

4-F's May Face Draft For Essential Industry

In an unexpected proposal that would drastically reduce the male enrollment of the University and other schools of the nation, Robert H. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, yesterday directly opposed a statement by the War Manpower Commission and told the house military affairs committee that the time has come to force the nation's 3,500,000 4-F's into essential war industry or induct them into compulsory army labor battalions.

Warning that the nation faced an actual danger in the supply of manpower, Patterson declared that some method of utilizing 4-F's would promote the winning of the war although Paul V. McNutt, manpower chairman, said Tuesday that the War Department did not favor induction of 4-F's.

Patterson proposed that assignment of 4-F's between the ages of 18 and 37 to essential activities could be under control of a director of national service or by an extension of the existing selective service act.

"The 4-F's in war activity or other essential activity would be given occupational deferments and would remain as before," Patterson claimed, "while 4-F's not in war activity or other essential work and found by their local boards to be qualified for such activity would be inducted and placed in the enlisted reserve."

Under this plan, Patterson explained, the men would be assigned as needs developed, retaining their civilian status, and receiving wages and "other ordinary incidents of civilian employment." Men refusing to go, he declared, "would be called by the Army to active military service and would be used in special labor units."

Since the committee made no official consideration of this proposal the status of student deferments was not discussed, although a parallel of the present policy would defer only students in essential studies such as engineering and certain sciences. No official statistics are available but school officials say that a majority of men in other courses are 4-F's, honorably discharged veterans, or underage students.

Chairman Costello of California, head of the Congressional committee, commenting on Patterson's report said, "Some method must be used to get the 4-F's into war work, since thousands of them are young and their disabilities, while sufficient to prevent their combat service, are not grave enough to prevent them from taking a war job and releasing a physically-fit young man for service."

Washington sources reported that many of Chairman Costello's colleagues also believe that the time to use 4-F's has arrived. No further action is expected for several days.

Sgt. McGivney Visiting Campus

Staff Sergeant Felix McGivney, B. A. '40, is visiting the campus this week from Ellington Field, where he is an instructor in the Army Air Forces.

A columnist and movie reviewer for The Daily Texan, he was a member of Sigma Delta Chi, Chi Phi fraternity, and Newman Club. In 1940 he won intramural tennis doubles.

For the past twenty months he has been stationed at Ellington Field and in April will be transferred to the San Antonio Aviation Cadet Center. Before joining the Air Forces he worked for a year on the Galveston News.

52 Girl Electrical Engineers Get Dirty Hands for Victory

"Don't get discouraged!"

More than once has this been said by instructors in the Department of Electrical Engineering to the fifty-two girls now hard at work studying to become civilian engineering aides in radio to release men for active duty.

These girls, beginning to feel at home in their new surrounding of electricity, receive forty hours a week instruction and supervised study, sixteen hours of which consist of courses in electrical theory, laboratory, and communication. They also study mathematics, physics, and drafting.

"Hard but interesting," is the way most of the girls feel about it. Their main objection, according to one instructor, seems to be getting their hands dirty, but before they get through, he said, they will be doing "everything from working with pliers to building sets and transmitting sets." He also praised the girls for their attentiveness and eagerness to learn.

Among the group are former stenographers and school teachers, who wanted to get into something more exciting. One girl had a restricted operator's license in a radio station and became so interested in radio that she took this chance to increase her knowledge. There are also many Texas exes, who thought it would be good to return to the University "even if only for six months" or "to be sure to be here for Round-Up."

Then there are those who joined because they had a husband, sweetheart, or brother overseas, some who have been killed or wounded. Whether the reasons are one of excitement or sorrow, they all seem to boil down to one, that of "doing something in this war." At the completion of their courses here the girls will be sent to Aircraft Laboratory, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Nebraska U. Speaker Wins

College Orators Talk On Latin-America

Representing various colleges in the United States, eight young men and women came to the University Wednesday to discuss different phases of "Bases for Permanent Co-operation Among the American Republics" at the regional meet of the National Discussion Contest on Inter-American Affairs.

After a roundtable discussion yesterday afternoon and a series of speeches concerning the problem last night in which the eight contestants participated, the judges chose as regional winner Geraldine McKinney from the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Neb.

Her subject was "Inter-American Trade and Commerce as a Basis for Permanent Co-operation." Miss McKinney's alternate will be Eleanor Schmitt from Mount Saint Scholastica College, Atchinson, Kan. Other speakers in the contest were Pablo Ayub, College of Mines and Metallurgy; Henry Forty Jr., Abilene Christian College; James Garrett Jr., Baylor; Adorea Goodman Stephens; Dorothy Hill, Mount Saint Scholastica College; and Ellie McKinney, Sul Ross State Teachers College.

