Plans for Library Addition Harmonize with Old Building

West Wing Is Expected to Cost Over Half Million

With the erection of another unit to the present library building, the University will have advanced one step farther toward its goal of a "Shackless Campus." Plans of the building committee were approved by the Board of Regents in their meeting Monday and Tuesday.

The plan for the library, according to Dr. W. J. Battle, chairman of the building committee, includes a wing similar to the one now facing the east, to face west, but to be a great deal larger than the present building. The new building will contain a new series of stacks, and a number of reading rooms.

The estimated cost of the addition will be about $600,000 when completed.

The west wing will be of Gothic Renaissance architecture, like the part already erected. This type of architecture has been adopted by the University and will be used in all its buildings in the future. The present library was modeled after a building in Spain, studied by Dr. Battle while in that country.

Removal of the reserve library, now situated in the Main Building, to a reserve reading room in the new building is contemplated. The reserve library was moved from the main reading room two years ago because of the increased use of reserve books, and the growing demand for room.

It is likely that part of the departmental libraries will remain where they are located now. At present there are a number of libraries in the various departments, which contain books pertaining to them especially and used by the students of those departments. Some of the smaller ones may be moved back to the main library when room is made, Dr. Battle said.

The new building will contain, besides additional stack room and reading rooms, a number of seminar rooms and studies connected with them. There will also be room for study in the stacks by graduate students, who are doing research work.

According to plans for the addition to the building, J Hall, containing the University Press and The Texan editorial offices, will have to be moved. The campus pond, commonly known as Beck's Lake, will also be destroyed by the building. The building committee has made no decision as to whether another pond will be constructed or not.

Beck's Lake was built a number of years ago for the purpose of growing botanical specimens for study by University botany classes; but now the pond has become one of the traditions of the schools having no practical value.

The construction of the new unit can not be started until room has been made for the press. It is likely that the actual construction will begin next spring, if plans of the Regents materialize fully.

Karow Signs as Assistant Coach

All-American Halfback to Assist Littlefield With Grid Team

Marty Karow, all-American halfback from Ohio State University, wired acceptance of a position as assistant football coach of the University Wednesday. He will aid Coach Clyde Littlefield with his team this fall.

There is still some hope that Tom Dennis, former University athlete and all-conference tackle, can be secured as freshman football and basketball coach, it is said. Dennis has signed at Port Arthur High School but may be released.

Work on Campus Rushed Forward

Steam Tunnel, Terraces, Electrical Equipment, Under Construction

Work of terracing the east side of the campus is being rapidly pushed forward under the direction of Dean T. U. Taylor. The plan provides for one terrace in front of B. Hall, extending parallel to the building, and another at the corner of Garrison Hall nearest the entrance. A concrete retaining wall is being built in each case. The terraces will be seeded with grass as soon as the grading is completed.

The steam tunnel which is to supply the Littlefield Dormitory is also under construction. This is planned so as to use the present power facilities, and then to be easily converted when the new power plant is completed. The original University Power Building behind the Main Building is being remodeled to take care of the electrical distribution system for the entire campus.

The general campus improvement program calls for the paving of the east side of the main driveway, leading from the main entrance in front of Garrison Hall. The road is being built up with gravel at present.

TALK FRIDAY ON ECLIPSES

Lantern Slides Will Be Used to Illustrate Lecture on Astronomy

"Eclipses" will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. H. Y. Benedict at the Open Air Theater Friday night at 8 o'clock.

"Eclipses" is a gloomy subject," said Dean Benedict. "But fortunately the gloom is of short duration, at the longest not over seven minutes."

Dean Benedict will show a number of lantern slides to illustrate his lecture. The moon is not in the right position at this time to make observation through the telescope practical. Later in the term, Dean Benedict will deliver another lecture and give his audience the opportunity of making telescopic observations.

Students Visit Places on Campus

Wrenn and Garcia Libraries Are of Great Interest

Under the supervision of I. I. Nelson, Miss Clara Mae Parker, and Miss Lula Bewley, the regular Saturday afternoon excursion will be conducted to points of interest on the campus. The students will be directed to the Wrenn, Garcia, and Main Libraries, Garrison Hall, the Biology Building, and to the art exhibit on the fourth floor of the Main Building.

