Young Man in a Hurry

A small boy, the reason for his haste undisclosed, speeds past a wall of old posters, which hang like faded hopes in the harsh noonday sun of Nuevo Laredo. With his hustle, though, it's certain he's going places. The photographer in this study of modern Mexico on the move was Karen Wiles, a University student.

Demo National Chairman Under Fire

Governors Caucus Urges Westwood To Resign

WASHINGTON (AP)—Saying the Democratic Party needs a new sense of direction following President Nixon's landslide re-election last week, the leaders of the Democratic Governors Caucus Monday urged party Chairman Jean Westwood to resign.

"I would hate to say Mrs. Westwood is what's wrong with the Democratic Party," said Arkansas Gov. Dale Bumpers following a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic governors' organization.

But, Bumpers said, the Democratic National Committee is expanding under new party rules and "we feel the leadership of this party should be considered anew" when the 303 committee members meet Dec. 9.

"When you don't win a national election it's time to reappraise the leadership of the party," Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel said.

Bumpers said the recommendation of his executive committee will be forwarded to the meeting of all 31 Democratic governors and governors-elect when they meet in St. Louis Dec. 3.

A FORMAL resolution asking Mrs. Westwood to step down could be passed at that time, he said, unless she resigns before then, which, he said, "would be the gracious thing for her to do."

The 48-year-old Mrs. Westwood was vacationing in Miami Monday, but an aide to the first woman chairman of either major party said she is standing by her statement last Thursday that she will resist efforts to oust her.

"JEAN WESTWOOD is alive and well and intends to remain on the job," she said at that time. She said she has been lining up support among DNC members and thinks she can defeat any effort to vote her out.

Mrs. Westwood's opponents, who are known to include some leaders of the AFL-CIO, several Democratic members of Congress and many of the Democratic governors, say she is too closely associated with Sen. George McGovern and party reforms inspired by McGovern to be effective as party chief.

Many of the anti-Westwood Democrats prefer former party treasurer Robert Strauss of Texas for the post. But several other names have been frequently mentioned, including former Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, New York State Democratic Chairman Joseph Crangle, and McGovern's Southern California campaign chairman Charles Manatt.

BUMPERS said the five governors meeting Monday did not discuss possible replacements. "We don't have a candidate at this point," Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis said.

Others present Monday were Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew. Utah Gov. Calvin Rampton, the sixth committee member, was in Hawaii and could not attend, Bumpers said.

Hanoi Negotiator Returning to Paris For Peace Talks

SAIGON (AP)—Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's chief negotiator at the Paris peace talks, left Hanoi Tuesday for Paris and another meeting with American negotiators, Radio Hanoi reported.

Tho, a member of the North Vietnamese politburo, is expected to meet late this week with U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. The two men negotiated a draft cease-fire agreement in secret meetings in Paris last month, but President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has blocked the signing.

THE HANOI broadcast said: "Recently the U.S. side proposed another private meeting between the United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRVN) to solve the signing of the agreement on ending the war and restoring peace in Vietnam."

"Once again, to show its good will and seriousness, the DRVN has agreed with the above proposal of the U.S. side. On Nov. 14, 1972, Comrade Le Duc Tho, special adviser at the Paris talks, left Hanoi for Paris to join Minister Xuan Thuy at a private meeting with the U.S. side."

Meanwhile, Kissinger and his top aide, Gen. Alexander M. Haig, conferred with President Nixon at Camp David, Md., Monday night, then flew by helicopter to Andrews Air Force Base about 12 miles from Washington, a presidential press aide said.

The White House did not disclose their destination until hours after their 4 p.m. CST departure from the mountaintop compound.

Presidential spokesmen refused to disclose where Kissinger and Haig were going after landing at Andrews. Helicopters returning the President or his aides from Camp David do not normally land there. The airport is frequently used as the departure point for presidential missions abroad.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The White House said Monday there may be a need for additional consultations with the North Vietnamese beyond the "one more" negotiating session outlined last month by presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told newsmen he could neither confirm nor deny reports that Kissinger and chief North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho would meet this week in Paris.

But if and when such a session takes place, Ziegler said, "there will be further consultations required" with South Vietnam and perhaps Hanoi.

THE PRESS spokesman denied this was a shift from the statement Kissinger made last month in which he predicted that "what remains to be done can be settled in one more negotiating session with the North Vietnamese negotiators, lasting, I would think, no more than three or four days."

Ziegler also told reporters that Gen. Alexander Haig, Kissinger's deputy, brought a letter to President Nixon from South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu when he returned from Saigon Monday. Ziegler confirmed that Haig went to Saigon last week carrying a Nixon letter addressed to Thieu.

Nixon met with Haig and Kissinger for an hour and a half at Camp David, Md., receiving the report of the Haig mission to Saigon, said deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren.

After the meeting, both Haig and Kissinger remained at Camp David although Warren said they were not expected to stay there overnight.

Austin To Receive Federal Payments

By CRAIG THOMASON

Austin's city budget will receive a bonus of $2,121,831 by the year's end.

The bonus is from the federal revenue sharing plan and the money will be paid in two installments—half will be received by the city in early December with the balance paid early in January.

Randy Turner, administrative assistant to the city manager, said Monday that details of the revenue sharing plan—exactly when and how much money Austin will receive—are still being worked out in Washington.

"WHATEVER AMOUNT of money the federal revenue sharing program allots to Austin, it will be a bonus because the program was not written into the 1972 city budget," Turner said.

Federal guidelines specify that the money be used for public safety, public transportation and environmental protection.

Other areas the government wants the money used for include health, recreation, social services for the poor and aged, financial administration and libraries.

The money may be used for capital improvements, since Austin's City Charter allows such expenditure of federal revenue sharing money.

"Taking everything into consideration the money is relatively free of strings," Turner said.

One problem the city faces concerning the revenue sharing program is that the city owns and operates its own power plant.

A VARIABLE in the revenue sharing program is local tax effort. Since the city operates the electric plant, local tax base is lowered and the federal government recognizes that as little tax effort.

Some city officials believe it is unfair to cut Austin's allotment under the program because the city runs the electrical utilities rather than private enterprise.

"City Manager Dan Davidson does not have any definite proposals to place before the City Council concerning the revenue sharing money," said Joseph Liro, budget director.

THE AUSTIN City Council will make decisions on how and where the money will be used after Davidson makes his recommendations to the council.

"Our operational and maintenance needs are pretty well taken care of, which leads me to believe most of the money will be used for capital items, but the final decision rests with the City Council," Turner said.

'Papers' Duo Loses Plea For Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court ruled seven to two Monday that the Pentagon papers trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo could be resumed without the government disclosing its wiretap logs to the defendants.

The ruling, which drew dissents from Justices William O. Douglas and William J. Brennan Jr., was in the form of a routine order that turned aside Ellsberg's and Russo's petition for a hearing. The order contained no comment on the questions they had raised.

Douglas had ordered the trial suspended in July to allow Ellsberg and Russo to file an appeal that contended the defendants and their lawyers had a right to examine the wiretapping records to determine whether the bugging produced illegal evidence or leads for the prosecution.

Douglas said the court should have granted the defendants a hearing "to resolve what immunity the executive branch has in setting up schemes of pervasive surveillance of foreign nationals that is unrelated to espionage."

Trial Judge Matt Byrne of Los Angeles and the U.S. Circuit Court in San Francisco had ruled that the wiretapping was irrelevant to the prosecution.

Election Miscues Face Correction

By PAM CHURCHWELL

Representatives from Voter Instruments and Products (VIP) told Travis County commissioners Monday they might have made some mistakes and agreed to correct them before the next election.

The commissioners met to discuss the delay in totaling the Travis County election results Nov. 7.

VIP has a $157,000 contract with the county to provide voting equipment, educate county personnel in the use of equipment and to oversee two elections.

ONE OF the problems mentioned by the commissioners involved the programming of the machines to accept the punchcard ballots from the rough edge where the stub had been torn off. Commissioner Richard Moya said he felt VIP should have reprogrammed the machines before the election to accept the cards from the smooth edge.

Moya also said he felt VIP should replace broken styluses free of charge since they had recommended the styluses.

"VIP is checking into the reasons for the high amount of breakage and has agreed to replace them if they find that the problem was due to something wrong in the materials," Moya said.

"This election was not really unusual. There is always going to be a certain amount of error in a first election, especially when people are basically unfamiliar with the programming," Ernie Toombs, VIP election consultant, said.

An incident where three boxes were erased from the computer memory was caused by the jamming of a card in the computer, Toombs added.

"In the process of removing the card and restarting the computer, the boxes were somehow erased. The information was re-entered in the computer, but it slowed the process down," Toombs said.

Moya has asked County Atty. Ned Granger for an opinion on the legal alternatives available for dealing with VIP.

"Whatever the county attorney suggests, I'm sure we'll go along with it," Moya said.

"WE WILL be checking on VIP to make sure they have inspected the equipment and made the necessary adjustments to insure the next election will go as smoothly as it should," Moya added.

Although she was not completely satisfied with the election, County Clerk Doris Shropshire said, "I think punchcard voting is just great. Even with the problems we had, I feel the results were in as early, if not earlier, than if done by hand."

Budget Board OKs Pay Raise, Parking Lot

By DAN DABNEY
Texan Staff Writer

A parking lot to be built at 11th Street and Congress Avenue and an over-all 6.8 percent pay raise for state employees over the next biennium were two major items approved by the Legislative Budget Board (LBB) Monday.

