T. U. Taylor of the College of Engineering. The work consists of building retaining walls near Garrison Hall for the water and filling in above the walls with dirt.

The drainage system will be improved over the campus, extending all the way to Speedway on the east.

The road in front of Garrison Hall is being raised and widened, in continuance of the work begun last winter.

All work of campus improvement is under the general direction of the comptroller, Professor J. W. Calhoun.

Next Term Activities Program on Press

The detailed program for the second term student activities is now in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution at the beginning of next term, according to Dr. Milton R. Gutsch, chairman of the committee on student activities, recreation and entertainment during the summer session.

The program gives a general survey of the term's activities and a day to day program of events.

Dean V. I. Moore, vice-chairman of the committee, will act as head next term in the absence of Dr. Gutsch, it has been announced.

GARLAND TOURS EUROPE

Clarence Garland, University graduate from McKinney, is making a tour of Europe this summer. In June he concluded his school at Eagle Pass. He was a law student in the University.

SINS AGAINST SCIENCE

THE modern mind, it might be tritely remarked, is a queer mixture. The strains that are perpetually in evidence would amuse one if they were not so ridiculous. One of the strangest anomalies is the effort on the part of the moralists to support their ethical concepts on a scientific basis. From Youngstown, Ohio, comes the following: "If you don't want to live long, indulge in petting parties," is the advice handed out to adolescents by Ross Clarke, physical director of the Y. M. C. A. "Modern petting and necking produce a psychological condition resulting in ill health, nervous ailments, and premature old age. Pet and die young."

Crudity is never excusable, and crudity of this sort should be met with hilarious guffaws; but the laughter, no matter how noisy, does not explain the thought process of the man who makes the statement. Nor would it be worth commenting on, were it not such a prevalent form of mental vacuity.

Now, obviously, it would be difficult to prove that there is any connection between petting and longevity; such a belief is at best a superstition and incapable of proof. Why urge it, then, as an argument in favor of abstaining from a practice which has little to commend it? The answer seems to lie in a fundamental lack of confidence in the ethical justification of a similar stand.

A Puritan of two centuries ago would not have hesitated to invoke eternal damnation on anyone subverting the ordinary methods of courtship to any but a serious end. Why the change? Is it that morality of itself has no force; or that an appeal can no longer be made to the sense of fitness and propriety?

It may be that petting results in "nervous ailments and premature old age." But what of it? The main objection to petting is that it indicates a lack of mental resources. It is a tawdry substitute for genuine passion. But how long will we have to listen to the inanities of moralists who couch their objections in scientific language hoping thereby to carry conviction?

EDUCATION AND SOCIETY

EVERYONE is interested in money when the money in question is coming out of his own pockets. During the last session of the Legislature fees at all state schools were limited to thirty dollars with exceptions made in a few instances. It was hailed as a democratic move in the cause of "education for everyone who wants it."

Yet it is doubtful whether the ideal of wide-spread educational facilities for all who feel that they want to take advantage of them is an ideal that can be supported by a realistic investigation of the results that it has accomplished. It makes good matter for political speeches and sentimental drivel but it means nothing. Nor should it.

Realizing that conditions have changed as regards higher education and that the purposes of higher education have changed greatly since the recent exploitation of this field, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., made the statement at Brown University that tuition fees, which now pay only half of the cost of education even where they are the highest, should be increased so as to meet the actual cost. The logic of the suggestion is unassailable. "Where the matriculate once prepared himself for service to the community, young folks now go to college for a good time, for social considerations, or to fit themselves to make money."

Where is the justification for continuing to furnish the materials for social or economic self-advancement from the general store of accumulated wealth? The purposes of the average student, if he has any at all, in going to college are in most cases entirely selfish. The state gets nothing in return from much of the money so invested; for it cannot be maintained that a college education, as it is now demanded and received increases the fitness of the citizen to participate in the control of the state enough to justify the outlay because mass education in universities does not, as a rule, develop the critical faculties of the men subjected to it. This is unfortunate but true.

The Dallas News objects that, "It would be only fair if the student could meet in full the cost of his education, but it is obvious that only a few are able to do that, and to place tuition on the cost level would be to uproot the entire theory of the democracy of mass education in its higher aspects in the United States."