The Wrenn and Garcia Libraries are especially interesting, because of the old manuscripts in their possession. Both these collections contain many originals in the special fields. The Wrenn Library was intended to give the history of English literature in the original; the Garcia collection was obtained from an old Mexican library.

July "Alcalde" Presents Plan of Varsity Union

Articles of Wide Appeal Feature Recent Number of Exes Magazine

Commencement

From the featured article on the Student Union by Judge T. W. Gregory, president of the Ex-Students' Association, through some 125 pages to Dean H. Y. Benedict's "Peregrinations," to which he has recently and laconically declared an "end," the July issue of the Alcalde, commencement number of the official organ of the exes, presents a potpourri of topics treated by graduates, undergraduates, and men of note from the University which ought to be of wide appeal among readers of the magazine.

Two stores prepared by Judge Gregory point out the many details of the projected Union Buildings and explain the part which the ex-students offer to take in the completion of those plans. It is to be noted that the plans proposed in a report of the executive meeting of the exes which was presented to the Board of Regents at its recent meeting were approved by the Board, and definite arrangements were suggested toward their fulfillment.

Hon. Morris Sheppard presented a treatment of "Education From the Standpoint of the Machine Age," taken in part from his commencement address. He made the point that the task of the University is to fit men to reclaim free life from present conditions, displaying the insight into present conditions and their significance to the individual which has brought him recognition as one of the outstanding humanitarians in the national lawmaking body.

Hon. Tom Connally, in delivering the alumni address at the ex-student meeting, urged the selection of an ex as president and the formation of great schools of history and political science as forward steps for the school. He presented his arguments in a graphically written article for the Alcalde.

Another summarized commencement address was given in President W. M. W. Splawn's appeal to the 541 persons who marched through rain to receive their degrees, calling for their support in obtaining ultimately for the University an adequate maintenance both in finances and in spirit.

Following the regular departmental notes and Who's Who biographies, Dick Vaughan, '28, presented a seasoned sports editor's views of the past year in University athletics. The Texas Longhorns won three championships, he pointed out. "Losses in football were more than evened by wins in Baseball, track, and tennis," he said.

Texas Collection
For the Texas collection of books and present-day literature by University students, Dr. G. W. Cunningham has reviewed "The Democratic Way of Life" by Thomas Vernon Smith; Dr. Helen Lois Koch has summarized "Psychology: Its Methods and Principles" by Dr. F. A. C. Perrin and Dr. D. B. Klein.

Reception Given for Students of Second Term by Summer Committee

A reception for students and faculty members of the second term, sponsored by the summer entertainment committee, and under personal supervision of Miss Lula Bewley, was held last night in front of the Main Building at 8 o'clock. The affair is of annual occurrence, this being the third summer that it has been given.

Punch was served those present, and a general informal meeting was

REGENTS MAKE MINES PLANS

Additional Appropriation Allows New Departments at El Paso

Regents of the University adopted the plan for the School of Mines as outlined in the additional appropriation made for it by the past Legislature. No radical changes from the present organization were made, but merely increased size was allowed for.

Among other additions were the biological science department, business administration department, education department, one instructor in English, one instructor in romance languages, and a physician for the physical education department. A permanent laboratory for the department of metallurgy was also provided for.

Double Staff
The instruction staff of the school has been doubled as a result of the increased appropriation.

With the doubled instruction staff and the addition of the new departments, it is expected that the enrollment will be increased at least 500 per cent, making a total of 500 students in school.

Deep Tests May Give More Oil

Reagan Field Production Revival Promised by Tests

With deeper tests recently made in the Reagan County field showing a good flow of oil, it is indicated that the yield to the University of Texas will be materially increased. Production has been steadily declining in this field until these latest tests were made.

Production in the Crane County field is holding up satisfactorily, the yield now being approximately 60,000 barrels, according to reports received by University officials.

O'Brien to Lecture Educational Society

Featuring a lecture by F. P. O'Brien, member of the education faculty, the Educational Association will hold its first meeting of the second term of summer school at the University Commons, Friday at 12:10 o'clock, according to M. O. Britt, president.

Organized to promote educational interests, the Association is composed of the disciples of pedagogy now on the campus.