"The Legislative Budget Board staff recommended that the highway department be repaid $1.5 million out of general revenue money for the property at 11th and Congress streets," Rep. Don Cavness of Austin, a member of the LBB, said. "There was first a motion to transfer it (the property) to the Parks and Wildlife Commission, but they finally voted to repay the $1.5 million out of the State Building Fund and transfer the property to the State Building Commission."

The site would be utilized for a parking garage and a small park. The motion passed by a "unanimous voice vote," Cavness said, but there will be "no final action until December" when the last LBB meeting will be held.

The LBB, composed of Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes, House Speaker Rayford Price and eight representatives and senators appointed by them, also recommended $91.9 million in state employee pay raises.

Jim Stewart, director of the Texas Public Employees Association, called the pay raise "woefully short." The TPEA wanted a 13.6 percent across-the-board raise effective Sept. 1, 1973, with another 6.8 percent raise a year later.

Including additional "anniversary raises," merit increases and longevity boosts, the association's package would cost $114.3 million from general revenue, plus an additional $178.7 million from other funds.

Cost of raises recommended by the LBB would be $36.5 million from the general revenue fund, and another $35.4 million from other funds.

"We intend to take our story to the Legislature and to the people," Stewart said. "Our position is that in comparing Texas state salaries with other states, we find ourselves in 38th position. That's not anything for Texas to be proud of."

In addition to the 3.4 percent across-the-board increases, the LBB also approved for certain employees merit raises of up to 3.4 percent in the fiscal year starting Sept. 1, 1974. The average merit raise for employees—including those who will not get merit increases—would amount to 1.7 percent a year.

The pay raises will be included in the state budget the board will recommend to the Legislature, which convenes Jan. 9. The pay recommendations could be changed before the LBB makes its final budget decision.

While recommending merit increases for rank and file employees, the LBB voted to eliminate 1.7 percent merit raises for upper echelon employees, including the governor.

Before taking a vote on the pay raise, the board discussed the financial status of judges and state college teachers.

"Most judges are making more than they are worth," Rep. Richard Slack of Pecos said.

"They are getting supplements from county taxes and work three days a week. And most practice a little law on the side, in the country," Sen. Bill Moore of Bryan said.

Barnes said it was "important to remember that higher education didn't get as good of a pay raise last time as the other employees. They are three years behind."

"You and I know they are not hurting. They are like those judges," Rep. Jim Slider of Naples said.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz of Galveston said he thought state employees would benefit from having payday every two weeks instead of once a month.

"This would be a very legitimate pay raise for people who have to borrow money in the middle of the month to make it to the end of the month," Schwartz said.

Keel said it would cost the state about $100,000 in added clerical costs to pay employees twice a month.

Language Rule May Change

Committee To Recommend Lowering Requirement

By DAVID PETERSON

A recommendation to lower the number of hours of foreign language required for students in the College of Arts and Sciences will soon be proposed to Provost Stanley Ross.

The recommendation will be made by a faculty-student committee appointed by Ross to investigate the language requirement, which has been criticized by many people as irrelevant.

Dr. Paul English, committee chairman, said Monday the proposals will essentially "reaffirm the importance of foreign language in the liberal arts education by increasing flexibility to meet the needs of the student."

THE PROPOSAL would reduce the number of semesters required from five to four, with language proficiency courses reduced to three semesters.

Flexibility is to be increased by allowing for a number of options for the fourth semester, including culture and civilization studies in the studied language or in English pertaining to the area where the studied language is spoken. Another option would be to take two semesters of proficiency courses in another language after the three semesters of the first language.

In addition to the language requirement, the committee also will recommend making general studies into a program with fewer requirements and more flexibility than it has now and creating bachelor of science degrees in specific fields such as mathematics, which are now under the BA program.

Other faculty-student committees are currently studying the problems of student counseling and the library's funding and its service to students.

ENGLISH SAID the administration is working the hardest it ever has to solve academic problems, but that few students have been helpful.

Jean Setzer, a student member of the committee said, "Students are, for the most part, unconcerned with University affairs that affect them—the kind of issues that are discussable and changeable. This is probably because they feel that they are not powerful enough to do anything."

English cited Student Government and The Daily Texan as major offenders. He said that Student Government should have more interest in the needs of its constituency. Citing disinterest on the part of The Texan, he said, "I don't know why The Texan is concerning itself with bras instead of problems that affect 20,000 students like the language requirement."

Whitman Estate Due To Be Sold

Final disposition of the estate of Charles Whitman, who fatally shot 16 people from the University Tower six years ago, will be completed soon, attorney Donald F. Nobles said Monday.

Nobles, administrator of the estate, said County Judge J. H. Watson approved Monday an application to sell the remainder of the estate.

The attorney said he had a $1,500 offer from Bobby M. Burns of Wichita Falls to purchase the remaining items of the Whitman estate. Burns made the top offer several months ago after Nobles had advertised seven guns that belonged to Whitman.

Burns will acquire items 4 through 69, which include seven guns and personal papers.

Victims and survivors in the Whitman case last December received and divided $32,000 which came from the partial sale of the estate.

The $1,500 received from the final sale also will be divided among the group, Nobles said.

SPEED READING COURSE SET TO BEGIN AT U.T.

National Speed Reading Schools announces the formation of speed reading classes to be held this fall at U.T.

The skills taught in this course will enable a person to read any average length book in less than an hour and understand it better. In addition to rapid reading the course also emphasizes improved study techniques, better test taking skills, and increased concentration and retention abilities.

Classes are limited to 12 students. Graduates of the course are guaranteed a reading speed over 1,000 words per minute with a definite increase in comprehension.

For those who would like more information, without obligation to enroll, a series of free one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled.

Presently, Robert Hilburn, The Texan editorial manager, has the authority to withhold publication of any copy, based on Section 17 of the Declaration of Trust, the working agreement between TSP and the University Board of Regents.

Last Friday the Handbook Revision Committee of the TSP Board voted four to three to seek the repeal of Section 17.

"It now goes to the board with eight other changes in the Declaration of Trust for the new handbook," Cliff Avery, managing editor of The Texan, said. The changes in the agreement must be made before certain handbook changes are possible.

An announcement of persons appointed to The Texan Format Committee will be made. The Format Committee will study and redesign the Texan's format in preparation for moving the publication into the new Communications complex.

The board also will consider requirements for appointing a replacement editor for Pearl Magazine, monthly supplement to The Texan.

In Cuban Hijacking

FBI Shooting Attempt Criticized

By The Associated Press

The hijackers who forced 31 persons aboard a Southern Airways jetliner on a violent journey over 3,800 miles were pictured by their captives Monday as squabbling, vicious men who passed out ransom money while threatening the lives of everyone on the plane.

There was criticism, meanwhile, of an attempt by FBI marksmen to halt the return of the DC9 to Cuba by shooting out four of its six tires as it prepared to leave Orlando, Fla. The plane's wounded co-pilot said the shooting "really provoked" the hijackers, who told him he would be killed as an example.

"IT DROVE them into a frenzy," passenger Alex Halberstad said. "They were raving maniacs. Before that, they were docile maniacs."

The 28-hour nightmare ended early Sunday when the aircraft's bone-weary pilot brought the twin-engine jet, its bare wheels kicking up sparks, down on a foam-covered runway in Havana. The passengers and crew, four of them injured, were flown out of Cuba Sunday by a second Southern DC9.

The three air pirates were taken into custody by Cuban officials who also confiscated the ransom money, passengers said. The amount of the money paid the hijackers—they had demanded a record $10 million—has not been disclosed, but one passenger said: "The whole back seat was full of money."

THE FBI said air piracy charges were expected to be filed against the trio—identified as a prison escaper and two men wanted in Detroit on rape charges—in Birmingham, Ala. Whether Cuba would return the money was not immediately known.

Orlando was the last of eight cities where the airliner was forced to land after it was commandeered Friday night over Alabama. It was there that 20 FBI sharpshooters blew out the plane's tires after it had picked up more fuel.

The FBI and Southern have declined to comment on the decision to fire at the plane.

"I STILL doubt the decision to shoot at the tires while the plane was fully loaded with fuel and the fuel truck was so close by," Orlando Police Chief Robert Chewning said.

Michael Goff, the mechanic who refueled the waiting jet, said the fusillade of shots jeopardized the lives of "all those on the airplane."

"They shot while I was still near the airplane," he said. "If they had hit the fuel truck, that would have been it—the airplane and everyone else."

AFTER THE TIRES were shot out, Goff said, the hijackers ordered pilot Bill Haas to take off and "he hit full power . . . Agents kept shooting, trying to disable the engines. There was rubber in those engines and they overheated tremendously. They could have crashed."

Co-pilot Billy Johnson, hospitalized in a Memphis hospital, said the hijackers responded to the shooting by using him as a shield to keep the pilot from being shot, then blasted him to show their other captives "they meant business."

PILOT HAAS was quoted by a ham radio operator monitoring broadcasts between the plane and control tower as saying, "Why did they shoot my tires out? Whoever got funny down there sure messed me up."

The hijack suspects were identified as Lewis K. Moore, 27; Melvin Cale, 21, Moore's half-brother, and Henry D. Jackson, 25. Police said Moore and Jackson had been freed on $500 bond last month in Detroit after being charged with forcible rape. Cale escaped from a minimum security prison in Tennessee, where officials said he had compiled a good record.

