

36 Foreign Students Begin UT Orientation

Thirty-six foreign students arrived at UT Sunday for a six-week preview of life in the Southwest. Eleven more are due later this summer.

The group, which has just finished a similar stay in Washington is here for an English Language and Orientation program conducted by the Army and State Departments and the US Office of Education.

The University was chosen as one of twenty centers to present the special program for foreign students to enter United States schools in September and for foreign educators who will return to their schools next fall.

Monday they were given language tests and were taken on a tour of the University by members of Alpha Phi Omega.

The group will be interviewed and given English tests Tuesday. Another tour is scheduled for that afternoon. That night they will attend the free movie in the Open Air Theater.

More tests are scheduled for Wednesday with a tour of the downtown shopping district planned for that afternoon.

Thursday they will receive their course procedure and will be given a bus tour of the city which will include recreational facilities, housing areas, and general environs.

Friday they will begin classes. That night they will be guests at the Friday Frolics in the Texas Union patio.

A supper and open house at Joe Neal's home will be given for them Saturday. Mr. Neal is the University international advisory director and special orientation head.

The students represent Japan, Colombia, Venezuela, Germany, Brazil, Peru, Philippines, Guatemala, Mexico, Bolivia, Iran, Turkey, Nicaragua, and Ceylon.

The men are staying at the Bridgeway and the girls at the Chi Omega sorority house.

The purpose of the program is to give a concentrated course in English, typical and important factors in US life, and to let the visitors judge for themselves how American democracy operates.

Orientation will consist of lectures, movies, tours, and visits to homes, government offices, businesses, farms, and ranches.

Austin Was Hot To Visitors, Too

By JAMES LUSK

The population of Austin gained 36 people to complain about the weather Sunday with the arrival of foreign students on tour of the United States.

Monday afternoon 27 men, sweltering in long-sleeve shirts, and nine girls, some carrying parasols and many with fans, were given a tour of the University and the Drag. Although the weather was very warm, the group stuck to their guide and listened to everything mentioned.

While walking along the Drag, they fired questions at the guides concerning prices of movie tickets, locations of good book stores, the financial plan of the University Co-Op, and a place to go swimming.

It has often been said that women are more curious than men, but the students reversed that decision. One of the students in his window shopping spree found a lawn sprinkler that interested him more than the rest of the tour. Many of the men in suits took great interest in one of the Drag clothing stores, which was conducting a sale on summer shirts.

Even University Sweetheart Mary Esther Haskell was included in their praise when they saw a large color portrait of her in a photo shop. One mentioned that he couldn't see how one girl could be the sweetheart of the many boys on the campus.

The chief question asked but left unanswered was, "If this street is named Guadalupe then why is it called the Drag?"

Their main comment on the stores along the Drag was that prices are cheaper than at any other place they have been.

One Japanese girl, Sumiko Tamura, said she couldn't see how the girls at the University could be so fair complected under the hot Austin sun.

Ana Landaeta, a Venezuelan student, received a nick-name from her group. They began to call her "water fountain" because she stopped at every one to drink.

They toured the Rare Books collection and then went to the top of the Tower. Many compared the Tower with the Washington Monument through which they had toured in Washington.

In the Main Building rotunda, prices again became the topic of conversation. They compared everything from Cokes to magazines. Parting words to the guides were "Everything is so beautiful, but it has been so hot."

Guess What? Still Hot!

The United States Weather Bureau reports continued hot and fair Tuesday and Wednesday. Sunday's temperature ranged from a low of 76 to 100. By 3:45 Monday afternoon the thermometer had climbed to 101.

The couple in the back seat were discussing "The Great Caruso."

He told her: "I saw it twice." She: "Oh, and why did you see it a second time?"

Bored voice from front seat: "Ahhh, his foot went to sleep."

Now circulating the campus is this tidbit about an alleged new soap opera.

The circumstances: a woman wanted to have two bathrooms in the house.

The title: "Wife's Other John."

GOLDEN GIRL

UT Sweetheart Is Miss 'Golden Girl'

Mary Esther Haskell, University Sweetheart, added another title to her growing list of beauty honors Saturday night when she was named "Miss Golden Girl" of Austin Pioneers.

With this title, she also won a vacation for herself and a chaperon at the Flying L, a 17-jewel Banner watch, Kruger's, clothes from friends, a permanent from Tony's Beauty Salon, and several other gifts of merchandise.

As Haskell will compete with contestants from the Big and Texas Leagues at Temple August 6.

The five-foot, two-inch, 110-pound brunette from Austin will go to the Big State League with a long line of beauty honors to her credit.