BASFORD ON VACATION
Mildred Basford, secretary of the athletic council, is on a vacation of a month. She will resume her work at the athletic offices on August 10.

Pharmacy Likely Placed in Shacks

New Instructors Come to Campus at Opening of Long Session

College of Pharmacy, which is to be moved from Galveston, will be here this fall for the benefit of the medical students of the University. No specific place has been fixed for their location, but it is supposed that they will be located in some of the campus shacks until some more suitable place is found. This will be quite a problem, Registrar Matthews stated.

The faculty will consist of Edward Randall, professor of therapeutics; Walter Tell Garbade, associate professor emeritus of chemistry and lecturer on commercial methods; William Bernard Sharp, professor of bacteriology and preventative medicine; Murla Algeo, adjunct professor of pharmacology; W. T. Dawson, associate professor of pharmacology; Philip L. Gray, adjunct professor of physiology; C. A. Nau, adjunct professor of chemistry; Chas. C. Albers, instructor in pharmacy and pharmaceutical arithmetic; Anna Marie Carroll, instructor in bacteriology; and Mrs. P. A. Woodward, instructor in pharmacy.

New Benches Placed at Open Air Theater

Building and painting the new benches to be used at the Open Air Theater is now complete, according to an announcement made by Dean Moore. The benches were built and painted by the campus carpenters. The new seats will accommodate about 1,000 persons. With the bleachers, that seat about 500 people, the iron benches that seat 200, and 300 chairs, the Open Air Theater will now comfortably accommodate 2,000 persons, Dean Moore said.

348 New Students Register Second Summer Session

No Estimation of Number of Old Students Remaining Is Possible

New Total 3177

Registration for the second term of summer school yesterday closed with 348 new students enrolled, which brought the University summer school enrollment above any figure set before, according to information from the Auditor's office.

No account of the number of old student who did not register the second term was kept. To the present there are 3177 students registered this summer.

Last year there were 2972 students, and in 1925 the total reached its height up to that time, with 3070. Although the figures exceeded the final figure for last year, the number to register in the second term who had not been in attendance the first, was far less than in former years. Last year the new students registering in July was over nine hundred.

Last long session the enrollment for the year totaled over 5,000, and exceeded that of any year preceding it.

It is possible that there will be a number to register late, according to reports from the auditor.

More Rooms in Dormitory Made

Little Campus Converted Into Quarters for Men

"Work of converting old main building on Little Campus into a dormitory for men is finished except for 30 rooms, and the plumbing is being done in these rooms.

The work will probably be finished in three weeks, according to Dean V. I. Moore. This is the largest of the three buildings that are to be used for the accommodations of men students. This building will accommodate 45 men and it is here that the gymnasium, reception room, and apartment for the manager are located. The third floor of the building is not going to be used, as it is old and rather dangerous.

The other two of the 3 buildings used are: first, the one marked A, which is situated on the Southeast corner of Little Campus. Dormitory A is composed of 32 double rooms and will accommodate 64 men.

The second of the buildings is marked B and is situated on the Northeast corner of Little Campus on Nineteenth and East Ave streets. It will accommodate 36 men.

The third floor of these buildings marked C is the old main building that, as was stated above, is now nearing completion.

The three buildings have accommodations for 140 or 145 men instead of 160, which would have been the number if the third floor of old main building could be used.

Dean Moore states that deposits have already been received from 65 students for the long session and that no doubt the building will be full.

COMMENCEMENT ON CAMPUS

Summer School commencement will be held at the Open Air Theater, instead of the Stadium, as was previously announced, Dean V. I. Moore stated yesterday. Unless the weather is unfavorable the exercise will be held in the open, as there is no place at present that will seat enough people.

PLAY BALL!

ATHLETICS for the summer session will become a reality if plans that are now being considered by the men's athletic department are put into effect. At the present time tennis courts and handball courts are open to all students who wish to take advantage of them; but the element of competition that usually adds a great deal to the pleasure of every sport is lacking. The plan contemplates an organization of summer sports somewhat on the plan of that followed in the long session.