Blacks Arrested for Taking Dallas City Council Hall

DALLAS (AP)—Thirteen members of an organization calling itself the Black and Poor People's Council occupied the Dallas City Council chamber Monday and were promptly arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

The group, led by George Holland, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's Operation Breadbasket in Dallas, occupied the chairs normally reserved for the city councilmen, the mayor, the city manager and the city manager's secretary.

Holland was in the process of reading a list of 10 demands when the group was arrested by a force of 20 city policemen who marched into the chamber.

The arrests came after the group twice was asked to leave, first by the mayor pro-tem and then by an assistant police chief. Both times the group refused.

They were led quietly from the room. One woman refused to walk out, so two policemen carried her out.

On the list of demands was a call for the resignations of Mayor Wes Wise, Police Chief Frank Dyson, and City Atty. Alex Beckley.

Other demands included:

- A black assistant police chief.
- Twenty-four percent of the city jobs, since 24 percent of the city is black.
- Immediate arrest of three officers recently cleared by a grand jury in connection with the unrelated shooting deaths of three blacks. The shootings occurred while police were attempting to make arrests.

Of the 13 who were booked, one woman, who was accompanied by two small children, was released.

Family Awaits Investigation

McCrays Possibly Linked to 22 Unsolved Murders

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—The five members of the McCrary family were in separate prisons and jails in three different states Monday awaiting the next step in an investigation of a bloody murder trail.

Only the mother, Carolyn McCrary, remained in custody at Santa Barbara, where the family first came to legal grief from charges stemming from a holdup-shooting case.

Since last week, when a gathering of law officers from several states came to Santa Barbara to question the family on at least 11 murder cases, Danny McCrary has gone to custody in Dallas, and Ginger McCrary Taylor has gone to Lakewood, Colo.

The two others, family head Sherman McCrary, 47, and Ginger's husband, Carl Raymond Taylor, 38, are in Northern California prisons under sentence in the Santa Barbara holdup-shooting. McCrary is in Folsom Prison and Taylor is in San Quentin.

Police say officials are attempting to develop the facts in what could be a chain of 22 unsolved murders in the West, including the slayings of three young waitresses in all-night doughnut shops.

Officials started to link up the cases after ballistics tests connected six Texas slayings to weapons used in the wounding of a Santa Barbara policeman during a supermarket holdup.

Mrs. Taylor, 22, who gave birth to a fourth child in jail two weeks ago, waived extradition to face a bad check charge at Lakewood, Colo., where one of the doughnut waitresses had been kidnapped and fatally shot.

She is expected to testify sometime this week before a Colorado grand jury on the murder.

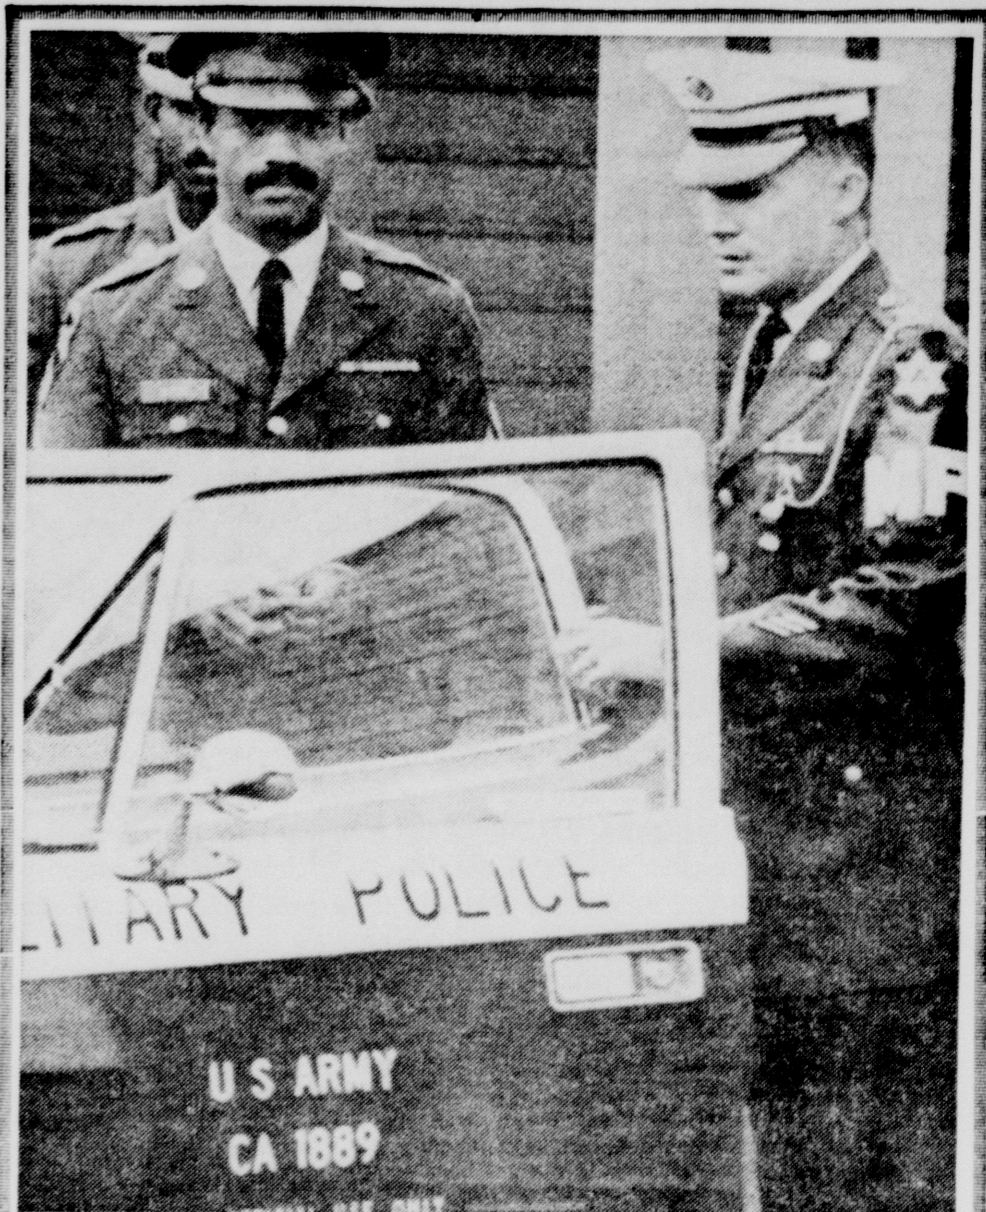

Her brother returned to face an undisclosed parole violation in Dallas. But he also is held for investigation of murder and robbery in the slayings of a couple from Mesquite, Tex., a year ago.

The brother and sister and their mother had been in custody in Santa Barbara County Jail on nine-month sentences for harboring fugitives—the two other imprisoned members of their family.

The senior McCrary and Taylor are expected eventually to be extradited for trial in Nevada or Utah. A federal warrant charging kidnap already is on file at Salt Lake City in the abduction of doughnut shop waitress Sheri Lee Martin, 17.

But authorities believe Miss Martin actually died in Nevada, after being kidnapped, so officials are considering filing murder charges in that state rather than Utah.

Their status in the other murder cases remains undisclosed, but none of the family to date has been charged in any of the slayings.

Pvt. Billy Dean Smith, (c), accused of murdering two officers in a "fragging" incident in Vietnam, arrives for his trial in Ft. Ord, Calif. The jury began deliberating the case Monday.

Jury Begins Deliberation In Army 'Fragging' Trial

FT. ORD, Calif. (AP)—A military jury deliberated for three hours Monday but failed to reach a verdict in the court-martial of Pvt. Billy Dean Smith, who is accused of murder in a 1971 Vietnam "fragging" incident that killed two young Army officers.

The court recessed until 9 a.m. Tuesday, when the jury is expected to resume its deliberations.

Earlier, Col. Rawls Frazier, the presiding judge, gave the jurors, all of them Vietnam veterans, legal instructions to help them reach a decision in the first fragging trial to be conducted in the United States.

He also told the jury it must find Smith innocent of killing the officers if it believed his testimony that he was smoking marijuana elsewhere when they died.

When the general court-martial began Sept. 6, Frazier ruled that Smith could not receive the death penalty. But a guilty verdict of premeditated murder would mean a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment for Smith, whose lawyers say was reluctantly drafted into the Army in 1970.

Unlike civilian courts, five guilty votes among the panel of seven career officers would convict Smith. A vote for acquittal by three of the officers on all counts would set him free.

SMITH, 24, a former bus driver and machinist from the Watts district of Los Angeles, pleaded innocent to charges he used a fragmentation grenade to kill 1st Lt. Thomas Dellwo of Choteau, Mont., and 2nd Lt. Richard Harlan of Dallas, on March 16, 1971, at Bien Hoa Army Base near Saigon. A third officer, Peter B. Higgins, 25, of Harrison, N.J., survived.

The prosecution contended that Smith did not mean to kill the two lieutenants, but that instead his targets were his commanding officer, Capt. Randall L. Rigby of Ft. Sill, Okla., and 1st Sgt. Billie Willis of Big Stony Gap, Va. The Army said Smith mistakenly thought they were sleeping in the quarters and charged him with attempting to murder them.

DURING THE trial, Smith took the stand to testify that he was smoking marijuana with two buddies in another section of the base when the grenade exploded. One of the friends, Henry S. McClay, confirmed Smith's story, but McClay's company commander testified he could not be believed.

