Dear Doc,

Sutton has just called and told me something of what has happened in your department. He knew none of the details, but I asked him to visit with you.

I have just made plans to go to New Orleans on Monday, November 26, and will come on over to Houston later in the week. At that time I should like to visit with you and learn all of the circumstances. If I can help in any way by talking with the Dean or President, I will of course be most happy to do so. If there is no hope for that situation there and your position is untenable, I think we should talk about the alternatives. As you know, I would like very much to have more of your time and I am sure, if you would like to go that route, we can work something out that will be mutually satisfactory. I don't know what your feeling is so I don't know what to suggest at this time, but thought that I should let you know so that you can be thinking about what you would like to do before we talk. However, I suggest you say nothing and stay hitched until we can talk the thing out.

I know you must feel very badly but everyone that really counts will understand what you were trying to do and the problems that you must have faced in working toward its accomplishment.

Sincerely,

Mac.