The first-place winner of the regional discussion contest will have her expenses paid to and from the final National contest in Washington, D.C., April 14-15, and will also receive an award of $500 for study and travel in Mexico during the summer of 1944.

Advocating better trade relations, understanding, a stronger Pan-American Union or a different type organization, and individual good will among Latin and North Americans, the group opened their round table discussion yesterday afternoon by considering the historical basis of inter-American cooperation. The Monroe Doctrine, several of the group suggested, was juggled around to suit the United States and such doctrines aroused Latin-American antagonism. Also included in earlier forms of co-operation was the idea of America's protecting the Latin-American countries. Others suggested a form for world organization rather than regional organization.

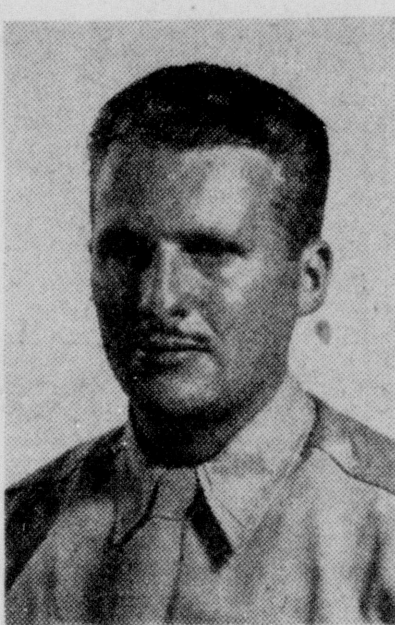

Planning for a permanent co-operation between the American Republics, the group suggested such things as investing much more capital within the Latin-American countries, increasing trade with the countries and not losing it after this war as happened in the last World War. Other suggestions included the United States' helping Latin-American countries to build highways, improve working conditions there, and the standard of living. Several of the group, however, pointed out that interference of this sort would lead to antagonism toward the United States for too much meddling.

The last thirty minutes of the group discussion was broadcast. Leader of the discussion was Jesse J. Villarreal, assistant professor of speech. Judges were Frank Goodwyn, co-ordinator of Inter-American student activities; Ernest Hardin, assistant professor of speech; and Howard Townsend, instructor in speech.

Wooten Gun Collection To Be Ready Soon

The 365-piece Wooten gun collection should be ready for display in several weeks, A. Garland Adair, curator of Texas Memorial Museum, announced Monday. The guns will be mounted for permanent exhibit in the museum's Pioneer Room, one of the terms of the gift being the stipulation that the collection be kept intact. The library on firearms will be kept in the museum library and made available to the public for study and research.

The late Dr. G. H. Wooten assembled the weapons, accessories, and library with the intention of making a complete story of firearms, and at the time of his death, two years ago he lacked only seven objects which he had sought. Mrs. Ella Newsome Wooten, as independent executrix, transmitted the gift to The University of Texas in accordance with Dr. Wooten's will. The collection has been designated the "Goodall Harrison Wooten Collection of Firearms."

PHIL ROMMEL, trumpet player and arranger with the San Marcos Navitones, has played with Sunny Durham's and Glenn Miller's bands, and been arranger for Charlie Spivak's Band. He has written numerous scores for Vaughn Monroe, Bob Astor, George Towne, and Lee Castle. Rommel was born in Los Angeles and studied music at the City College of Los Angeles for two years.

'I Ain't Got No Body'-Where Can It Have Vent?

Only shoe-lace high was Shirley Greisen Wednesday morning, even when she stood up straight. She was walking eye-to-eye with her Littlefield dormmates, but she soon was tongue-to-tongue with the passing shoes.

Everyone was talking and walking rather fast, and at first no one noticed Shirley's absence. When looked around for her, fifteen sailors and sadistic classmates laughed to "look down" on her. And Shirley remained body-less but unhurt, her head and shoulders protruding from a steam vent in front of the dormitory, until a kind-hearted, strong-armed sailor helped her out.

WAVE Promoted To Admiral's Aide

Carrying out the Navy's WAVE replacement policy, Lieutenant (jg) Helen Holmes Cone, B.A. '39, is being made the first woman administrative aide to the Eighth Naval District. She will be an aide to Rear Admiral A. C. Bennett, commandant of that district.

Lieutenant Cone is the daughter of George Sealy Cone, Kerrville, city manager. She was born in Houston and after being graduated from the University, took post-graduate work at the University of Virginia. She was a member of the first midshipman's class at the Navy's school for women officers at Smith College. She has been on duty at Eighth Naval District for more than a year.

"It will take a little while for some of us around Eighth Naval District Headquarters to get used to the idea," Admiral Bennett said, "but not long. After all, the job is one that a capable well-trained woman officer can handle."