While the judge addressed the military jury, Smith sat quietly, showing no visible emotion. At the trial's outset Sept. 6, Frazier ruled that Smith could be sentenced to life imprisonment but not given the death sentence if found guilty.

Smith's court-martial is the first of its kind to be held in this country.

79 Countries Ban Ocean Dumping

LONDON (AP)—An international convention was signed by delegates of 79 countries Monday banning the ocean dumping of oil, mercury and cadmium compounds as well as wastes with high radioactivity levels.

The convention also prohibits the dumping of all compounds containing arsenic, copper, fluorides, pesticides, lead and zinc into the oceans by ships or aircraft.

The convention is to come into force next year after ratification by the signatory countries.

Stock Market Hits All-Time Closing High

NEW YORK (AP)—Despite a setback from adverse Vietnam news, the stock market fought its way back up Monday, and the Dow Jones industrial average hit an all-time closing high of 997.07.

The Dow average of 30 industrial stocks was up 1.81 for the day and eclipsed by that margin the previous record of 995.26, set Friday.

The Dow's intraday high, computed after the end of the session by using the individual highs of each of the 30 component stocks, was logged at 1004.89.

A&M Studying Texas Superport Plan

COLLEGE STATION (AP)—Texas A&M University researchers, who have been conducting studies on a Texas superport, said Monday that such a deepwater terminal would create 336,770 new jobs in 10 years and add $119.4 billion in benefits to the state's economy.

The figures were released in a report on a study jointly conducted by the nonprofit Texas Superport Study Corp. and Texas A&M's industrial economics research division.

Fate of Controversial Shuttle Buses Up in Air

By JAMIE CARTER
Texan Staff Writer

As the University's shuttle bus contract with Transportation Enterprises, Inc. (TEI) draws closer to its August expiration date, the fate of bus service on campus remains a matter of conjecture.

The orange and white TEI buses first made their appearance in 1969 as an experiment—most people thought no one would ride them.

Since that time, the number of buses has risen from 15 to 42 and the ridership is an estimated 30,000 daily. Eight routes run from 7 a.m. to midnight.

MAINTENANCE problems have plagued the buses increasingly, as more and more people crowd onto the school-bus type vehicles which are not built for the continuous, rough wear they receive.

A strike by drivers last spring brought attention to the buses as service was curtailed for eight weeks. Drivers asked for better wages, higher safety standards and recognition of their chapter of the Amalgamated Transit Union.

The strike ended in April with a compromise wage increase, a promise for greater safety concern and an agreement with the transit union.

Now the future of the always-controversial buses is in question, with several alternatives available:

- Competitive bidding for a new contract which would satisfy University specifications. Bids could come from TEI, other transit companies or the city.

- A University takeover of shuttle service, which would require purchase of new buses, the hiring of drivers and construction of maintenance facilities.

Regent Frank C. Erwin has indicated the University would be forced to go into the shuttle bus business "if bidding for the contract is not competitive."

- Use of federal funding to help finance University operation of the shuttle system.

Tom Rioux, chairman of the University Shuttle Bus Committee, has said that grants for two-thirds the cost of buying buses and building a maintenance facility might be made available if it could be shown that University and city services would not overlap or be competitive.

1 Coordination of the shuttle system with the city beginning in January, with a fully-integrated system in operation when TEI's contract expires.

These proposals for combination, detailed in City Traffic and Transportation Director Joe Ternus' transit action program for the next five years, would allow anyone to ride shuttle buses free until TEI's contract expires. Students would pay a 15-cent fare, under the coordination plan, to ride a city bus.

Using an integrated system, students would continue to prepay a shuttle service fee and would be allowed to ride any bus by showing identification. Other city residents would pay the proposed regular 30-cent fare to ride all buses.

THE ENTIRE FLEET would be air-conditioned, coach-type buses, although those in the University area might be painted the familiar orange and white, Ternus said.

The Shuttle Bus Committee would continue making recommendations on routes, stops and other matters relating to University bus service.

Two-thirds of the initial costs of such a bus system could be paid by federal grants, which are being used to help finance the city's 40 new municipally-owned buses. They will begin operation in January.

- Addition of a small surcharge to water and electricity bills, which would be used to finance free bus service to all Austin residents, including students.

While Ternus and James Colvin, University vice-president for business affairs, have said they favor this system, Ternus has suggested that the public is not yet ready to accept it.

Meanwhile, TEI officials have grown defensive about what they consider to be biased, inaccurate reporting in The Daily Texan.

"OUR BIGGEST problem is The Texan," charged Bill Lawrie, TEI's traffic manager. "We're doing our damndest to fulfill our end of the bargain. We feel a moral as well as financial responsibility to the University."

Lawrie, who said he favors "anything that gets cars off the streets," explained that overcrowding "is tearing the hell out of our buses."

He pointed out that overloading uses more engine power and strains the clutch, transmission, brakes and suspension systems of the buses. "It's one of the major causes of our maintenance problems," he said.

Extra mechanics have been hired to keep the buses operating, and preventive checks are done on each bus at least monthly. "The buses are older now, and need more maintenance," Lawrie said.

THE BUSES presently in use would be retired if TEI should get a new contract with the University, he indicated.

Lawrie cited that the company's 140 drivers are "a good group, interested in their jobs." He said an eight-hour defensive driving course is required for novice drivers and is voluntary for others.

"We're really gratified and encouraged by the reaction to the program," he said.

Prospective drivers complete an application, after which their driving and accident records are checked and previous employers are questioned.

SHUTTLE BUS Committee members and transit union spokesmen agree that reports of bus safety hazards are exaggerated. At a recent committee meeting, member Bill Brock made generally favorable comments on bus conditions based on vehicle inspections.

Colvin, who supervises the committee, agreed that "a great majority of students say the buses are a great success."

Although he said he is not yet familiar enough with Ternus' proposals to decide his opinion of the coordination and integration plans, Colvin said he is "reasonably confident that with proper discussion and understanding we will be able to arrive at a viable solution."

Orange and White TEI Fleet May Become Extinct to campus.

Conversely, he said, it would give the nonstudent residents of the predominantly student-populated Riverside Drive area bus service which is not economically feasible for the city to provide presently.

There have been complaints that night school students, who do not pay a student services fee, have been riding the buses extensively.

REPORTS OF such unauthorized ridership led to a blitz of ID checking early this semester.

The checks are ostensibly required under TEI's contract, but are seldom implemented. TEI would pay higher insurance rates if its status was changed from specialized to common carrier.

University officials and Shuttle Bus Committee members are hesitant to endorse or condemn Ternus' transit proposals until they have more time to study the complex documents.

A public hearing is scheduled Thursday, and copies of the two-volume transit study, released Nov. 1, have been placed in University and city libraries.

ALL OFFICIALS involved seem to agree that they want students to receive the best service possible at the lowest cost. Most favor prepaid bus service and want the University to continue having a sizable measure of control over its transit service.

Ternus called charges that city bus service to the University would increase student fees "ridiculous."

"Operation costs would remain the same as for any contract which the University could negotiate," he said.

"IT'S SO IMPORTANT that we get the systems working together before fees get out of sight. I think we can keep the total cost down by a joint system."

Ternus met Friday with Shuttle Bus Committee members to discuss his plans with them, and said he hopes to have further meetings soon with University officials.

"Students don't want to lose their identity," he said. "And with our proposals, the same identity will still be there. All we want to do is open up the system."

Pledge your dollars

The Texan again urges University students and organizations to become involved in the University Economic Community being officially launched this week by Student Government. Participating in the project requires only a pledge to combine the joint financial resources of the student community into a lump sum to be deposited in a local bank in exchange for favorable changes in hot check charges, underwritten student loan programs and better service for University students.

The concept is exciting and requires a bare minimum of effort on an individual's or an organization's part. And no cost whatsoever. The depositor retains complete control over his own funds and receives the benefits of what concessions the bank makes in exchange for the pledged funds.

As the University's Bureau of Business Research estimated recently, students spend approximately $90 million annually in Austin. A portion of this sum channeled through a local bank in exchange for response to genuine student financial needs would be profitable for both the bank and the students. There's something here for everyone.

Student Government is undertaking an intensive drive within the community to gather financial resources for this project. Appeals are being made not only to individual students, but also to the many student organizations which abound on campus.

We urge every student and organization to sign the pledge cards being distributed, though they are not legally binding, and return them to UEC's booth on the Main Mall or the Student Government office in Union Building 321.

Mandatory executions

In the last session of the Texas Legislature, two state legislators made commendable moves to kill legislation which would have reinstituted the death penalty in Texas. Had not State Rep. Tom Moore of Waco and State Sen. Joe Bernal of San Antonio raised points of order in a House committee and on the Senate floor, the capital punishment bills could have well passed.

The bills were written to circumvent the Supreme Court's ruling last summer that voided the existing statute. The decision contained a different opinion from each of the justices and left open the possibility that a constitutional statute could be written.

The Nov. 20 issue of Time magazine reports that other states may try to write a constitutional death penalty law. Nineteen state attorneys general are drafting proposals ranging from an amendment to the U.S. Constitution to a model law with a mandatory death sentence for certain crimes (which would be similar to the defeated Texas proposal). Further, the magazine states that at least 10 state legislatures will consider such statutes at their next sessions.

Fortunately, the Legal Defense Fund of the NAACP claims that attempts to enact capital punishment laws will not meet with success. Mandatory executions would be administered arbitrarily, and thus would be found unconstitutional. No one now on Death Row would face execution, since no punishment law can be made retroactive. As the fund's attorney, Jack Himmelstein, said, "People will realize that trying to find the loopholes is an enormous waste of time, energy and funds."