Student participation in athletic games is a source of much benefit to the ones who take part in them; and it is regrettable that so little attention has been paid to this part of the student program for the summer. Not that provisions have not already been made; for the excellent work that has been done by those in charge of the evening play hour is not to be overlooked. It has been possible, however, to interest only about 70 or 80 students in the evening games, which shows that there is opportunity for a great deal of expansion. Besides the play hour only comes once a week and this infrequently militates against the possibility of success that should attend such an effort. The plan followed in the long session is to divide the University into six intramural leagues which hold contests in the various sports throughout the year. Statistical evidence indicates that these contests are very successful, since there are about 70 per cent of the men students who take part in them. It would seem, therefore, that an attempt ought to be made to provide some such scheme for the summer students; and there is justification for believing that a move of this sort would prove very popular. The success that has been the measure of the plans that have already been put in practice for the women of the summer session would indicate that a demand exists for an organization of this sort for men.

Since there seems to be a preponderance of evidence in favor of the practicability of summer school intramural athletics, any move looking toward the installation of a plan that would provide for them ought to be given serious consideration. Though it would be impossible to successfully work out the details of the organization during the present summer session, it is hoped that the students that come to the University in the summer of 1928 will find it perfected.

SWIMMING DEGREES

IN the catalogue of every university the diligent seeker after the degree will find a section entitled "Requirements for Degrees." Just at this time of year the particular section in question is studied with greater interest—or anxiety—than any other document. With even greater interest, it is to be feared, than the actual subject matter of the courses taken.

Dartmouth has regulations that differ little in some respects from those at other universities. In June a Bostonian named Joseph Russakoff came near losing his college degree by an odd fluke. He was a good student, with a perfect record for his senior year and supposedly a star record behind that. But at the last minute he received a special delivery letter from the dean informing him that he had never passed his freshman swimming test, and he couldn't get his degree until he swam the length of the gym pool. He rushed to the pool, jumped in and swam from end to end, then rushed back just in time to make connection with his sheepskin.

We would not appear to belittle the value of such regulations. It has often been announced by those who have made them that they serve a useful purpose. No more need be said. But it might well be pointed out that there is some basis for the present cult of degree worshippers. It is as hedged about with physical protective factors as the favorite in a maelstrom. It must be remembered, however, that it is all for the best.

BUSINESS AS A LIBERAL PROFESSION

IN an address dedicating Wieboldt Hall of Northwestern University at McKinlock Campus, Chicago, Dr. Edwin F. Gay, founder and first dean of the Harvard School of Business Administration, directed attention to the scientific character of modern business problems and the consequent tendency to elevate business management into a liberal profession.

While some successful older men of affairs still question the value of a college education to those who intend to take up industry or commerce as their means of livelihood, life itself is solving that alleged problem in its own way. Schools of commerce and of business administration are being established by the universities and secondary business schools are growing in numbers and popularity. Chambers of commerce and trade associations, with their staffs of statisticians and practical economists, are enlarging their programs continually and are arranging conferences to discuss the national and international aspects of modern business.

As Dr. Gay says, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that, in obedience to necessity and the dictates of efficiency and economy, business is becoming a liberal profession. It requires training and knowledge as well as natural ability and spontaneous resourcefulness.

But what, meantime, is happening to the college of arts and humanities? Some educators express apprehension lest the college is doomed, because on the one hand business and professional schools, and on the other hand junior high schools and junior colleges are conspiring, unconsciously, to deprive it of its occupation. Moreover, the courses of the so-called liberal college are imposed upon it more and more by the special schools—by law, medicine, engineering, administration, public health. This effort of the college is to meet the needs and demands of the professions, but that process may be carried too far. It is carried too far if cultural studies and the humanities are sacrificed or unduly subordinated.

The world needs specialists, and it needs scientific and practical efficiency. But it also needs men and women of general education and culture. If the colleges does not aim deliberately to graduate such students, no other institution will. Never has the world needed more and better general education—education in politics, history, ethics, philosophy, and the humanities at large.

The college of liberal arts should take stock and consider its place and its future. Possibly some tendencies in higher education may have to be modified or reversed if the college is to be saved.—Chicago Daily News.

