Curator, U. S. National Museum
Washington, D. C.

Dear Doctor Cooper:

I had written sometime ago to Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president, George Washington University, and made a formal application for a position in the Geology Department. His administrative secretary, Myrna Sedgwick, answered on June 5 as follows:

"President Marvin has asked me to thank you for your inquiry concerning a teaching position at The George Washington University.

Although at the present time we know of no vacancy in the department of geology, we shall be glad to keep your application in mind."

Has there been some kind of misunderstanding? If you can find out about this matter without disturbing anyone, I would appreciate it greatly.

With many thanks and appreciation of your interest..

Sincerely yours,

H. B. Stenzel
