

Eulogy for Vera Harper

March 30, 1994

Goodness--it can be an adjective or a noun. Relative to Vera, she was pure goodness and her goodness was pure. The least static physical part of her was her heart. It was constantly expanding. There was no limit to her commitment to care for others.

Oh yes, many times she exasperated me. Why? She would involve in one cause after another. It did not matter to her that I had plenty of my own. Any person in need became her personal responsibility.

Kids are truly the best judge of people. My two granddaughters, Abby and Emily, loved her. When they came to visit, Vera would set up a special desk for each of them. She crocheted them sweaters and small blankets--all as if she did not have anything else to do--nothing, that is, except work for the most unreasonable guy ever. Well, you would think that all I have related that she would have run out of time.

No!!! She had time--lots of it for her church and favorite of all was teaching Sunday School class.

Well, how do you describe someone like Vera? I know I really can't except to end as I began--she was a good person and she will be missed.

Albert Einstein said, "Only a life lived for others is a life worth while."