We hope that the next Texas Legislature will take that advice.

Financial disclosure

The Executive Club of the Republican Party of New Jersey is mounting a campaign which the General Accounting Office says may open a major loophole in the new federal campaign expense and contributions disclosure law. This is only the latest in a series of challenges to the legislation which aims to shed light on the financial aspects of politics.

The New Jersey Republican challenge maintains that the club is exempt from reporting the sources of $100,000 channeled to 34 committees working for President Nixon's re-election because the funds came from "dues." Nevertheless, the GAO claims that contingency is covered by the legislation, and the donors must be revealed.

These repeated challenges to the principle of full financial disclosure, a prerequisite for reforming the political process, have come mainly from Republican groups this year, though there has been formal action in Congress to water down the existing law. The never-ending opposition to public light on the public's business is deplorable, but it is best to gird for this battle now, for the Texas Legislature will be confronted with the question by Common Cause, the citizens' lobby and several reform legislators during the upcoming regular session. Quite likely, it will be a long haul.

Nixon's mandate

By Tom Wicker

(c) 1972 New York Times News Service

NEW YORK—During the 1964 presidential campaign, Richard M. Nixon, then a New York lawyer, had lunch with some of the editors and executives of The New York Times. He was asked why he was working so hard for the Republican nominee, Barry Goldwater, when it was clear that Goldwater would not be able to defeat President Johnson.

"Because I got to know Lyndon Johnson well when he was majority leader and I presided over the Senate as Vice-President," Nixon answered. "He's a sound leader when he's closely challenged, but I worry about his reaction if he wins a landslide. I'd like to see his margin held down."

Considering that in the wake of his landslide Johnson launched the air war against North Vietnam, then followed up by sending a half-million troops, this was a prescient remark. Now that Nixon has won his own landslide, perhaps even larger than Johnson's, it must be hoped that he will have as much insight about the possibilities, good and bad, of his own reaction.

THOSE OF US who have most seriously questioned Nixon in his first term and in his re-election campaign are all but compelled by the size of his victory to assume the best from him now. Nearly two-thirds of the Americans who voted clearly thought him the best of the available choices, and that is not a fact to be lightly explained away by critics or to be lightly demeaned by the man so honored. On the morrow of such an impressive personal triumph, only the most vindictive opponent would refuse to believe that Richard Nixon might prove worthy of the great opportunity that triumph brings.

Besides, the fate of Lyndon Johnson is not the only practical reminder that a landslide does not necessarily insure a free presidential hand. Nixon is a good enough student of history, for one thing, to know that it was after the Roosevelt landslide of 1936 that an overconfident F.D.R. committed the capital error of his political career—the Supreme Court packing scheme, which might have led to his defeat or retirement in 1940, had it not been for the opening of World War II.

NIXON, MOREOVER, may well be the first president upon whom the full effect of the two-term limitation will fall. Since its adoption, only Dwight Eisenhower has served two full terms and Eisenhower's personal popularity and stature partially insulated him from the effects of "lame duck" status, as from so many other political developments. In comparison, Nixon has a more hostile and partisan relationship with Congress and, even after Nov. 7, probably is not so well loved by the people; whether he will easily surmount being a lame duck president remains to be seen.

As in the case of the Eisenhower landslide of 1956, Nixon failed to bring in a Republican Congress on his coattails; in fact, the Democrats gained a couple of Senate seats. So there will be pressure on the President from the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue—not necessarily stalemating pressure, but enough so that he will have to give some consideration, for instance, to opposing views when he sends up important nominations for Senate confirmation.

As for the opposition, despite the ineffectiveness of Sen. McGovern's campaign and the magnitude of his defeat, history will yet say of him that he raised some of the right issues. In the momentary historical circumstances of the campaign, he was neither personally persuasive nor politically timely; but there will be other elections and other candidates who will talk, as he did, of a reduction in American reliance on military power, of a more equitable tax system, of a more humane and open society, even of the redistributing of income and wealth (a subject on which he had the right principle but the wrong figures). These are not issues that will go away—any more than did the issue of nuclear arms limitation after Adlai Stevenson raised it ahead of its time in 1956, or the issue of Vietnam after Gene McCarthy took it to the people in 1968.

NIXON IS ENTITLED, of course, to interpret his enormous victory as an explicit endorsement of every position he has taken; but he is probably too experienced in the ways of electioneering to believe that. On great questions such as China and arms limitation he has shown the capacity to change and grow, and to carry enough of his supporters with him; and the political security he should derive from his landslide might well encourage him to lead his followers more boldly, to base his actions more broadly on the public interest than he has felt himself able to do in the past.

In any case, the first item on Nixon's post-election agenda should be to make good Dr. Kissinger's pre-election promise that "peace is at hand" in Vietnam; because if that cannot be done, nothing that follows will redeem the opportunity the American people have given Richard Nixon.

Keeping political promises

By Russell Baker

(c) 1972 New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON—Every election produces a large number of public officials who interpret victory as a mandate to break the promises they made while campaigning. To find out more about the little-known subject of campaign promise-breaking, we have sent a questionnaire to everyone who was elected Tuesday night, and the results are now in.

Eighty-seven percent of those queried report that they fully intend to break at least 30 campaign promises. Respondents vary widely, however, in their opinion about when the first promise-breaking may be done without violating the canons of good taste.

More than 55 percent said it would be tasteless to break a campaign promise until they had been in office at least 90 days. Another 20 percent favored a period of six months. Twenty-five percent were undecided.

OUR QUESTIONNAIRE also sought to determine the 10 promises politicians most regretted making. It was felt that this would be a delicate method of getting respondents to tell us which promises they were most likely to break first. Here is the politicians' checklist of the 10 pledges they most wish they hadn't made and which, in fact, they will probably unmake within the next year:

1. Will not put relatives on public payroll.
2. Will bring the boys home by Christmas.
3. Will not give new paving contract to brother-in-law.
4. Will not raise taxes.
5. Will appoint more honest men.
6. Will not take money from special interests and crooks.
7. WILL TELL VOTERS the truth about what is really going in government.
8. Will listen to young people.
9. Will cut spending.
10. Will not take bribes.

One question which has puzzled political scientists for generations is, why do politicians break campaign promises? Our questionnaire asked them to explain, and some of the individual explanations were heartbreaking.

"I can't help myself," said Alderman Botsford Sump, of Chicago. Seven congressmen said, "I am a hopeless liar," or something very similar, and more than 50 respondents said that the voters expected them to break their campaign promises and would feel betrayed if they kept them.

SEN. MERLE SURVINE of the Sunken State of Massagravy said that, as a man of cultivated character, he found it degrading to have to break his campaign promises decade after decade, but that his constituents demanded it.

his acquaintances or relatives. Neither were they Mr. Pound's. And all those who stood by and watched, or fanned the fires of the incinerators with rhetoric, apathy or blatant physical effort can all come out now. Tolerance is at a peak, and horrible crimes committed 30 and 40 years ago are forgotten by people like Mr. Kilpatrick.

Thanks

To the editor:

I want to publicly thank Bob McMinn and Transportation Enterprises, Inc., for their donation of a bus to take students to the polls in Precinct 430 last Tuesday.

Their nonpartisan effort to increase student participation helped create a 70 percent voter turnout for the general election in Precinct 430.

This was one of the highest precinct turnouts in the city. Moreover, greater numbers of students voted in this student-dominated precinct than ever before on Nov. 7.

To further increase student participation in this precinct and ease the balloting process itself, I'd appreciate any suggestions from residents of Precinct 430 (who vote at Robert E. Lee Elementary School). Mail ideas to 3111 Harris Park, Austin, 78705.

Ballet

To the editor:

I attended Sunday night's performance of Austin Ballet Theatre at Armadillo World Headquarters.

I would like to say I think the Armadillo is wrong in omitting all of the floor seating. At the first performance of the company there was half floor seating, and half of the audience was sitting in chairs. But to my surprise, when I arrived last Sunday, the seating area was filled with chairs and there was no carpet space in front of the stage...no choice! Does the management of Armadillo really think that everyone wants to sit in those tortuous metal folding chairs!?

Westwood should resign

To the editor:

I wholeheartedly concur in the suggestion by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and others that Democratic National Chairman Jean Westwood resign from her post.

McGovern and McGovernism was devastatingly rejected at the polls by the American people, and it would be foolish and ill-advised to retain the leadership of those who led the party to such an inglorious defeat.

Although I did vote for McGovern-Shriver, and although McGovern is a decent and honorable man, it is quite evident that the country will not accept the brand of "fringe politics" which he offered the Democratic Party and the American people. Accordingly, an immediate shedding of the ideological straitjacket which has confined the party since the July convention in Miami is clearly in order.

The Democratic Party can reject the politics of the "vital center" only at great risk and detriment. We cannot afford the politics of "crusading, self-righteous tangents" any more for the sake of satisfying someone's conception of ideological and moral "purity." Our most pressing priority is to bring back to the party the millions of Democrats who were alienated by McGovern. I have every confidence that we Democrats can put the pieces of our party together in time for a 1976 candidate to appeal to the black and the unblack; the poor and the unpoor; the young and the unyoung.

Intolerance

To the editor:

In reply to Mr. Kilpatrick's article comparing Fascist supporter Ezra Pound with dissident Jane Fonda, I would like to point out that although Ms. Fonda does not particularly like the "establishment," she has never advocated the gassing of six million of its members.