THE SCHOOL APPORTIONMENT

THE apportionment for the next scholastic year will be at the rate of $15 per child, the largest ever made. And for the scholastic year after that the likelihood is it will be no less. At all events, Mr. Marrs thinks it will be so, and he usually knows. But not always. For it was only a few weeks ago that Mr. Marrs was directing the chorus that told us that unless a tobacco tax was levied instantly, or earlier, dire things would happen to the schools; among them an apportionment so much less than $15 per child that the doors of many of them would be closed very shortly after they had been opened.

Several explanations for a condition so different from that foretold are offered. One is that the consumption of gasoline has been heavier than had been expected, and hence a larger flow of revenue into the available school fund. Another is that a way has been found to practice a great economy in the purchase of textbooks.

But the explanations, however valid, do not obscure the fact that the levy of a tax on tobacco was not so imperatively needed as was imagined by those who cried for it. The discovery of that fact should

HOW TO BE A FAILURE

Anybody can be a success these days.

If you don't believe it, read the correspondence school ads in the magazines. Or read Dorothy Dix. Or read Doc Frank Crane. Or listen to the advice of the $15-a-week fellow who knows everything or at least thinks he does. Or use your own common sense—if any. Or go into the movies. The way is positively paved to success these days!

Success being so easily accomplished and therefore so common, what is the poor youth who wants to be a failure going to do? Must he be thrust into success without recourse?

Fight Yell!

Ah, gentlemen and ladies and my friends, this is a free country. Our forefathers rose up and smote such tyranny a century and a half ago. Must we revert to servitude without a struggle? Let us rise up and smite these forces which tend to make all of us millionaires, political leaders and whatnot. Let us protect the noble art of Failing.

Do I hear a voice from the back row protesting that if we succeed in this effort we are no failures? In that case let us set out to fail in this effort. If we fail to fail, we are still failures. (Applause.)

Aw, It's Too Hot

But, on second thought, it is too hot today to do anything strenuous. Let us postpone the matter until tomorrow. Tomorrow never comes; so we are bound to make a grand failure of the matter. We don't have to do any work either. (More applause.)

Let us strike at the heart of this matter. Let us take up some individual problem vice versa, pdq or post mortem. (Wasn't that a glorious failure of a sentence?)

Are you having difficulty in failing your courses? Foolish question, I'm sure. What with this nice summer weather invigorating you and the professors grading so easily—why, I'm certain that most of you are making A's in spite of your efforts to bring your grades down.

This valuable advice is being offered free of charge—positively no red tape—not even any dotted lines on which to sign. If you don't like it, go hide in an ice factory until you cool off. Or play marbles in your own back yard. See if I care!

What was I saying? Oh, yes, I was talking about how to become a failure as a student. When I get to rambling on sometimes, I stray from my point—all of which proves that my lectures serve their purpose okeh—they are good failures.

How It Is Done

Walk right into your prof's office, blow some cigarette smoke in his face, sit down on the table and remark, "Dr. Hoozoo, you're an awful egg even if you do boost my grade now and then. I'll be perfectly frank with you. I don't see how in the world you get by with such a line of rot as you put forth in your lectures. If I was as dumb as you are, I'd take a permanent vacation. My conscience wouldn't let me have as much gall as you have to rave on as you do."

Then snap your fingers in his face and walk out. That method will work just fine. It never fails unless the prof is a bigger man than you are and throws you out or beats you up. He'll bust you anyhow; so why worry?

For the Co-eds

Of course, the co-eds can't use quite such tactics. Maybe they can, but they won't, so it doesn't make much difference. Now, girls, the thing for you to do is to date up with the prof and gold-dig him to death. If you don't get zero, it's because the prof has fallen in love with you. In that case you're out of luck. You're bound to get A as long as you have a course under him. You're bound to win if he's married though. Let him flirt with you, then tell his wife about it. You'll get results, and how!

Do you know a word of three letters meaning "not in"? Well, that's where you will be. You will be a guaranteed flop as a student. No foolin'.

Now, children, run along and go to sleep, or I'll tell you a bedtime story.

THE CINEMA

MAJESTIC: W. C. Fields in "Running Wild," Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

QUEEN: Irene Rich in "Dearie," Thursday; Rex in "No Man's Law," Friday and Saturday.

HANCOCK: John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Count of Monte Cristo," Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

TEXAS: Colleen Moore in "Orchids and Ermine," Thursday; Douglas Fairbanks in "The Black Pirate," Friday and Saturday.