As a freshman at the University she was selected as one of the Ten Most Beautiful girls for 1950-51.

House Approves Submerged Lands Return

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP)—A margin of well over two to one the House voted Monday to return the ownership of oil-submerged lands seaward for miles, and in some cases to the states.

The bill, which the House acted over to the Senate on July 26 to 109 roll call vote, is similar to legislation which President Truman vetoed in 1946—a bill which Congress failed to pass.

In its action the House decided that the states in their dispute with the federal government have the question of which should own the off-shore submerged lands with their oil wealth.

The brief bill (1) gives title to land seaward three miles for the most part, but ten one-half miles in the case of Alaska which was admitted to the Union under terms specifying that the boundary line; (2) gives ownership of oil and other minerals under this strip of land; (3) gives the federal government power over submerged land to the edge of the continent; (4) the three-mile mark out seaward, or where deep water begins; and (4) gives the federal government the right to execute its policy in this area.

Payne Elected Chairman Of Drama Department

B. Iden Payne, internationally known Shakespearean authority, has been elected chairman of the Department of Drama for 1951-52.

The selection was made after James Moll, departmental chairman, received a Fulbright Fellowship for study in England.

Mouzon Law, instructor in drama, will be assistant to the chairman.

Mr. Payne is teaching Shakespearean drama at San Diego State College and directing two plays in a replica of the Old Globe Theater. This assignment is the most recent of his 52 years in the theater.

Born at Newcastle-in-Tyne, England, he played his first role on the stage at six.

At 10 he became a member of the touring company of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Benson. In "She Stoops to Conquer," he played his first major role. Although a competent actor, his interests turned to directing and with the advent of George Bernard Shaw, a personal friend in later years, Mr. Payne began to direct the progressive plays of that era. His first directing assignment came with a new theater dedicated to producing the efforts of such greats as Shaw, Galsworthy, Massfield, and Stanley Houghton.

At the close of the 1913 season Mr. Payne came to the United States with a group of Americans. From this group, whose productions managed to survive one season's engagements, he joined the Charles Frohman Company. While acting as director, he was associated with John and Ethel Barrymore, Maude Adams, and Otis Skinner, all dramatic lights of the 1920's.

In 1919, Mr. Payne was offered a position on the faculty of Carnegie Tech where he produced Shakespearean plays for fifteen years. After this, Mr. Payne was director of the Shakespearean Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon.

In 1942 he began teaching Shakespearean drama in universities.

Mr. Payne's association with The University of Texas began in 1946 with his appointment as guest professor of drama. Since then he has produced and directed at least one Shakespearean play each year on the campus.

His first presentation, in 1946, was "The Taming of the Shrew." The most recent production, in the spring, was "Much Ado About Nothing." Two years ago he celebrated his fiftieth year in the theater by acting the lead role in Sheridan's "The Critic."

Next spring a Shakespearean production will climax the 1951-52 school year, as in other years.

Dr. Conkle to Publish Play, 'Muletail Prime'

Dr. E. P. Conkle, professor of the field of playwriting, has another success. He has recently had his latest work, "Muletail Prime," published.

The characterizations in the play are supplied by two men: Clyde Cedars, the bartender, and Arlie Askew, the customer. All action takes place in a bar.

Dr. Conkle is one of the foremost authors of satiric comedy of plays are "Sparkin'," "Gold is the Southwest." Included in his "Where You Don't Find It," "Paul and the Blue Ox," "Bill and the Widowmaker," and "The Delectable Judge." Dr. Conkle describes "Muletail Prime" as a robustious folk comedy.

Dr. Conkle came to the University in 1939 as one of the four members of the faculty for the Department of Drama. He received his doctorate from the University of Iowa. In 1945 he was awarded a Rockefeller Fellowship to continue his studies in the field of playwriting. Dr. Conkle is particularly interested in fostering enthusiasm for playwriting among students. In the past a search for new plays, to be produced by the drama students, has been one of his main projects in the University.

"Muletail Prime" may be found in "The Best One-Act Plays of 1950-51," published by Dodd Mead.

Experimental Films Will Be Continued

The Texas Theater will continue to show foreign imports and experimental films.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," the silent cinema having a background of Civil War folk songs, will begin Friday. This old-fashioned version of the world's second-best seller, has all the famous scenes, including Uncle Tom's vision, Little Eva's ascent to heaven, and Eliza's journey across an ice-filled river.

"Seven Day's Till Noon," the story of the search for a scientist who planted a bomb under the House of Lords, is a unique and highly praised British film which will begin next week.

Walt Disney's favorite, "Fantasia," is one the schedule, as is the Italian import, "Teresa," and the Spanish film, "Little Dark Angels."