Lieutenant Cone will replace Lieutenant M. J. Epley Jr., who is being detached for duty overseas. Lieutenant Epley and Lieutenant David C. Welch have served jointly as aide for the last several months.

Those Old Exam Papers Can Line a Helmet

"Every bit of paper that passes through a student's hands each day may be re-utilized to line a soldier's helmet or to wrap a piece of equipment going overseas," said Anne Burkhardt, chairman of the War Effort Council, in her talk to the Defense Committee Tuesday. Twenty-five paper mills have been closed up since the war, presenting an enormous problem to vital industries shipping eighty-one tons of equipment a month.

Along with the contribution of newspapers and magazines, the War Effort Council suggests scrapping old examination papers, catalogues, and stationery. The Austin Boy Scouts have volunteered to pick up scrap paper weighing a hundred pounds or more.

Tests for Grade Teachers

Bolin Reprimanded for Party; Candidates Take Stump Tonight

By BUZZ

S.B.I. Clarifies Rules; Unscheduled Parties Out

(Editor's Note: Following is a statement by the Student Bureau of Investigation concerning borderline cases of violations of election rules and clarifying the rules to prevent future violations.)

The Student Bureau of Investigation in pursuing its purpose of "investigating thoroughly the expenses in the interest of any candidate upon protest by any student" wishes to make a public statement concerning a party held last Monday night at which it has been alleged that expenses were incurred in the interest of Phil Bolin, candidate for President of the Students' Association.

Members of S.B.I. at a meeting on Wednesday afternoon adopted the following resolution after hearing complaints and defendants: "We consider the party in question as having been used in the political interest of Phil Bolin and as a violation of the spirit of the election rule which states that no money shall be spent in a political campaign."

Inasmuch as S.B.I. rules concerning the sort of practices that would be considered legal are not clear, we will not penalize the candidate. However, we wish to reprimand publicly this candidate and the instigators of the party, since evidence seems to us to indicate that they did realize that it would be considered a political affair in practice, although the defendants declare that it was not such in purpose or in practice.

S.B.I. wishes to point out that it realizes its failure to make the rules of campaigning definite, and in order to prevent any further questions arising, we present the following rule, to be in effect for the remainder of this election period:

There shall be no parties held between Wednesday, March 29, and the final day of election that are not now on the Social Calendar in the office of the Dean of Women.

Any violations in deed or in spirit of the above rule or of the rule forbidding campaign expenditures of any kind will be determined by S.B.I.

'No Private Plane for Everyone'

"Although the airplane is indispensable as a war weapon today and has tremendous commercial possibilities in the post-war future, the people must not assume that the airplane will replace all other modes of transportation and a private plane will be available for everyone," said Dr. John H. Frederick, professor of transportation and industry, in a speech Wednesday night on the business aspects of post-war commercial aviation before the University chapter of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

Because the aviation industry has advanced perhaps fifty years in the last four years of war, the many improvements in engines, material, and safety devices will assure everyone a moderately priced commercial airline passenger, mail, and express service in the United States and the whole world, Dr. Frederick stated. He said that the approximately six hundred thousand skilled pilots returning after the war will not be able to take advantage of the private plane if technical developments and mass production facilities are not used to produce a plane which a person with an income of less than four thousand dollars per year can afford.

Residence Girls To Operate Bond Booth

The War Effort Council is renewing its drive for bonds and stamps. Anne Burkhardt, chairman of the council, explained, "Those girls who feel that they are doing nothing for the war effort will be contacted to help boost sales."

Beginning Thursday, furnishing personnel for the tables on the Drag will be the responsibility of residences and organizations around the campus. In cases where the number of occupants is small, two houses will merge so that as many as five girls will be on duty every hour from 9:30 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

terminated by S.B.I. S.B.I. reserves the right to interpret actions which seem to violate the spirit of the rules as such and to impose the same penalties that will be placed on technical violations.

We wish it understood that the function of S.B.I. is to prevent unfair campaign practices, and our action in this instance is intended to give just consideration to all candidates. We regret our mistake in not foreseeing the vulnerability of the election rules, and in failing to interpret them in advance.

If any question exists in the mind of any candidate or of any of his supporters as to whether planned activities will be interpreted as illegal, he should contact one of the members of S.B.I. in advance, or be subject to prosecution.

Registrar Loses, Spars Gain Miss Grimes

Miss Frances Grimes, former transcript clerk in the Registrar's office, has enlisted as apprentice seaman in the Spars, women's reserve of the United States Coast Guard. She took the oath of enlistment at her home Wednesday. She will leave Austin on April 6 to enter the April 10 class at the Coast Guard Training Station, the former Biltmore Hotel, in Palm Beach, Fla.