And while Ezra Pound might have written aesthetically pleasing poetry, I must admit that I can never judge his poetry apart from his political views. Many might designate this as some sort of intolerance, but to those of us who know from relatives and friends what the Nazi concentration camps were like, it is a welcome intolerance and one which I hope will never cease.

Kilpatrick's rash comparison of Pound with Fonda leads one to wonder what other rash assertions Kilpatrick might make. After all, if Pound was so great, his ideas must have something to them. Maybe all his anti-Semitism was warranted...

Mr. Kilpatrick can afford to be tolerant. The people who were murdered were not

I'm glad the arts are drawing varied facets of Austin society to our beloved Armadillo...but heavens! don't run the original Armadillo off!!

Bad to worse

To the editor:

Everyone remembers the fatalistic prediction of future man becoming enslaved by machine. Well, that time has already arrived—at least here in Austin. Election results were fouled by a malfunction in a new "ultra-modern computer." And now it has been reported that University students will not receive credit in hours or addition to their grade point average because of some error in "our" computer's programming.

Upon first hearing of this, I called the physical instruction department to secure verification of this seemingly impossible occurrence, since I was told repeatedly at the beginning of the semester that credit with a grade would be given. The department confirmed the rumor and immediately launched upon some bizarre explanation using computer jargon that no layman comprehends.

The fact is that I don't give a damn what their explanation is. I took PI 18400004 with the knowledge that I would receive credit and grade and now the University reneges on its word. If it is a greater pain to inconvenience a machine than it is to inconvenience and penalize several thousand students, this place is going from bad to worse.

UT Must 'Pay Price' for Years of Racism

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a five-part series on the racist image that the University has among many blacks, and what Coach Darrell Royal is doing about it.)

By The Associated Press

Of all the great black football players to come out of Texas high schools, none have gone to the University.

Coach Darrell Royal knows he has a problem. He admits the athletic program at Texas has a racist image among many blacks. He says it is a false image.

There are six black football players at Texas now, including sophomore Roosevelt Leaks, who has been sensational in his first year and may turn out to be a great one.

Some of those blacks say Royal is a racist—a racist who is trying to change. Royal rejects the label but says he is not surprised they put it on him.

As recently as 10 years ago, Southwest Conference schools ignored blacks, and players like Bubba Smith left Texas to go to places like Michigan State.

When the conference decided to recruit blacks, players like Jerry LeVias went to schools like Southern Methodist—not Texas.

BUT YOU can't win without blacks anymore. Everybody recruits them now.

But Royal scored zero in his last recruiting effort. Texas coaches say six great black running backs graduated from Texas high schools last year. And Texas is a running team. But all six went elsewhere. In fact, there is not one black on the entire freshman team.

In an effort to rid Texas of its racist image and help his recruiting, Royal agreed to an interview of the six blacks on his varsity.

He told them he didn't know what questions would be asked, but he sent them to the interview with instructions to give honest answers. They did.

BESIDES LEAKS, a physical education major from Brenham, the others were: senior tight end Julius Whittier, a philosophy major from San Antonio and a sort of unofficial leader of the Texas blacks; senior halfback Donald Ealey and senior defensive end Howard Shaw, both physical education majors from Austin; junior halfback Lonnie Bennett, an advertising major from Bonham; and sophomore linebacker Fred Perry, an education major from Corpus Christi.

Leaks, Whittier, Ealey and Shaw said they came to Texas because it was close to home. Bennett said he wanted to get a good education and thought about going to Rice, "but, like, I don't like to play on a losing team."

All said they came despite what they had heard about Texas from the people back home—not from coaches and players at other schools, who said nothing about racism but simply made the same pitch that is given to white players: Texas has so many good players it is hard to break into the starting lineup.

"The area I'm from, you know, most of the black people thought that, well, they would ask me why I would come to a school like this, a racist school," Bennett said.

"...People around my town, they hated that I came to Texas, you know?" Leaks said. "They felt like I wouldn't get a fair break, or something like that."

The Longhorns and the Black Athlete

THE DAILY TEXAN

sports

Whittier explained that Texas is nearly 100 years old but no black came here until Heman Sweatt won a court fight—"against white people's cherished hopes"—to get into law school in 1950. Sweatt was the test case for the entire state.

"That's a lot of years, you know, tradition they have," Whittier said. It's going to "hurt them," and they will have to "pay the price" for that tradition in recruiting blacks for football, law school or anything else, he said.

In 1963, Texas officially broke the color barrier in the Southwest Conference by saying athletic scholarships could be offered to blacks. But Texas did not offer them for several years. SMU was the first conference school to give a scholarship to a black when it recruited Jerry LeVias in 1965.

What blacks remember about Texas is not 1963 but 1950 and Heman Sweatt.

IN THE INTERVIEW, Leaks was the first to say there was prejudice at Texas. The question was what do they tell prospects they are asked to escort around the campus. Halfway through his answer he said:

"I tell them about the coaches. I say, 'Yeah, you know they're gonna be prejudiced some, and some different ways, but to me, they're okay, you know?'"

He found prejudice on the coaching staff?

"Yes. It's here... What more can you expect?... There's gonna be prejudice wherever you go to school," he said.

But all the talk back home about not getting a chance slid right off Leaks. "...Well, I tell you what's in myself. I figure I can beat anybody out. I don't care where you play. I figure I can beat you out. That's what I feel about myself. That's the kind of athlete I am."

And he tells the same thing to Wilson Whitley, the black high school lineman in his home town of Brenham. "He says, 'You think I have a chance up there, you know, of playing?' I say, 'Hell yeah, you have a chance.'"

"YOU KNOW, this cat's good. He's got a good chance. I figure he's just as good as Sisemore (Texas' All-America offensive tackle Jerry Sisemore)."

"The only thing, he's black, you know? I think he's just about as good as Sisemore. He's big, and he's black. Because of that he thinks he won't get a chance to start."

"I say, 'Man, it doesn't matter.' I say, 'Only thing you have to do is come out there and prove yourself. I guarantee you'll start. I mean if the coaches like you or not, you're gonna be starting, because they're gonna be needing blacks. They are just gonna have to boil down to it.'"

Get a good cassette for a bad cassette.

Bring in your cassette that's gone wrong and a dollar and we'll give you a shiny new Maxell Low Noise C-60. (Suggested retail $2.25.)

Or bring in your cassette that's gone wrong and $1.50 and we'll give you a shiny new Maxell Ultra Dynamic C-60. (Suggested retail $3.70.)

We can make this offer because the way Maxell cassettes are designed and constructed they can't go wrong. They're made of heavy-duty precision-molded styrene; they have nylon rollers that run on stainless steel pins where most other cassettes have fixed plastic; and they aren't welded; they're sealed with precision screws.

As for the tape inside: In laboratory tests published in Stereo Review Maxell was shown to be unsurpassed in its overall quality and consistency. Which means you'll hear your woofers woom and your tweeters tweet better than they've ever woomed or tweeted before.

Bring in any brand, any length of play and as many cassettes as you like. And we guarantee you'll never be interested in an offer like this one again.

Come in and trade up to Maxell.

Phipps Flips, Browns Win

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Mike Phipps threw a 38-yard touchdown pass to Frank Pitts with 41 seconds left as the Cleveland Browns stunned the San Diego Chargers 21-17 Monday night in the National Football League.

The winning pass came just 20 seconds after Mike Garrett ran three yards for a San Diego touchdown, giving the Chargers a 17-14 lead.

But Phipps brought the Browns right back into the game with his three-play, 64-yard drive that resulted in Cleveland registering its fourth straight victory. The triumph kept the Browns' playoff hopes alive.

Cleveland, 6-3, now trails the Pittsburgh Steelers by a game in the American Football Conference Central Division. The Chargers dropped to 2-6-1 with their fifth straight loss.

Phipps, who did not complete a pass until the final minute of the first half, hit three straight in the winning drive.

He threw seven yards to Bo Scott at the Cleveland 43, then tossed a swing pass to reserve Ken Brown, who raced 19 yards to the Charger 38.

On the next play, Phipps dropped back and spotted the veteran Pitts five yards behind San Diego defensive back Ray Jones in the right corner of the end zone. Phipps fired the ball to Pitts and the Browns had their victory in the nationally televised game.

Earlier, Pitts had rallied the Cleveland offense with a 13-yard flanker reverse play in the first half. He then caught two key passes in a second half touchdown drive.

Five minutes later, the Chargers' cunning attack took over, and San Diego marched 61 yards for a touchdown.

The Browns had a 7-3 half-time margin after Phipps had sneaked one yard 15 seconds before the intermission gun.

The Chargers, who had an early 3-0 lead on Dennis Partee's 26-yard field goal, went ahead in the third quarter on an 86-yard march.

Any institution that draws more television and radio time than the Vietnam war, that draws an average of 60,000 people to its weekly performances, that is the subject of more souvenir items than practically any institution in Texas, well, that institution needs to be regarded skeptically and needs to be examined closely.

Gary Shaw's "Meat on the Hoof" (St. Martin's Press, New York, 1972) does just that, examining at close range the professional atmosphere of sports at the University. This book, a sort of Pentagon papers of the Longhorn football team, is the first serious major document to microscope the Longhorns.

The reason for this book is evident enough: what institution symbolizes Texas the most, what do most outsiders recognize as Texas? The answers are the Alamo and the Longhorn football team. And the Alamo doesn't collect as large a profit.