This stand is somewhat qualified by subsequent considerations but it is a fair delineation of the objections that are raised to the effecting of such an end as Mr. Rockefeller suggests.

The belief that higher education is for everyone is a fallacy, democratic beliefs to the contrary notwithstanding. The tremendous waste brought about by the withdrawal of thousands of students from four years' participation in the economic life of the nation for superficial or selfish purposes is insupportable.

There is little hope for improvement so great as to give grounds for a social justification of such expenditures. In so far as this is true, Mr. Rockefeller is right in his attitude, even though exception might be taken to the conclusions that he reaches. He would not, however, withhold a college education from anyone who wants it. It is unnecessary for purposes of present discussion to consider the means he would employ to make it possible for students who lack the necessary resources to pay for their education to accomplish this end.

The implications inherent in this qualification constitute the chief weakness of his stand. A university education is a privilege that should be vested in those capable of turning it to the use of society. There is nothing democratic about it. Why should there be? The form of a college education without the substance is of no value. Why continue to pay for it?

The state can well afford to appropriate money for and philanthropists to promote the training of superior mentalities. It ought to be a function of the state to do so; and this is actually done in some European countries where university training is not regarded as a "natural right." Limitation of numbers by the rigid maintenance of high standards would go far to alleviate the present chaotic condition.

OUTLAWING WAR

TO an editor who scoffs at the idea of "outlawing war," and ironically suggests that we outlaw crime, disease, incendiarism, floods, envy and malice, William Allen White of the Emporia, Kansas, Gazette, makes this pertinent reply: "As a matter of fact, crime is outlawed. So is disease outlawed. So is incendiarism, and we are trying hard in America to outlaw floods, and will undoubtedly succeed. Envy and malice, when they take the form of slander, are outlawed; and when they eat in and do not come out, they appear as suppressions, taking the form of physical disease, and are outlawed as disease is. We are spending millions of dollars every year to outlaw disease in this country."

Mr. White therefore thinks we may properly go ahead and make a treaty with France, such as the French government has proposed and many leaders of American opinion have seconded, outlawing war as between these two countries.

It wouldn't be such a whale of an innovation, either, as the Kansas editor reminds newspaper readers. Not to make capital of the fact that Germany, France, Britain, Italy, and Belgium have done this very thing, as among themselves, there is the notable fact that the United States now has four treaties of peace with South American countries in which it agrees to "arbitrate everything."

We have outlawed war as far as we and they are concerned. "Why not with others?" White wants to know. Why not with Canada and Mexico, for instance, along with France?—Beaumont Enterprise.

Most of the spectators who have witnessed the workouts of the contenders in the big fight on the 21st claim Sharkey looks the best.

Though Dempsey is far off his old form, fight fans say that if Sharkey keeps his head throughout the encounter he will stand a good chance of winning over Dempsey.

The ex-champ is smart, and under his new manager, there is no telling what's liable to happen. Dempsey's experience will prove a valuable asset in his fight. Sharkey, starting back while in the Navy, has been fighting for only four or five years.

Frankie Fink, who learned his boxing around the rings in Fort Worth, met a setback when he was outpointed the other night in New York. He was a good prospect for the light weight crown some time ago, but has been beaten by some topnotchers in the past few months.

When Paulino Uzcudun knocked out Harry Wills in the fourth round Wednesday night, it was the second time that the black fighter had been ko'd in 17 years. And the Spanish woodchopper is still as far from a chance with the heavyweight champ as we are from the North Pole.

The latest Mid-Week Pictorial carries a good shot of Wilmer Allison showing him with his cup just awarded for winning the national inter-collegiate singles title.

Here's one to answer for today Question—Who holds the record in the 440 yard dash in the Southwestern Conference?

Answer—It is held by Ernest Parker of Texas A. and M. made at the recent Conference meet in Houston with a time of 49.1.

Heard a good story last night uptown, but can't vouch for it too much. Some years ago there was a darky named Charley who worked for one of the big stores in Austin. He fought in local matches, and cleaned up about everything that there was in these parts.