Daughter of Mrs. Leona Johnson Grimes, Seaman Grimes was graduated from the University in 1937 with a B.S. degree in home economics. While in the University she was a member of the Home Economics Club, Girls' Glee Club, University Opera Company, Wesley Foundation, and Wesley Players. She taught in Bedias and Austin public schools before coming to work in the University Registrar's office in 1943.

She is the niece of Dr. Edmund Heinsohn, pastor of the University Methodist Church.

Yeoman Stayton Is Now Secretary to Admiral

Yeoman Third Class Betty Stayton, former University student, is now secretary to the admiral in the office of the United States Coast Guard in New York. Yeoman Stayton is the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Robert W. Stayton. Judge Stayton is a professor of law at the University.

While at the University, Yeoman Stayton studied home economics and was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, representing that sorority as Panhellenic delegate. She enlisted in the Spars on August 12, 1943, and was graduated from Yeoman's School in January, 1944, with the rating of petty officer third class. She is assigned to the Intelligence Office in the Women's Reserve, United States Coast Guard.

In the wake of a heated four hour session of the Student Bureau of Investigation that resulted in a public reprimand to candidate Phil Bolin, the three aspirants for Student Association president are scheduled to air publicly the issues of the 1944 race tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Physics Building 201 in the first of two debates before election day Tuesday.

Although neither John Hill, Mac Wallace, nor Bolin have officially disclosed the issues they will propose at tonight's session, supporters and campaign managers say that a more powerful and active student government will be advocated together with an increasingly free voice from student publications.

Bolin Answers S. B. I. Charges

Says Party Wasn't for Him

(Editor's Note: Following is an answer by Phil Bolin to the charge that a party was given in the interest of his campaign for president.)

I would like to talk to each student individually about the issue now at hand, but as this is out of the question, the next best contact seems to be through The Daily Texan. I can sincerely say that I am no politician and that I represent no political machine. The people that stand behind me have impressed me with the fact that they would like a candidate that is not interested solely in politics but is intensely interested in serving the students as a whole with no preference at all to any group.

I would like for the students to know that I was not aware of the size of the party and did not suspect in any way that the party would reach such momentous heights. This may be borne out by the fact that I arrived exactly one hour and twenty minutes late for the friendly gathering after attending a two-hour football practice, and left very shortly afterward for a meeting with the Cowboys.

One other statement can be made concerning the incident. I will give my solemn vow to each of you that I sincerely promise upon my honor that I will not entertain any ideas of injustice toward my very worthy opponents and that I will reprimand any party for introducing such ungentlemanly procedure.

The whole issue may be summarized in my idea of college. I came to college to get an education and make friends, and I do not wish to be driving through a town later in life without feeling free to call on everyone that I have met during the college terms.

I hope that each of you will understand my position, and I give you my word that no similar incident will occur for any reason.

PHIL BOLIN.

Meets, Meetings to Make Busy Spring for U.T.

They Can Get Cokes For Nightly Snacks

Coke-vending machines will be installed in Carothers and Andrews Dormitories some time this week, it was announced Wednesday.

The installation of these machines will bring the total to six that have been put in for the Navy boys. There are machines already at Little Campus, Hill Hall, Oak Grove, and the Barracks.

Those machines already installed have proved very popular with the boys in the Navy dormitories.

The Weather

Partly cloudy and warmer Thursday.

Containing that he had nothing to do with planning the Monday afternoon party, Bolin pointed out that he arrived one hour and twenty minutes late and left thirty minutes later for a meeting of the Cowboys.

"If I had really wanted to do some campaigning," Bolin insisted, "I could have got there earlier and stayed until the end."

Betty Scott, S.B.I. chairman, returned that the group realized they also were at fault and did not believe that Bolin, personally, had any political intentions in mind about the party, but it could not ignore the gathering since it did seem to constitute a violation "in spirit" of committee rules. "Other candidates have already threatened to throw big political parties," Jane Cheatham, committee member, reported, "since they feel they could justifiably get away with it."

Agreeing that the committee could hardly take any other action, Bolin emphasized that he did not want to engage in "dirty politics" of any sort.

"When I leave school and am driving through a town where a former school friend lives," Bolin said, "I want to be able to stop and call him up without bothering to think how he felt about politics at the University."

"Phil, I don't ever want to hear of you coming through Waxahachie and not stopping to call me," Miss Cheatham interrupted. "I'll be sure to call," Bolin replied.

Bolin's complete statement concerning the S.B.I.'s action is also printed on this page.

