

Dear Mr. Stenzel,

I would have answered your interesting letter much sooner, but I have been in London most of November with Nancy Grace. I have been working in the British Museum and in the old newspapers at Colindale, - and of course, doing some shopping and reading going with Nancy Grace when she has not been perusing fossils. She does appreciate the help you have given her very much, - as I am sure that she has told you. I am looking forward to having her with me here when we return, and you must be well noted. We can have some fine talks.

You are wonderful to keep up with your students and to give them encouragement. The reason that I hang on at a place like the U. of W. is that there are always a few good students who deserve better than they usually get there. Your class will be very full and never congested for you.

I am afraid that Mr. Currie is not employed and not happy. I heard indirectly that he is in Austin and is still quite upset. I would like to have a fine man like Currie on my conscience.

Nancy is distressed over our market failure. She agrees with you that our scientific education must be more realistic. Further, we all agree, I am sure, that there should be less politics in American atomic research. The Danwell men have been nagging him about "Kopitnick," but quite Good Naturedly. Of course, they would much rather that we succeed than the Russians.

Our White House is the same. Since we have been it, we have been to Overbury - with many success - and seen the immense stores and the high artificial hill there. Even though Clue is only a little more than fine, he is getting a great deal from his experiences here.

I am glad that Sonya and Vera are happy and busy.
Many small boys that they are splendid girls. I know that they are.

Paul Freeman and their marriage now. I suppose that he was judged insane.

Henry and Clue join me in wishing you and his girls a fine Christmas and a splendid New Year. We will see you in late January. Affectionately, Anne
