Dear Miss Kober:

I know that you are already working on a review of Hrozný for LANGUAGE, and I suspect that after your illness (if that is, as I hope, a thing of the past) you may not feel like taking on another job on top of that one. But I have just received a book that seems to be right up your alley, and unless you protest with considerable vigor I should like to send it to you. It is Le déchiffrement des inscriptions minoennes. By Vladimir Georgiev. (Annuaire de l'Université de Sofia: Faculté historico-philologique, Tome 45 [1948/49], Livre 4, Linguistique et littérature.) Pp. 81. Sofia: Düržavno Izdatelstvo "Nauka i Izkustvo", 1949.

Does this tempt you at all? If you are willing, I should be very happy to have a review of it for LANGUAGE. You can either postpone the review until after you have finished the Hrozný, or do it at the same time, or--if it seems appropriate to you--treat the two books in a single review. Please let me know whether I may send you the book.

Sincerely yours,

Bernard Bloch