Club Notes

New Galveston Club Has First Meeting

Another "home-town" club, the Galveston Club, was organized on the campus March 16. Galveston students had a club several years ago but it died out until this month when the University's Galvestonians decided they would like to see more of each other between holiday periods.

Officers elected at this first meeting were Louis Ragone, president; Kittie Sue Jenkins, vice-president; Betty Jean Randall, secretary-treasurer; and Samona Bodansky, reporter.

The next meeting of the club is scheduled for Thursday night at 7 o'clock, in the Texas Union.

The Duplicate Bridge Club will meet Thursday at 8 o'clock at the University Club. Guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Ersell Duke.

Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, director of the Hogg Foundation, told members of the Texas State Teachers Association Friday that "the lessons we have learned from this war have not been that our teachers or mathematics are remiss, but that somewhere in our educational system we have neglected the emotional stability of our children."

"We have found that the emotional breakdown in the army comes, not on the battle line, but two to three weeks after induction into the armed services."

Dr. Sutherland was speaking to members of the Texas State Teachers Association at a one-day session which was held Friday in San Antonio.

Psalx will meet Thursday night at 6 o'clock at Millet Mansion.

The Inter-American Association was host to visiting Latin-Americans taking the six-week course in English teaching and the Alpha Phi, Delta Zeta, and Kappa Kappa Gamma sororities at a dance Tuesday night at the Newman Club.

An orchestra composed of Simon Lan, Gustav Marquez, Luis Camminati, Edna Ramirez, and Luis Carias played Latin music for the intermission program, and Alice Mungia sang. Refreshments were served.

Wesleyans Have Long History

The Wesley Foundation has been a place of worship and recreation for approximately 25 percent of University students since 1924, when its two-story stone building was built to house Wesley Bible Chair classes and all Methodist student activities.

The Bible Chair and the Foundation were once distinct functions. The former was established to offer credit courses for the University students, and the latter was organized to offer religious and recreational activities. Later they were combined under one program.

In 1906, John R. Mott said he regarded The University of Texas as the most strategic field for religious effort in the entire Southwest. Through the years the promise that his statement gave has not failed to materialize. In 1940, when the enrollment of the University reached 11,101, the number of Methodist students attending the University exceeded the total number of Methodist students attending the seven Methodist colleges in Texas by 1,331. These facts show that for Texas Methodism, The University of Texas is still its most strategic field for religious endeavor.

The director of the Wesley Foundation is Dr. C. W. Hall, who is also the instructor for the Bible classes. Paul Deats is associate director, and is primarily responsible for the activity program.

A schedule of the activities of the Foundation for a week includes meetings and programs of the Wesley Players, a dramatic group; a fellowship hour at 6 o'clock on Sunday evenings; an after-church recreation hour; social service work; and various other programs which vary from time to time. The fellowship hour on Sunday evenings is the main program of the week. The programs vary from strictly worship hours to student forums. Often guest speakers are invited.

After church, students may gather at the Foundation for games, music, or some planned type of recreation. In the spring and summer months outdoor picnics and hikes are planned. All through the week the Foundation is open and accessible to students from 8 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night. There are ping pong tables, a book room, and games. Or if the student wishes, he may merely use the Foundation for a place to meet his friends. There are divans and a fireplace to make the students feel at home.

"We want to give the students a social and spiritual home, with emphasis given on counseling," Dr. Hall said. "Our social service work and the building of our worship programs are not just worthwhile activities alone. They give our young people training which will make them efficient workers. It is training which they can carry into other communities with them when their college careers are over."

New officers were recently elected for the year 1944-45. First Lieutenant Curtis O. Schmedes, 1941 graduate in chemical engineering, has been in the South Pacific area since receiving his commission in January, 1942, at Chanute Field, Ill.

While attending the University, Lieutenant Schmedes was a member of Chi Epsilon, Phi Eta Sigma, Tau Beta Pi, and Ramshorn.

Doris Mae Levine and Leatrice Zideff were in charge of arrangements. Sigma Delta Tau has initiated eight members. They are Ruthanne Jacobson, Shirley Cohn, Thelma Getsin, Lorraine Kahn, Rosemarie Levine, Marjorie Goldstein, Terry Schuchart, and Marion Silver.

After initiation a formal banquet was held at the chapter house. Marion Silver received the best pledge award, and Lorraine Kahn received the scholarship cup. Maxine Foreman and Sybil Abovitz were in charge of banquet arrangements.

Miss Betsy Smith Now Mrs. Edwin Dwyer

Miss Betsy Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Olin W. Smith of Dallas, became the bride of Lieutenant Edwin Albert Dwyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dwyer, also of Dallas, February 19, at the Preston Road Christian Church. Mrs. Dwyer was a student of the University 1941-42, and was a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Lieutenant Dwyer attended Texas A. & M. College.