One night, there was another darky, a blackhorse, imported from Galveston, and the local pride was pitted against him. The story goes that it took only one blow and Charley has never been seen since. But the funny part of the story was that the boy that put him out was recalled as Jack Johnson, later champion of the world.

It is known that Johnson got his start in Galveston, and this old time tale is told over and over again in Austin. It was only a short time after this that Johnson won from Jeffries, the latter one of the greatest boxers ever to enter the canvassed arena. Willard then took the title from Johnson.

Little Johnny had taken a geography test the day before. And as he made ready to go to bed, he was overheard to say: "Dear Lord, and please make Boston the capital of New York."

At the present, Jack Taverner is playing a pretty good game for the Detroit Tigers. He is the mainstay of the Bengal infield, and has been one of the most powerful men on the offensive. He is tied with Sailer for stolen bases with a total of 17.

The Men's Gym down in Z Hall will be a new sight to most of the old students returning in the fall. All new steel lockers have been installed in the basket room while the old ones used heretofore have been removed to the small gym.

Texas needs a new gymnasium as the present one is not only inadequate, but unsightly. Many of the best coaches, trainers, and athletes of the country come to Texas, and with the equipment on hand, there is no reason why the Longhorns should not have the finest and most up-to-date gym in the country. The present shacks are the old barracks used here during the war.

"Heinie" Baumgarten was finally sent by the Dallas Steers to the Corsicans Oilers, and made a grand debut with a pair of hits. With the addition of the Longhorn star, "Tex" McDonald of Ft. Worth and Brownlow and Speer of the old Austin Rangers, the Oilers should make a strong race for the title.

Baumgarten is a better player than the average Lone Star Looper, and if he had not been, chances are that Brooklyn would not have signed him. He has yet to get on to organized baseball hurling, and once he does, he will be a hard slugger to stop.

Charley Root of the Chicago Cubs just hung up his sixteenth victory. He has helped the Cubs to the top, and the fight has been a remarkable one. Closely followed by Pittsburgh and St. Louis, Chicago will have to tighten up now until they get home for a few games on their home lot.

With most of the schedule for the football season already complete, the big game that draws the eyes of Texas players is the one with the S. M. U. Mustangs on October 29th at Dallas. They can't forget that 21-17 heartbreaking loss last fall.

Games with Texas A. and M., T. C. U., Vanderbilt, Kansas Aggies, Baylor, Rice, Trinity, and Oklahoma Southwest Teachers' College round out the schedule.

The Cleveland Indians finally came through and beat the New York Yanks yesterday to end their long losing streak. Both Ruth and Gehrig went hitless while the Indians managed to put over enough runs for a victory.

De Hart Hubbard, former negro star at Michigan and holder of the title in the broad jump, plunged through the air for a jump of 25 feet 8 3-4 inches at the same meet. The dark star is also a good dash man, and ran the century around

The league leading Wichita Spudgers bowed down before the slants of Dick Whitworth yesterday when the former Austin hurler let the leaders down with three hits. Dandy Dick was the mainstay of the old Senators, and has been showing up fairly well with the Buffaloes.

production failed both as entertainment and as regenerating influence, one of which it was apparently intended to be.

Knockout Reilly

THE downtown performance of "Knockout Reilly" was so well attended that there may not be many people left to see it at the Texas Friday and Saturday; but unquestionably everyone who did not see its first showing and all the regular Dix fans will see the return. Richard Dix is supported by Mary Brian and Jack Renaut.

Silver Comes Thru

IF the western picture which closes the bill at the Queen for the week is as much above the average picture of its type as it appears to be from its advance publicity, it will be one of the few recent ones worth seeing.

What can account for the decline of the western picture? Whatever the answer is, it is most unfortunate that the local color which should offer the most to American producers has been so handled that it makes one shudder to think of sitting through the pictures.

"Silver Comes Thru" does promise to take the curse off the wild-west movie.

his parents in their old age, so a girl knows that when she marries she assumes the obligation of caring for her parents-in-law—nursing them in sickness and always dutifully serving them. For the family as a unit is the axis on which life revolves.