Shaw came to the University in 1963 as a star high school lineman from Denton. He recounts the pressures of Texas high school football and the recruiting he received his senior year.

Shaw started off the zealot that most of his teammates were and gradually began to veer from the tough-man image of most of those in his class.

He began to take an interest in his classes and other organizations on campus besides the football team and fought to get out from under his image as a jock.

He was not totally successful and carried what he referred to as the thinking of the athlete several years after his graduation from the University in 1967 with a degree in psychology.

Accuracy Questionable

The accuracy of Shaw's book is questionable. Numerous typos and the fact he spells Frank Erwin's name Irwin tends to dent his credibility. But, on the other hand, George Sauer, a Texas ex who played with the New York Jets, says in his introduction to the book that Shaw's account is basically as he remembers. Sauer takes the time to rip off the Longhorn system, as does Shaw.

Shaw was not exactly a star during his years as a Longhorn. In fact, he wasn't even a front-line player. For that matter, he didn't even letter.

So, the obvious thing to come to mind is that Shaw was merely bitter about not getting to be a star with the 'Horns. And Shaw was as much responsible for this as anyone.

But there are things that do come across amazingly well. For instance, Shaw gives insights into the personality of Darrell Royal. The insights appear accurate from the point of one who has seen Royal at close range. Royal, or Daddy D as Shaw calls him, seems to be basically an aloof, sophisticated and condescending figure.

"He wanted to be Coach of the Year and hobnob with the Governor."

What a fraud," says one player in Shaw's book.

Shaw also takes pretty good swipes at trainer Frank Medina and recounts the My Lai-type brutality of some of his training sessions. Shaw offers a look (whether true I can't say) into a medieval torture dungeon somewhere within the depths of Memorial Stadium and the Longhorn locker room.

Lan Hewlett is not spared, either. Hewlett is the "brain coach," and serves the valuable function of helping athletes get tutors and make out their class schedules.

Running 'em Off

Also offered are looks at the way athletes made it through the classrooms, how tutors wrote term papers, and many ingenious (and useful) cheating methods.

But the most serious charges leveled are those regarding the way Royal treated certain players and their injuries.

Shaw claims that Royal attempted to run off certain inadequate players and make them give up their scholarships. This was done through brutal drills, drills with no legitimate purpose. Also, Hewlett would insist that certain lower-ranked players take courses like chemistry and economics, courses they would flunk and thus have to resign the team and their scholarships.

The injuries of most lower-string players were treated casually, haphazardly. Shaw goes so far as to recount a couple of instances where players' injuries were ignored and, according to Shaw's reports, only through the interest of the players going to a doctor on their own were loss of life or limb avoided. These tales seem almost too fantastic to be true.

This book is a "must-read" not just for Longhorn football fans or anti-Longhorn people.

People interested in the effects of Texas high school football, in the psychology of the athlete, in Moore-Hill dormitory, in Darrell Royal, in living around athletes, in Tejas Club, in the University as it was 10 years ago, in what happens during a game or in football in general should read this book.

It's not the kind of book you send to your parents if they're supporting you and they're real orange-bloods.

It may not even be all true. But at any rate, it is certainly interesting reading.

And it doesn't all deal with the University. It is equally applicable to most of your big football powers.

It backs up a great quote by Elbert Hubbard:

"Football bears the same relation to education that bullfighting does to agriculture."

(Tomorrow: the players react to "Meat on the Hoof.")

Proseminars in History Popular With Students

The Department of History has discovered an increasingly favorable student response to its program of academically challenging undergraduate seminars.

In the last two years, the number of proseminars, all topics under the heading of History 350L, has increased from four to 11.

In the spring, 14 will be offered.

Some of the history department's best-known scholars teach the small classes—men such as Pulitzer Prize-winner William H. Goetzmann, diplomatic historian Robert A. Divine and former Rhodes Scholar Gaines Post Jr.

Subjects that will be offered for the spring semester include Topics in Chicano History, Material Culture in America, history of Witchcraft, The Cold War and Ethnicity and Race in the City.

The classes are deliberately kept to 15 students and emphasize teacher-student dialogue, reading and discussions.

Additional information for students who wish to apply for the seminars during preregistration may be obtained from the department's undergraduate advising center in Garrison Hall 118, open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Environmentalists Save City Arroyo

By BUCK HARVEY
Texan Staff Writer

In Northwest Austin, scattered natural creeks running from a spring lead to Bull Creek. One untouched arroyo is still visible to the public, but if three Sierra Club members had not acted, only private landowners would have been able to see the ground again.

David Riskind, Don Walden and Tom Cowden were the environmentalists who, after seeing Austin housing developments spreading across the natural area in Northwest Hills, acted to save the land for Austin citizens.

"We found out that the city didn't want the land for a park since it was too steep," said Riskind, "and that the developers were forced to plot the area and add the canyons to area homeowners' property."

SO THE concerned threesome, all members of the Sierra Club, talked with the developers David R. Barrow and Bill Milburn, and found nothing but cooperation.

"The developers agreed with us completely about giving the land to the public," Riskind said, "and actually turned out to be the good guys of the whole deal. Milburn donated his land to us and Barrow agreed to later."

A deed has been drawn up to give the land to the Audubon Society. It is expected to be signed by Milburn and made official any day now.

"It would have been a crime to allow the canyons to be broken up and sold," Riskind said. "People could have done whatever they wanted to the land. Fill it up or concrete it. We wanted to leave the land the way it was. To have an urban natural area."

BUT THE three men view the saving of the one canyon as only a fraction of what can be done for the beauty of Austin.

"We wanted to introduce these natural gems so that the city will not continue to grow like cancer," Walden said. "The city has the idea that natural parks have no place in Austin. They want well-manicured parks with swings, baseball diamonds and the like."

"EVENTUALLY WE would like the city to take control of the areas," he said. "It is fine for the Audubon Society to own one, but in the long run it would be much better if the city would take control and form the areas."

The Sierra Club will host a slide show on the canyon area that was saved from construction at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Unitarian Church, 4700 Grover St.

Graduates Reinstate Council

In an attempt to improve lines of communication with the University administration and academic departments, a group of graduate students has reinstated the Graduate Student Council.

The council, initiated last year and later abandoned for lack of interest, will be remodeled this year under new leadership to "confront the problems and issues facing graduate students."

Harlan Cooper, secretary-treasurer, said Monday the council also will "process grievances with graduate students and their departments and the administration."

In its first meeting last month, the group decided as its first goal the eventual exemption of teaching assistants, resident assistants and other part-time employees from contributing to the state Teacher Retirement Plan. Also listed as initial projects were the placing of graduate students on University and departmental policy committees and improvements in the procedures and facilities of University libraries.

Cooper also said the council hoped to study admission policies affecting minority and foreign students.

The council will adopt a constitution when it meets at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Union Building 304-305, and will establish a graduate salary and wage committee, University administration committee and library committee.

Steve Kesler, chairman, and Larry McCullough, vice-chairman, were elected on an interim basis for three months until the council is fully in operation.

Exceptional Values and Tremendous Savings in Every Department

Yes, after 21 years at 2268 Guadalupe, next to the University Co-Op, we have lost our lease — If you've ever moved you know what a chore it can be. We can't move everything into our new store so you have a once in a lifetime opportunity to buy fine jewelry, watches, diamonds, and gifts at exceptionally low prices. To help us move out our inventory we will honor the sale prices at our suburban store in Allandale Village at 5726 Burnet Rd. as well as at our Drag location.

We are not going out of business, we will have a new Drag location, in the same block, in January — Everything we sell is guaranteed to your satisfaction and backed by Sheftall's liberal free service warranties as always —

Excavations Reveal Ancient Culture

By ROLANDO RENE GARCES
(Editor's Note: Rolando Rene Garcés is a University student studying at the Catholic University in Lima, Peru.)

PARACAS, Peru—The Peruvian coastline today is miles and miles of empty desert. A rain falls once every 25 or 50 years, animal life is scarce and vegetation is almost nonexistent.

Yet thousands of years ago, this desert was extensively populated by cultures which planted the seeds of agriculture in the world, laying the basis for the development of one of the few original cultural focal points the world has known.

Peru, along with the Near East, the Indus Valley in India, the Yangtze Valley in China and parts of Mexico, is one of the few truly original cultural centers of the world, believes Dr. Frederic Engel, a French archaeologist who has led extensive excavations in Peru.

All other cultures, Engel said, have derived from these focal points.

The oldest cultural assemblage known in Peru which contains proof of an incipient agriculture is that of Paracas on the southern coast. Here, in 1966, amidst tremendous barren sand dunes, Engel uncovered a village with human remains and cultivated plants which have been dated by radiocarbon at 6,930 years B.C.

In the ancient towns of Chilca and Lurin, on the same southern coast, several well-conserved skeletons and remains of cultivated plants also were found by Engel.

The individuals of a meter and a half (about 5 feet) in stature have been dated in the laboratory at 5,000 years B.C.

Archaeologists doubt strongly that these are the first agricultural civilizations in Peru.

"We have not even begun to explore Peru," said Dr. Josephina Cox, a Peruvian archaeologist from the Universidad Católica, who strongly believes that even earlier civilizations exist but are yet to be found.

These desert cultures revolutionized the eating and dress habits of the modern world, having begun the cultivation of

"I know Austin has been named one of the nation's 14 'most pleasant places to live.' What are the other 13? C.E.