Burr-Roberts Nonie Roberts, 1942-32, of Dallas, became the bride of George Alf Burr Jr., of Dallas on February 2 at the Dallas Woman's Forum.

The bride attended the University and was graduated from North Texas Agricultural College, Arlington. The bridegroom attended S. M. U.

Evans-Nelson Jo Ann Nelson will become the bride of Major Richard E. Evans, United States Army Airforce, on April 1.

Miss Nelson was recently initiated into Pi Beta Phi sorority. Major Evans has just returned from overseas service, and has been awarded the Distinguished Flying medal.

Grobe-Thorn The engagement of Betty Jane Thorn to Leon Holliday Grobe, B. A., 1941-42, has been announced. The wedding will be in April.

Miss Thorn will receive her bachelor of arts degree from Trinity University in May. Mr. Grobe received his bachelor of business administration degree from Trinity University after attending the University.

Wesleyans Have Long History

The Wesley Foundation has been a place of worship and recreation for approximately 25 percent of University students since 1924, when its two-story stone building was built to house Wesley Bible Chair classes and all Methodist student activities.

The Bible Chair and the Foundation were once distinct functions. The former was established to offer credit courses for the University students, and the latter was organized to offer religious and recreational activities. Later they were combined under one program.

In 1906, John R. Mott said he regarded The University of Texas as the most strategic field for religious effort in the entire Southwest. Herb King to Speak at 'Y' On 'The Christian Faith'

"When man is most himself, he recognizes his unity with man—he knows he is part of a universal family," says Herb King, national associate Y. M. C. A. secretary in the student department.

Mr. King will be the speaker for the Sophomore Upperclass Club at the "Y" Thursday night at 7 o'clock. His topic will be "The Content of the Christian Faith."

"The true nature of man is kinship with man, not fear of man, nor contempt for man, nor class divisions among men, nor isolation from man," says Mr. King.

Mr. King made a series of addresses at the Hollister Conference.

"Through suffering, man finds the will of God; and finding the will of God is simply finding your adjustment to life," Mr. King said in his talk Wednesday night at the "Y," while addressing Freshman Fellowship Club.

"Suffering is both normal and abnormal. To some degree it is normal to suffer," says Mr. King. "Suffering in this world has tenets to reveal to persons who see it what the will of God is."

Suffering is necessary in life, Mr. King believes. "Abnormalities are necessary to show that life must not be this way interminably."

"Men have found the will of God through suffering," Mr. King said in his talk Wednesday.

"History helps to show the way God works in the world through people." When I read biographies," said Mr. King, "I see how other men and women have found the will of God and have made adjustments to life."

"Prayer is important in our lives today," said Mr. King. "Through prayer we can learn the will of God."

"The Christian faith is not simple," says Mr. King. "It is a thing that grows on you as you search. But one of the tenets of our faith is that the more you seek, the more you find."

"We must search, and find what the will of God is—be sensitive to suffering, for it is a great revealer of the will of God."

"Suffering may be seen in history, and therefore the will of God in history. Suffering may be also seen in biographies, and finally in prayer life," stated Mr. King.

"Many of us are too lazy to analyze ourselves—to analyze what is wrong with us," said Mr. King. "We must try to perfect ourselves, to find the will of God as seen through suffering, and then make the proper adjustments in our lives."

The Sidney Lanier Literary Society will meet Thursday at 5 o'clock at the Alpha Epsilon Phi house.

Foo will meet at 7 o'clock at the Texas Union.

Party Politics To Be Discussed At Austin Forum

"A national political campaign of unusual bitterness is not improbable this year," predicts Edmunds Travis, relations counselor and editor of KNOW, who will speak under the sponsorship of the Austin Forum of Public Opinion in Austin High School April 3 at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Travis will discuss "Politics and Political Strategy in the 1944 Presidential Campaign."

"Each side will accuse the other of impeding the war effort," he says, "and each will endeavor to put itself before the country as the real win-the-war party." In outlining the strategy of the two parties, Mr. Travis says that the Democrats will play upon the patriotic angle of the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces for a fourth term, while the Republicans will seek to center attention upon the domestic policies of the present administration which have been unpopular.

They are John Deschner, president; Stanley Sameshima, vice-president; Jonita Majors, secretary; Martha Morton, publicity chairman; Glenda Oglesby, recreation chairman; and Rennie Mae Tarpley, president of Wesley Players.

The Firing Line

Should U. T. Registrar Rank Courses by Number--Or Knowledge?