"Quartet" is being brought back by popular request.

19th Annual Coach Clinic Underway in San Antonio

By JOE MOSBY
Texas Sports Staff

Largest such institution in the world, the 19th annual Texas Coaching School is now in high gear following opening day activities Monday in San Antonio.

Lectures are occupying the mentors' time during the first of the week, but climaxing the clinic will be the North-South All-star football contest on Friday night, with its cage counterpart slated for Saturday evening.

A survey was taken of the members of the South grid crew, with the result showing that the Longhorns are due to latch on to the largest number of the high-schoolers.

Of the 28 players, nine have picked the University, while SMU is slated for five, Rice and Texas A&M three each, North Texas State one, and six are undecided. Baylor and TCU, other Texas members of the Southwest Conference have failed to land any of the stars so far.

Choosing to begin their collegiate careers on the Forty Acres have been end Bob Flinn, Taft; tackles Weldon Ritchie, Cleburne, and Glendon Bushong, Austin; guards Robert Cashion, Mexia, and Don Miller, Port Neches; Center Leighton Younger, Austin; and backs Larry Graham, Houston, Billy Charles Jones, Longview, and Billy Quinn, San Antonio. Miller and Quinn were all-state last fall.

Two of the prep school gridders have been placed on the injured list and one, Dick Van Fleet, is definitely out of the Friday night tangle. Van Fleet's toe was broken at his Austin home when running mate Bushong stepped on his foot. Bushong will replace Van Fleet in the opening line-up.

End Wayne Delaney of Sherman has been under an attack of pleurisy but was okayed for the game by a home-town physician. However, a San Antonio doctor ruled out the North Texas and his participation is still doubtful.

Leading the grid talks is Paul (Bear) Bryant of the University of Kentucky. Bryant's Wildcats tripped the mighty Oklahoma Sooners in the 1951 Sugar Bowl and are picked to be one of the top teams in the nation this year.

Others on the grid platform are Frank Howard of Clemson, who won the Orange Bowl last year (Howard is a single-wing operator while Bryant specializes in the T), Eddie Wojack, Rice trainer who pointed out the fact that none of the schools involved in the cage scandals that have swept the sports world employed train-38-0.

ers, and Carney Leslie, All line coach.

Alex Hooks, Southern Methodist diamond mentor, will lead baseball clinic Wednesday. Forrest Anderson of the ley Braves and Cliff of Tulane will head the basketball menu on Thursday and Friday.

In the 1950 North-South strife, the Southerners, tutor Biggie Munn, clobbered Budkinson's Yankees by a 25-0. Among the standouts in the sle were present-day Long S. M. Meeks and Phil Branc

Never Too Late

Unless a late start makes a fall program unfeasible, the once-successful Great Issues Course as presently set up almost certainly will outdo last fall's inaugural lecture series.

A number of changes have been made, some experimentally and others as a result of apparent flaws in the 1950 system. At any rate, this fall's program bids to become a broader and better show with a more tangible purpose.

Despite its obvious growing pains, Great Issues should prove within a few years to be one of the greatest things that has ever happened in Texas education. Why? Simply because the course demonstrates student push and student willingness to seek knowledge outside the beaten paths.

Slightly more than a month remains of the time allotted for finishing course plans, since the opening lecture has tentatively been scheduled for early October. It would be very desirable if the program could be again held in the fall, the season of fewer conflicts and student activities.

If the tentative program for this fall were to collapse, which is a disturbing yet very evident possibility, it is hoped that student initiative will not slacken but will strive for an even better program in the spring.

Great Issues must remain non-accredited for at least two more years, but it should not be shunted aside because of any temporary setback. It's too good to lose.

Dollar's Worth

University summer entertainment has never been, is not now, and probably never will be on a par with that offered in the fall.

Yet people complain because the big-name speakers, name bands, and theater performers are virtually all brought here during the long session at the exclusion of the summer. True, but considering low enrollment, intensified classroom work, and above all a very bare budget, summer school students are fortunate to have a program as good as the current one.

All things considered, it's a big dollar's worth.

'Top Priority' Draft Tag Hung on Some College Men

By RUSS KERSTEN
Texan Editor

In many places the honeymoon is over for college men trying to get deferred.

At least the American Council on Education, a private organization of influential educators, is getting many letters pointing out that local boards in scattered places "have a bias against college students."

On a Liberty Broadcasting System program, "Youth and the Draft," council staff associate Raymond S. Howes complained that some boards have been classifying collegians I-A immediately eligible for the draft, without considering either their scores on the recent draft quiz or scholastic standing.