She also attempts to justify the resistance of the Indian people to the British rule, in view of their principles. Tagore and Gandhi were the leaders of thought of the Hindus, and the lecturer is therefore well qualified to discuss the problems of the orient.

FACULTY WOMEN'S CLUB HONORS MISS TAGORE

The Faculty Women's Club in collaboration with members of the International Relations Club, is honoring Miss Sushama Tagore, niece of the poet of India, Rabindranath Tagore at a reception and garden party Friday evening immediately following Miss Tagore's lecture.

Reception will be held at the faculty Women's Club House, 2610 Whitis Avenue.

In the receiving line will be the officers of the club: Miss Ruby Terrill, Miss Tagore, Miss Mary Gearing, Miss Clara Parker, Mrs. Charles Joe Moore, Miss Nannie Sanders.

Associate members who will serve are: Mrs. R. L. Bewley, Mrs. C. W. Gardner, Mrs. Rebecca Schofield, Mrs. H. H. Sevier, Miss Fannie Andrews, Miss Leffler Corbitt, Miss Ethel Hilton, Miss Octavia Rogan, Mary Sanders.

The committee on arrangements is as follows: Miss Dorothy Schons, chairman, Miss Lenoir Dimmitt, Miss Wilma Ervin, Miss Lois Ware, Miss Sarah Dodson, Miss Annie Hill, Miss Erma Gill, Miss Laura Rissman.

Members of the faculty and International Relations Club will be guests.

PI LAMBDA THETA

Members of the Psi chapter of Pi Lambda Theta will have their regular bi-monthly supper together at the Cafeteria Friday evening at 6 o'clock. Members have been notified to bring the constitution. Members from other chapters are invited to be present.

Cotton Week

all a part of the work of the Board, it was explained.

Callender pointed out the various new estimating methods which have come into use within recent years: "The first of these is the estimation of total production from ginnings. A second is the selection of two or three key reporters in each county who are to send in what they estimate will be the crop for that year.

Phenological Data
"A third method, in use for two or three years recently, is the estimating of the crop based on certain phenological data—acres, stand, number of bolls safe, size of boll, width of rows, and other similar data."

In conclusion Callender gave an estimate of the efficiency of these reports, setting forth the fact that they have been very useful, especially in the more recent years.

Schutz Speaks on Texas
H. H. Schutz, speaking on "Cotton Crop Reporting in Texas," treated the subject directly, taking the audience through a supposed estimate of an actual crop. In summary he said:

"At times, it becomes confusing to find that the forecast of production is higher in one month than it was in a preceding month notwithstanding the fact that the condition of the crop may be reported several points lower. A situation such as this may arise when growing conditions become better during the period than in average years.

"If, for instance, on August 25, the condition of cotton in Texas was reported at 60 per cent of normal in comparison with 71 per cent on July 25; on the basis of 10,000,000 acres, the July 25 condition would indicate 2,900,000 bales and that of August 25, about 3,000,000 bales although the condition had apparently declined.

"In other words, if conditions were better than the average during a given period the crop may be expected to turn out greater than the earlier figure seemed to indicate.

Key Men
"An experienced observer may travel over the State and through the belt of key-men in important sections form a fair idea of acreage trend. The same is possible in the matter of condition.

"He can make use of a system of par or depend upon his general impression for the probable yield per acre. Before the western part of the State expanded into an important cotton section, forecasting was comparatively simple and there were many who made fairly accurate reports. But today only a few feel that they have sufficient command of the situation to venture a forecast. "Methods such as the foregoing

Official Notices

THE ATTENTION of all Summer School students is called to the University housing regulations which provide that there is to be no change of residence by undergraduate students except by special permission from the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women, until the end of the term. The first term of the Summer School comes to an end Tuesday, July 19, and all students planning to change rooming place must give ten days' notice to the proprietor of their intention to move. This makes the final day for such notice Saturday, July 9.

ALL GIRLS interested in playing volleyball are invited to report to the Woman's Gymnasium any day between 4 and 6 o'clock. Please report in playing costume.

MISS DOMINY

THE FOLLOWING students have indicated their intention of taking the B. S. in Education degree at the end of this summer session. If there are others not on this list, they should consult at once with the Dean of the School of Education.