(Editor's Note: In the letter printed below, the Texan violates its policy limiting Firing Line letters to 600 words. But it feels that the ideas expressed by the writer are important enough to warrant the breaking of this rule because the subject discussed has affected and will affect many students. Comment from both students and faculty is invited and the Firing Line will welcome further discussion of the problem.)

Dear Editor:

Tuesday the Faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences met in its minimal meeting for this term. Like the night-blooming cereus, the meeting was conceived in darkness and as the last member slowly left the hall, darkness still prevailed; only the fragrance of the cereus was missing.

It seems that some time ago the Faculty of the College of Engineering decided that if a student of engineering had taken Government 10, or some similar sophomore course, in a school of equal standing with the University, the course should transfer with full credit regardless of whether the course was taken when the student was a freshman or not. In short, the Engineering Faculty merely wished to honor the courses of other schools of equal standing as we honor their degrees and, incidentally, prevent the student from repeating a course already taken elsewhere. In other words, to give credit for knowledge instead of numbers.

At the last general faculty meeting, the action of the Engineering Faculty was up for ratification and evoked a diffuse discussion from Dean of Admissions E. J. Mathews somewhat along these lines. "I have long regarded it as a part of my obligation (1) to encourage other Texas institutions to set standards similar to ours, in important respects, and (2) to try to maintain these standards in the evaluation of transcripts from other colleges and universities." The faculty, while concurring in the broader aspects of these obligations of the Dean of Admissions, seemed to feel that it was somewhat presumptuous to tell other universities and colleges throughout the United States how they were to conduct their courses. The Engineering Faculty was upheld by a substantial margin.

Tuesday there was presented to the Faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences the following motion by the Dean of Admissions. "That in receiving students from other institutions full credit should normally be allowed, that is without regard to prerequisites or class level." This is what could be called a little gem of the first class. Not even the person who proposed it could find any merit in it. In the first place, a motion so worded would more properly be presented to the general faculty. Secondly, never has any one contended that all courses from all institutions should be taken for face value, but only those from universities and colleges of equal rank. Lost then in a welter of words pertaining to junior colleges was the forward step taken by the Engineering Faculty—a step which provides the means for the giving of credit for knowledge instead of course numbers.

And I use the term "a welter of words" advisedly. The discussion circumbulated like a palsied peripatetic from Harvard to California and back to the junior colleges of Texas—always back to the junior colleges of Texas and the Dean's responsibility to them. After an hour, the truest remark of the evening was made: "I am confused." At another point, three specific questions pertaining to past procedure were asked and after ten minutes of answer, every one was confused. Finally a substitute motion was made and passed which was in a "positive" form. It said in essence that we, the faculty, were in favor of the status quo—the status quo being to discriminate against the student in the College of Arts and Sciences who was so unfortunate as to take, at another university, a course in his freshman year which is not considered at The University of Texas as being "fitted" for any one until he has reached the maturity of the second year of college. Of course, if you are in the College of Engineering—that is another thing! Or if you take English 1a and 1b in an intercession, you can take second year English with only six hours of college credit! Apparently less maturity is required for sophomore English than for a sophomore Government course. Possibly a reconsideration of all prerequisites should be made.

Why am I writing this letter to the Texan?

What I would like to know is this: Why wasn't a representative of The Daily Texan at the meeting when advance notice was given that a controversial subject affecting the whole student body would be acted upon? Is it that the Texan is not interested in such matters or merely that the staff has a coke hour from four to five-thirty? If for no other reason, you should be there to hear learned professors talk all about a subject but seldom on it.

Having observed the editorial policy of the Texan for a number of years, I suspect that the real reason is that you are barred from the meetings. If this be the case, then it is past time that steps should be taken. The only reason I can think of for barring the press is to prevent them from finding out that the Faculty may have feet of clay. If a better reason is available, then I think we should be advised. The presence of the press might also cause several to be more clear, curt, and concise. Then we could all go home earlier—A FACULTY MEMBER.

(Editor's Note: The Texan, although welcome at meetings of student groups and even at meetings of the Board of Regents, is barred when the General Faculty Convenes. Our reports are written from material telephoned by the Secretary.)

He's a Good Preacher, But His Facts Don't Jive

Perhaps Willis W. Weatherford, youth secretary of the Methodist Commission of World Peace, meant well when he told University audiences this week that atrocity stories coming out of Japanese prison camps were concocted by American propagandists to sell War Bonds, but we're inclined to believe he had his facts wrong.

Mr. Weatherford's story doesn't quite ring as true to University students as did that of Lieutenant-Colonel William Dyess who suffered almost every torture at the hands of the Japs. And how about the men who bombed Tokyo, were forced down, then murdered brutally?

Then there's James R. Young, International News Service correspondent who knows Japan intimately, both pre-war and present. His book, "Behind the Rising Sun," didn't exactly picture the Japanese as "friendly enemies."

