THE INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET AND THE STATE.

THE INTERSCHOLASTIC SPELLING CONTEST.

No one can possibly realize how poorly he spells, or how poorly he pronounces, for that matter, until he has attended one of those Interscholastic spelling matches. Some of those country boys and girls spelled nearly every word in the dictionary, and then longed for other verbal worlds to conquer. The last man to succumb to the onslaught of the orthographical machine gun failed to include the right letters of the alphabet in the right order in the word "oleaginous," and thus failed to take the nice big silver cup back to the folks at home. That little eleven-yearold flaxen-haired girl who weathered the storm until sixteen of her elders had orthographically relinquished their hold on life has our admiration.

DR. SHURTER.

Upon the culmination of the most successful of the University Interscholastic meets, we wish to congratulate Professor E. D. Shurter, the man who has done most to develop the University Interscholastic League, the man who has for six years worked unceasingly in his efforts to extend its usefulness. Dr. Shurter occupies an enviable position. For few indeed there are who have such an opportunity to exert themselves in a manner so directly serviceable to the State.

And not least of the wholesome benefits arising from the work of the league has been the development of a greater sense of self-confidence and selfrespect on the part of hundreds and hundreds of boys and girls by reason of their competition in athletics and oratory. They have been participants in a worth-while activity. They have tried hard to win, whether they won or not. They have determined to win before they quit. The very fact of the opportunity to compete with the strongest competitors in their school, their county, their district, and finally in the State, has made possible an enlargement of the selfrespect of the average pupil, and has broadened him by reason of the competition with other students from many different places.

Furthermore, every one_ of these fifteen thousand boys and girls are better Texans. They know more about their State, its institutions. They are more imbued with the spirit of the State. The whole process has tended to solidify Texas spirit by showing the thousands of public school students that they are a part of a tremendous system, the public school system of Texas, and citizens of a tremendous State.