Fay Baxt, Claire Bowers, Alda Mae Calhoun, Clara Clift, Margaret Ford, Katy Rae Hall, Mrs. Ruby Thacker Hood, Viola Kellum, Rebecca McCarty, Robbie Mae Powers, Nelle Joe Thiele.

B. F. PITTENGER

could be employed with profit by large plantation managers for arriving at an early approximation of their production. They know the acreage planted and need only determine the condition percentage of the crop. After a few years of keeping condition and yield records, par could be worked out for the plantation with the promise of helpful results."

John A. Todd talked on "The Value of American Cotton Crop Reports," endorsing it in general and meeting some of the criticisms that have been brought against the American estimates.

Eingleton Presnell, Jr., Donald Allen Price, Joseph Ferdinand Reviere, Jr., Llewellyn Rose, Nathaniel Isaac Sample, Alvis Hix Snipes, Maurice Tone Stalter, Lee Roy Turner, Godfrey Eugene Turner, Thurman Alexander Vaught, Clifton McCandless PKilkinson, Benjamin Bassett Watson.

KATHRYNE BRAMLETTE, Secretary to the Dean

G. WATTS CUNNINGHAM, Dean of the Graduate School

CLASSES in natural dancing, clogging and folk dancing will be offered during the second term of summer school. Students who have had natural dancing before should register for the 8-9 class. Beginners should register for the 11-12 class. Clogging and folk dancing meets from 10-11. The children's class meets from 9-10. The classes are open to wives of faculty members and faculty women. In order to avoid unnecessary trouble and delay please register at the time of regular registration Wednesday, July 20. All dancing classes are registered as P. T. 2.d.

MRS. CROOK,

'March Hares'

Which came first, the hen or the egg? Temperament or scenery?

The lighting was excellent, even well-timed with the fake punch-outs on the stage. (Of course, they don't call them punch-outs, but that's what I have and that's that). The make-up (that's technical) was pleasing and apparently well done—with one exception. I wondered about Mr. Amend's face—I couldn't decide those odd wrinkles on his forehead that looked like misplaced finger prints. I don't guess he'd been mugged, too.

The plot. Well, it centers about the fear of Mr. Brown that he is about to be "oosted" (which is stage talk for ousted) from the Rodney household, where he was making his home with Mrs. Rodney and her daughter, Janet. Mrs. Martin Elliott as Mrs. Rodney did her best work in the second act, where I kept wondering if she were really telling the truth about those cocktails when she said she hadn't tasted them. The whole crowd impressed me as liking cocktails—I mean, on stage.

Claudia, played by Eloise Miller did her best work about that time too. In fact, maybe if the whole layout had really had cocktails—well that's not for me to pass on here. Most anybody, as for that matter, does better work—but then there's the dean of women and the discipline committee. That scenery was wonderful.

Now, since I'm started in this direction, I could go on and comment individually on these actors and actresses. But I won't.

The "dead-line" cry has already been gasped about half a dozen times, so I can't go on here all night telling what I personally like and what I personally don't like and what effect cocktails and erotic scenery have on me—I mean on people in general.

However, this for the audience of last night: You were too noisy and talked among yourselves too inconsiderately of the players and the rest of the house, if you get what I mean.

This for the would-be audience of tonight: Go see that play by all means and laugh a good, salubrious, belly-laugh.

GILLUM APPOINTED

Isabelle Gillum of Elgin, who received her degree from the University, has been notified recently of her election to a position as instructor at Kidd-Key Seminary, Sherman, for the coming year. She will teach chemistry and foods in the college. Miss Gillum had made no application for the position, but was recommended for the place by one of her University instructors. While in school she made a brilliant record, and graduated with high standing.

YEAGER AT PENN STATE

Bob Yeager of Mineral Wells has been recently notified that his application for admission to the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania has been accepted, and it is probable that he will go there in the fall to take the regular doctor's course. Yeager graduated at Mineral Wells High School in 1922, went to Kemper Military Academy in Booneville, Mo., and then to Virginia Military Institute. Last year he attended the University.
