Dear Henryk:

Re yours of Feb. 9, 1962.

Enclosed is the translation of the more important of the two short papers, ^{published} in the Doklady. The second of these two is also translated partly, both translations made in the bus on my way to and from Norman. They seem to be readable, though ragged. I am getting a better grasp of the peculiarities of the fossil oysters and their descriptions by Vyalov, and so may accelerate the designed translations. The larger Vyalov's monograph of 1948, with its 84 pages will probably take ~~be~~ a month of steady work, with approximately four pages a day. Hence it seems best not to send me the newly received 53 p. monograph until I request it, perhaps by the end of March, when I shall be on my way to the AAPG meeting at San Francisco.

Congratulations on your landing of an interesting teaching job at the Rice. I hope Brown will treat you decently and gently. He better... Helen and I are reasonably well, she is in better fix than I, as I have to watch my stomach closely. With best regards to you and your good daughter

Max