We agree with Mr. Weatherford that international hatred will be detrimental to the peace. But we don't agree that the stories of Japanese atrocities were concocted to sell War Bonds.

Men like Mr. Weatherford would do better to stay with their missionary work instead of going about the country poisoning the minds of the people against the integrity of their government. We're in this fight to win and it'll take all of our combined energies to do it. We don't want to waste time by listening to or reading statements like Mr. Weatherford makes.—JACK MAGUIRE.

We felt like devoting this whole column and then some to some choice little items from a publication called the Red and Black, which hails from the University of Georgia. Anyway, we wanted to pass a couple or so along to you (if the editor will print them):

"It seems there was fire in one of the girls' dorms (Georgia, not U.T.) the other night and it took the firemen 30 minutes to put it out. It took three and a half hours to put the firemen out though."

"And then there was the expectant father who took his wife to the country the other day. He heard they had rural free delivery."

There were some new V-5's with cute Southern accents complaining to us the other day about the unfriendliness of the Forty Acres, especially on the part of the feminine sex (the time was obviously before the sweetheart election.) It appeared that they had just transferred from a much friendly university in the deep South and were a little disappointed here. The point is, we thought of them when we found this in the Red and Black:

"Someone had the Peach of the Week; then some brain storm thought up the Sheik of the Week—Well, now, we of the ASTP (at the University of Georgia) have—the Leech of the Week. The honor, if you call it that, goes to some of those persistent females in town who just hang for dear life, on the boys... give 'em a break, gals."

So it could be worse, kids.

Students to Solo With Symphony

Singers, Organists In Concert Tonight

Five student musicians will solo with the University Symphony Orchestra in Recital Hall Thursday at 8:15 o'clock.

Soloists are Marguerite Grissom, soprano; Betty Esma Beth Anderson and Verna Covington, orchestration students.

Arthur Kreutz will conduct the orchestra in the Classical Symphony of the contemporary Russian composer, Sergei Prokofiev, Bach's Choral Prelude, "O Mensch Bewein Dein Sunde Gross," is also to be included on the program.

Miss Grissom will sing the aria "Deh, vieni, non tarder," from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro," and will join Miss Wermine in a duet "Sous le Dome epais," from Delibes' "Lakme." Miss Wermine will also sing the aria "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," from "Samson and Delilah," by Saint-Saens.

Both Miss Grissom and Miss Wermine are students of Chase Baromeo.

Mary Ellen Hayes, student of Dean E. W. Doty, will play Handel's "Organ Concerto in A Major."

Miss Anderson and Miss Covington, students in advanced orchestra, will be presented at the concert in their orchestral transcription of Prokofiev's march from "The Love of Three Oranges," Gershwin's "Prelude," and "Claire de Lune" by Debussy.

'The Messiah' Music Tells Life of Christ

"The Messiah," directed by Dr. Archie M. Jones, to be given at 4 o'clock on Palm Sunday in Hogg Memorial Auditorium, will present three faculty members as soloists, the Austin Mixed Chorus, the Austin Symphony Orchestra, and members of several local church choirs.

"The Messiah" is an oratorio composed by Handel, setting to music the great events in the life of Christ. It consists of three major divisions. The first contains the prophecy of the coming of the Messiah and the narrative of his nativity; the second depicts the Savior's suffering, death, and triumph; and the third is a credo of the beliefs and faiths of the believers in Christ.

'Heartless' Psych Prof Proves Value Of Own Inhibitions

"Is that a heart you have there?" asked a student who had come to visit Dr. Wade Brown, assistant professor of psychology.

"No," replied Dr. Brown, smiling to himself, "That's a model of the brain."

"Oh," exclaimed the student, "then I suppose this is the front."

"No, that's the back," Dr. Brown said, pointing to some nerve fibers.

By this time Dr. Brown was quite amused. He was tempted to say nonchalantly, "Yes, these are the teeth and this (the thalamus) is the tongue."

But no, Dr. Brown did have a heart—a tender, yielding heart of his own. And he was grateful to this untutored student for adding to his stock of classroom anecdotes.

'Birth of a Nation' Shows Today at 4

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's immortal screen story will be shown Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in Geology Building 14 as one of the free movies sponsored by the College of Fine Arts.

This famous movie depicts life in the South during the Reconstruction Period after the Civil War. Woodrow Wilson's comment on its authenticity was: "It is like writing history with lightning. My one regret is that it is all so terribly true."

Producer Griffith is hailed undisputed master of the motion picture industry, having originated many of the present-day techniques and expressions. His use of the "close-up" in "The Birth of a Nation" is important.