The March 29, 1965, Issue of U.S. News and World Report listed the nation's 14 'most pleasant places to live.' They were: Princeton, N.J.; Santa Barbara, Calif.; Boulder, Colo.; Madison, Wis.; Salem, Ore.; Santa Fe, N.M.; Orlando, Fla.; Austin, Tex.; Lexington, Ky.; Hartford Conn.; Ann Arbor, Mich.; Iowa City, Iowa; Burlington, Ill.; and Palo Alto, Calif. The cities were not ranked, but merely placed into this general category.

Does the "cable" interfere with antenna reception by broadcasting on the wrong channels? J.H.

It should not, if the cable has been installed properly and is in good repair. However, if the cable is broken or not properly installed, there will be a leakage of radiation, which might cause a cable channel to interfere with a local channel. This could cause you to get two stations on channel 4, for example. What also might cause interference is the weather. This complication is in the form of lines across the picture about an eighth of an inch in width.

If you do have this type of interference over a long period of time, contact the cable station. This is important, since the cable subscribers might also be getting the same interference as antenna users.

Who do I contact to have my children join the swim classes at Gregory Gym during the week nights? C.D.

You should contact Dr. Stanley Burnham at 454-2725. He can give you all the information as to cost and times.

Action Line will answer any questions concerning the University or any local or national issues. Address inquiries to Action Line, The Daily Texan, Drawer D, University Station, Austin, Texas, 78712, or bring them to Journalism Building 103. Only initials will be used.

daily horoscope

ARIES: Be concerned with your health today, for you could easily avoid a cold by sensible eating and modified activities.

Taurus: Your stubbornness is, in a sense, a strong point in business partnerships. Be sure, though, that you do not let it hinder your progress.

GEMINI: At the moment you seem to be working toward your own end. Analyze the situation. Are your activities doing justice to everyone?

CANCER: Your sensitivity is indeed what makes you such a nice person to know. However, there are times when people need a swift kick, not sympathy.

LEO: To you it seems as though your career at this point is hit or miss. Actually it is somewhat, but all you can do is roll with the punches.

VIRGO: An active social life is yours today if you let it. Don't neglect your essential duties, though.

LIBRA: Too much of a good thing could be your downfall. Conversely, you have exceptionally creative abilities today. Put them to use.

SCORPIO: People enjoy your help when they need it, but you must first require that they ask. Otherwise, you appear to be meddling.

SAGITTARIUS: Money seems important to you right now, so concentrate on getting it. A Christmas job might be just the answer.

CAPRICORN: Rigid studies may become difficult for you today, but it is something which must be done. Even if studying is not required, do it!

AQUARIUS: Your home will give you a lot of pleasure this evening, so plan to spend some time there. If you must invite friends, have only a few.

PISCES: You may require the friendship of the opposite sex this evening, but at all costs don't force them into it. Manage on your own if necessary.

Teamwork

Cheerleaders Steve Clark and Marsha Pearce yell for the 'Horns at a pep rally. The cheering squad must inspire fans to root for the team, without letting rain or lost eyelashes get in the way.

Cheering Spirits Undampened

By GINGER MORROW
Texan Staff Writer

Drooping eyelashes, being on national television and falling flat on your face or cheering for the wrong team—the thought of having to endure any of these experiences would frighten most laymen but they are common, voluntary occurrences in the life of a University cheerleader.

BETTY SUE Diebel, one of the two alternates among the 12 University cheerleaders, has no misgivings about cheering in the rain. Speaking of this year's Arkansas game, she said that in spite of the rain, "It felt good because it was a big game and everyone in the stands had such good spirit."

Scarlette Boykin feels cheering in the rain "is kind of fun—except when your false eyelashes fall off." She encountered this problem at the Arkansas game and had to resort to going behind one of the band's tubas to try to glue them back into place.

TRYING TO get a crowd to cheer for a team that's losing is another story. One cheerleader feels it is hard to keep the fans yelling—not because they're mad at the team over their performance, but because Texas is so unaccustomed to losing the crowd becomes disappointed and disbelieving.

At one time or another, every cheerleader must suffer some embarrassing moments. The University squad is no exception.

A particularly embarrassing moment for head cheerleader Charles Schwobel and his partner Marsha Pearce came at the Arkansas game when Miss Pearce slipped from Schwobel's grasp and fell to the ground while being filmed by network television cameras.

OCCASIONALLY, people standing between the cheerleaders and the playing teams make it hard for the cheerleaders to see what is taking place on the field. Therefore, they sometimes find themselves cheering for plays made by the opposing team.

Except for Schwobel, all of this year's cheerleaders are experiencing their first fling at being a varsity cheerleader. Being a veteran, Schwobel has seen a change in Texas' cheerleading style.

"Texas' cheering style has always been more mature than other schools I've seen," he said. "We keep the cheers short and simple to increase participation. The more complex a cheer, the more people lost."

"I WAS a nervous wreck," Miss Diebel said in describing her first attempt at leading University fans.

First year cheerleader Dan Ehlinger said that concentrating on what he's doing offsets some of the state fright he would ordinarily feel in front of so large a crowd.

The rewards University cheerleaders receive in return for their physical exertion and emotional expenditures seem small. The special privileges are limited to being able to get their dates good seats at the games. But the cheerleaders feel the crowd's response to their presence is reward enough.

Miss Boykin perhaps best summed things up in saying, "It is the neatest feeling when you're down there and you start yelling and the crowd yells back with you. I think cheerleaders keep the crowd going. They seem to appreciate you."

STAGECOACH

Directed by JOHN FORD
with JOHN WAYNE and CLAIRE TREVOR

"In one superbly expensive gesture, John Ford has swept aside ten years of artifice and talkie compromise and has made a motion picture that sings a song of cinema. It moves, and how beautifully it moves, across the plains of Arizona, skirting the sky-ranching mesas of Monument Valley, beneath the piled-up cloud banks which every photographer dreams about and through all the old-fashioned, but never really out-dated, periods of prairie travel in the scalp-raising seventies, when Geronimo's Apaches were on the warpath." —(NY Times)

DESTINY RIDES AGAIN

Directed by GEORGE MARSHALL
with MARLENE DIETRICH and JAMES STEWART
One of the funniest Westerns ever made, which also served to revitalize Dietrich's sagging career. "A bit of the old West with a good bit of the old Dietrich in it: a tightly written, capably directed show, with perfectly grand supporting performances." —(NY Times)

Symposium Probes Female Stereotypes

By CHARLEEN SEBESTA

Examining the various stereotypes of women and how to avoid them, a University graduate student said Monday night that because women are being stereotyped as dominated by men, it then follows that women are accused of being underhanded, sneaky and catty.

SPEAKING AT the opening session of a three-day campus symposium on women, Judy Smith, graduate student in zoology, told approximately 50 persons in Academic Center 21 that stereotypes come from three sources: the biological idea that women naturally like being dominated by men; the idea of division of labor; and the minority view.

"The idea that women naturally prefer their role in the kitchen is proven wrong by the fact that many cultures have different sex roles," Ms. Smith said. "In some cultures, men dominate; in others, women dominate; and in others, neither dominates."

While admitting there may be a real physical reason for sexual division of labor in subsistence societies, this reason does not hold true in industrial societies, she said.

Presenting the male viewpoint on the stereotyping of women, Alan Pogue warned that stereotyping not only causes barriers between men and women but also causes problems for men because they cannot discuss emotional problems among each other.

"STEREOTYPING of sex roles causes men to express their emotions only through women," he said.

Ms. Smith suggested several alternatives to sex role playing.

One possible alternative is to reverse male-female roles. "Try for one night reversing roles with the man. See what a difference there is in your relationship," she said.

The most viable alternative, Ms. Smith said, is to have a human spectrum instead of having two polar sexes.

The symposium continues Tuesday with a slide presentation, speaker and movie.

Students To Learn Status Of Financial Aid Requests

Students who applied for financial aid before Oct. 1 for the spring semester will be notified about the first week of December as to whether they will receive aid, Ben Stough, assistant director of the Office of Student Financial Aid, said Monday.

Late applicants will probably not be able to get their funds by the time they must pay tuition and fees on Dec. 19, he said.

Students who were awarded financial aid for the entire academic year may receive part of their aid to pay tuition and fees by Dec. 19. Students whose aid requests were rejected "will have to make their own arrangements," Stough added.

The "tuition only" loans will be available at the 100 E. 26th St. office. The limit on these loans is $75; if more is needed, the student will "have to see a counselor here in the office."

The Hinson-H a z l e w o o d borrowers, who will receive their checks by Jan. 6, will be eligible for a delay in fee payment for preregistration.

Scholarship and Education Opportunity Grant (EOG) recipients will receive their money in the form of checks made payable to the University for preregistration fee payment.

Checks for National-Direct Student Loan borrowers will be available to students at the Office of Accounting, Main Building 132, before Dec. 19. Students must be prepared to pay preregistration fees in the accounting office before receiving their checks.

Career Library Relocated

The Career Library of the University Counseling-Psychological Services Center has moved from the West Mall Office Building to Jester Center 115A, Bob Risher, executive assistant of the counseling facility, said Monday.

"We're trying to hit incoming freshmen and transfers so they can have determined majors before they reach their junior and senior year," Risher said.

The Career Library, which functions as a job counseling resource center, offers an extensive basic collection of information relating to careers.

The library also provides information on other on-campus resources, including the Faculty Adviser Referral List and location of placement offices.

The Career Library is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.