In reply, Brig. Gen. Louis H. Renfrow, acting director of Selective Service, said that "arbitrary action by local boards should not be tolerated." The general added that in many instances the action may not be at all discriminatory, and that he has no doubt that the number of such boards is small.

Renfrow slammed hard at "local boards which disregard the recommendations of Selective Service and its advisory board," but almost instantly said "always, the authority of the local board to defer or not to defer a registrant must be preserved."

The general apparently doesn't want anyone to accuse him of taking sides. Anyway, in "arbitrary cases," he recommended appeals to the state board and, if necessary, to the state or national director for reference to the presidential appeals board. He commented that the appeal may be handled either by the registrant or by the college.

Texas draft boards, it is my pleasure as a non-vet to report, seem to be acting in strict compliance with the Selective Service recommendations.

The Texan has heard of no University student "arbitrarily" classified IIA immediately eligible for the draft when the blanket college-student deferment is over August 30. The only kicks come from guys who failed to take the draft classification quiz, and thereby left themselves wide open.

Incidentally, Selective Service headquarters in Washington has released data on the draft exams showing that only 380,000 of the eligible 1,059,000 male college students enrolled in the spring took the test.

Capt. Boyd Sinclair, aide to State Selective Service Director Gen. Paul Wakefield, said Monday that he believes Texas draft boards are following official recommendations whenever possible. He added that at this early date, before all test scores are distributed, it's impossible to predict what the trend will be in the fall.

One of the most expensive souvenirs of all time has turned up in Pueblo, Colorado, and the Koreans from whom it was "liberated" want it back.

The item: an ornate leopard-skin rug of about nineteen by eight feet, worth around $100,000. It was sent home by a U.S. Army Sergeant, who picked it up in Seoul while reconnoitering.

The Korean Consul General in New York says the rare rug is worth about "$100,000, if such a priceless national treasure can have a price tag."

He added, with remarkable sweetness of disposition, that "we wouldn't want to cause anyone trouble, but that is a very odd souvenir for a soldier to send home. We will make inquiries."

The soldier's mother, recipient of the surprise package, said that she didn't know what to do with it and it's for sale to the highest bidder.

A Louisiana bus driver who just finished an accident-less 1,500,000 driven miles advances his two-point program for safety: have faith and a cheerful outlook and never take unnecessary chances. Fine philosophy, but the little man would probably be a goner in Austin.

'Eyes' Misused

To the Editor:

(Ed. note—This is a copy of a letter sent to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios by the Eyes of Texas Copyright Committee.)

As Chairman of the "Eyes of Texas" Copyright Committee, it is my duty to inform you of the agitation and consternation caused among the whole University of Texas family by your use of the "Eyes of Texas" in your recent release "Go for Broke."

The University of Texas Students' Association owns the copyright to the lyrics and music when used together, to the lyrics alone and to the title and music when used together. In the picture, "Go for Broke," the words and music were used under circumstances which certainly reflect no credit of the University or on the student body.

No request was ever received and no permission was granted for the use of the song under the copyright. Under no circumstances would the permission have been granted for use in the manner in which it was employed in the picture.

Student indignation and ex-student agitation is very high.

It is the belief of the Copyright Committee that if these facts were brought to the attention of MGM executives they would be willing to take steps necessary to remedy the situation in every respect. This misuse of the "Eyes of Texas" if allowed to go unchallenged will no doubt open the door to other abuses. The "Eyes of Texas" Copyright Committee of the Students' Association is prepared to take any and all necessary steps to insure proper respect for the "Eyes of Texas," to rectify the misuse in "Go for Broke," and generally to prevent the recurrence of any infringement of this type.

I would appreciate an immediate reply.

Ellis F. Morris, Chairman
"Eyes of Texas"
Copyright Committee

English? Nuts

To the Editor:

It is clear that English is not so hard a language to make the percentage of flunking students rise up to 30 per cent. But I am now convinced after being two years in this University that the students no longer care about English, they like to know less, because of some instructors put to teach. The instructors might know it, but they do not know how to teach it.

Taking a course in English to learn how to write a book or engineering report, you'd be asked to write about how to "saddle a horse." . . .

New Vault Ousts Olle From UT Ticket Office

Ed Olle, business manager and assistant athletic director of intercollegiate athletics, looks very happy for a man who has just lost his office.

When the University decided to install a vault to keep tickets to Longhorn football games, Mr. Olle's office in Gregory Gym was chosen as the spot. Now the vault is completed, even to the air conditioning, and Mr. Olle is out in the ticket office. But he isn't irked. In fact, the vault so facilitates the sales that in seconds available tickets may be found to any game.