Running Wild

THURSDAY, Friday, and Saturday the Majestic presents W. C. Fields in "Running Wild." There is no advance publicity current on this picture, as it is of such recent release, but Mr. Fields will be surety for a good audience on the strength of "Sally of the Sawdust" and "The Old Army Game" in which he utilized the comedy tricks which have kept him on Mr. Zeigfield's pay-roll as a yearly attraction in "The Follies" for so many seasons.

pathetic director handled the production.

The supporting cast includes William Collier, Jr., who has finally caught the idea that he is in the movies to act, and whose juvenile lead was by the playing of his arty roommate, a well-handled bit of character work.

The name of the actor and that of the gentleman who played the nightclub proprietor I did not catch, but each did exceedingly good work in connection with Miss Rich's charming portrayal. The Queen scores another presentation of a picture only just released.

Orchids and Ermine

THE NEW YORKER announces that Colleen Moore is again throwing herself away on a story of no consequence, but her performance in this bit of foolishness is most amusing, and she contrives to find more methods of exploiting her remarkable gift of pantomime than are apparent from the scenario.

This would indicate that less resourceful actresses let many opportunities pass to add variety and whimsicality to the deadly playing of straight roles to which the public has had to accustom itself. It would be a boon if Miss Moore were put into the hands of a director who could smooth down her gestures and teach her the poise and presence she needs to complete her technical equipment.

She has developed so remarkably since her early playing in the pictures that there is every reason to expect her to accomplish some really fine work in the future. The present picture is better than the delicatessen story in which she appeared just previously, and it is to be hoped that her producers will find a suitable and worthy vehicle.

Jack Mulhall gives the pleasantest and most ingratiating performance he has ever gives, although it would appear that due credit should be given Harold Lloyd for characterization and make-up.

POP-UPS AND BINGLES

By ABE MEHL

Well, the coaching problem has been settled at last and we're glad the whole thing is over. And Clyde Littlefield will have a powerful team on the field in a couple of months.

Now the members of the team can rest easy, knowing that they have their leader. Things will begin to shape out gradually, and the men will have more interest in their team.

Littlefield is a capable athlete and coach, and the boys will work hard for him. And with Ox Higgins and Rufus King as leaders of the aggregation, the Longhorns look like strong contenders for the conference flag.

Right now McGraw's Giants are slipping, and the former world's champs realize the mistake they made when they sent Andy Cohen to Buffalo for further seasoning.

Though the Giants have reserved a short option notice on Cohen, Buffalo at present is leading the International League by a game or so, and the flashy fielder's departure would be sorely felt.

Cohen, who formerly was with Waco, has been setting his league afire this season in hitting besides putting up his sensational game in the infield. He'll probably be gracing a regular berth for the Giants before long.

Bobby Jones sure showed the boys how to wield a golf club while competing for the English crown. Some thought Bobby was about through, but he just tied the course record on one of his flights, and this feat has been duplicated only once in history.

Sport fans over the country are well acquainted with the record hung up by Everett Scott, former shortstop of the New York Yankees. Scott played in 1307 consecutive games, and in several instances barely missed breaking his record.

But now comes another contender for the Scott laurels. Alabama Joe Sewell of the Cleveland Indians has played in about 860 games so far, and with an even break in luck is liable to shatter Scott's mark. If not for the fact that he was kept out of the lineup in order to give a rookie a chance in 1921, he would have surpassed the 1000 mark at this time of his career.

In order to break Scott's record, Sewell, who is 27, must play in every game until the middle of the 1930 season. He is said to have the finest pair of eyes in baseball. Sewell is one of three brothers in the major leagues, and all hail from the University of Alabama.

Just two more days and then this Sharkey-Dempsey bout will be over. Pre-dope favors both fighters.

but though the former title holder has the edge in experience, Sharkey is conceded the advantage in condition, but must keep cool under fire.

Sharkey's fault in the past has been to break loose under fire, and this will be one of the big points in his bout with Dempsey. Well, anyway, the fistic fans will see a good battle Thursday night.

Several weeks ago, Jimmy Cooney of the Chicago Cubs, and Johnny Neun of the Detroit Tigers pulled unassisted triple plays within a few days. Up to that time, the unassisted triple play had been staged only six times in all baseball history.

But Neun grabbed the headlines once again. In a game several days ago, he piled up five singles in a seven inning game, and in the same game swiped five bases. Both of these performances constitute records for abbreviated games. No man in the majors has stolen as many as five bags in one full game in the last twelve years.

Out at Lawrence College, somewhere in the United States, the Hyde Brothers, Donald and Douglas, twins, will captain their track team next season. Both brothers specialize in the hurdles and dashes.

Speed: How well does Percy sing?
Way: Well, his name back of a cigarette would be worth about 30 cents.

At a recent Southern Conference carnival, "Roast" Hamm, star track man of Georgia Tech, hung up a new record in the broad jump with a leap of 24 feet, 11 3/4 inches. This was the best mark made in college circles the past year.

Though his performance at Baton Rouge was the best, he copped his event at the Penn Relays and at the National Intercollegiate Meet held last month at Chicago. While in high school in 1924, he jumped over 24 feet to win the interscholastic title of his state.

He was injured in an automobile accident, and the ankle that he used to take off with didn't heal back properly. His marks began to become shorter; Hamm just changed his legs, and began to take off on his other ankle. Though he had difficulty in changing his style, he learned how to jump on the wrong foot, and now he is still one of the outstanding broad jumpers of the country.

Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees was the first batter in the American League to reach the 100-hit mark, and has been one of the leading swatters in his loop all season. He is expected to develop into the greatest left-handed hitter of all time.

These left-handers are good, and there's no two ways about it. A good southpaw pitcher just can't be beat when he's got a little control. But all of them are lucky more or less, and the old story that is told on them is to the effect that about a million of them were in the army and not a one received a scratch.

How about this one for today?
Question: Who holds the record in the 2-mile run in the Southwest Conference?
Answer: Sandi Esquivel of Texas, made in 1925, with a time of 9:32.

Since the retirement of Benny Leonard from the lightweight ranks several years ago, there have been numerous contenders for his title. Leonard was without any doubt one of the best and cleanest fighters in all history. Apparently not able to stay in his own division any longer, he retired as lightweight champion of the world.

It has been said that the girls at the University of Michigan have organized a girls' class in rifle shooting. Better keep their diplomas off the parlor walls if they expect any proposals.

The youngsters are breaking the records in all sports, but the old-timers are still in the limelight. Walter Johnson is still pitching shut-out games, and which is a new record for him after each performance after these many 20 years in the big leagues.

Ty Cobb is still smacking the ball to all corners of the lot; and then there's Speaker, Collins, Wheat, and many others that are still going. Ted Roy, past 50 now, is the premier golfer of England. DeMar, outstanding Marathon runner of the United States, is past 40, and has just left a couple of new records. These old boys are still right in there.

When Lester Bell, hot corner man of the world champ St. Louis Cards, whiffed out five times on May 12, he joined an exclusive society. Only Ossie Bluege of the Washington Senators has struck out as many times in one game and this was several years ago.

And incidentally, only four men have fanned five times in one game in all baseball history. Henry Dowlings was the original charter member in 1899, Perry of the Athletics joined in 1919, Bluege in 1923, and then Bell.

Howard Williamson who is playing left field with Syracuse, runner-up in the International League, had a pretty fair week with the bat. Will is lead-off man for his team, and at the present time his aggregation is making a determined bid to oust Buffalo from the top rung.

Question: When Jack Johnson defeated Jim Jeffries in 1910, how long did he remain champion?
Answer: From his victory in 1910 until he was defeated by Jess Willard in 1915.

Isn't it funny that most of the first names of the heavyweight champs and contenders of the world start with the letter "J"? There was Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries, Jess Willard, Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey, Jimmy Maloney, and some say that Tunney's name is Jack. And there's a flock more.

Sabin Carr of Yale, who pole-vaulted fourteen feet this spring for a new world's record, was the only champion of 1926 to repeat his victory this year.

Jack: You certainly wear fine clothes.
Jill: Yes, I eat at the best place in town.

Ed Olle crashed through with a home run Saturday against the ram-paging Wichita Falls Spudders, and also collected another hit, but the league leaders, with a late rally, beat out the San Antonio Bears 7 to 5.
